LOUISIANA RED CYPRESS

"The Wood that Won't Rot"

Described by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.

"Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our Greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has all rotted out. We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years, while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve years. We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose. BASSETT & WASHBURN."

Ask your dealer for Louisiana Red Cypress and if he hasn't got it, get him to write us, or write us yourself.

MAKING MONEY

Every man in business wants to make money—you do, we do and so do our neighbors. If there is no chance to make money in a business you will have no competitors.

The florist who wants to make money, and that includes all of them, should build greenhouses that produce profits, as well as stock.

If you have never really, thoroughly looked into the details of the Cypress Greenhouse that we are selling, you ought to.

No trouble for us to take the matter up any time, but now is the time to buy.

Get one of our Catalogs today.

If you are NOT DESIROUS OF SAVING MONEY when building

NOTE what the oldest florists in the City of Chicago have to say about our construction.

CAN YOU speak likewise of your wooden construction?

IF NOT, why are you again contemplating using wooden gutters in your new houses?

BECAUSE you have not written us for our prices, and are therefore of the opinion that our semi-iron house is much more expensive.

This idea is entirely wrong. Although we do not claim to be able to sell you one of our semi-iron houses for less than you can buy an all cypress house, still we do claim that the extra light, saving of crops from drip, non-breakage of glass, quickness in disposing of snow off roof of house and last but not least, that they will last indefinitely, and will not have to be replaced within 12 years, will more than compensate the small extra cost.

G. M. Garland Co.,

Des Plaines, Ill.

Dear Sirs:-

We are in receipt of your communication of the 21st, asking us in regard to the gutters we purchased from you about 15 years ago. I believe these are some of the first gutters that were cast by your company, and I wish to say that some of the houses in which these gutters were used have been torn down and rebuilt and larger houses constructed, using the same gutters, for the gutters are just as good as they were 15 years ago. Iron gutters will last a life-time, and our experience with iron gutters has been very satisfactory. We feel sure that when once a person has used them, he never will go back to the old, wooden gutters again.

Very truly yours,

THE GEO. WITTBOLD CO.

A Word of Explanation to the Florist

Because we have talked so long and strong on our Semi-iron House, some growers have the impression that we don't care to sell all cypress materials—but that's a great mistake, for we are in the business to sell a man what he wants—and if he wants all cypress materi we have the goods. The Semi-iron House, however, is a better investment, so we have dwelt on it, because we know it is the best investment.

Look on pages 17, 18, 19, 20 and 21 of our Handy Hand Book for our Red Gulf, Sap Free Cypress Materials. If you haven't already received a Handy Hand Book, send for it.

PROSPEROUS YEAR BEFORE THE TRADE

THE CONSENSUS OF OPINION IS THAT ALL FLORISTS SHOULD PROSPER THIS YEAR.

PROSPERITY is rampant in the West, and no wonder, for the farms and the mines are both mostly in the West. The soil gave to the people of this country in 1908, $7,778,000,000 of new agricultural wealth and nearly $2,000,000,000 of new mineral wealth—to be spent, either at first or at later hand, in 1909. The florists of the West "did not know there was a panic," to use their own expression, and those of the East report the clouds of depression rolling away, though not as rapidly as would be liked in some manufacturing centers. It is apparent from the following extracts from letters recently received by the REVIEW that the depression of 1908 was most felt in the East, especially the cities and manufacturing towns. Here is what some florists say:

Alabama.

MOBILE.—Money was a little scarce last year and an unusually large proportion of business was done on a credit basis. We have good hopes, however, of a first-class spring trade.—MINGE FLORAL CO.

BIRMINGHAM.—The outlook for 1909 is all that could be desired. The bad effects of the general business depression, which were still noticeable last fall, seem to have disappeared since then.—WILLIAM M. LINDSAY.

MONTGOMERY.—We believe that prospects are excellent, and we have showed our faith in the future by moving into a new store, where we will have much more space and much better facilities for business.—W. B. PATERSON.

Arkansas.

LITTLE ROCK.—We consider the outlook good. The business depression does not trouble us.—J. W. VESTAL & SON.

California.

SANTA CRUZ.—The future looks exceedingly bright. As to whether the effects of the panic were helpful or hurtful to the holiday trade, I don't know. Something helped, for trade was certainly lively.—W. E. KING.

Colorado.

COLORADO SPRINGS.—We feel no effect of last year's panic.—FRANK HAYDEN.

BOULDER.—Prospects never were better than now, though the effects of the general depression were noticeable as late as last fall.—CHARLES F. FAWCETT.

Connecticut.

GREENWICH.—The outlook for spring trade is good, though we may not yet have fully recovered from the effects of the financial trouble.—MACMILLEN & CO.

NEW BRITAIN.—Still feel a little effect of the off year and don't feel quite certain of 1909.—CARL LORENSEN.

NEW LONDON.—We expect to do a larger business here in 1909 than ever before. The panic made cut flowers a little less profitable here, but apparently did not affect plant sales.—EDWARD SMITH.

Delaware.

WILMINGTON.—Prospects are good; effects of last year's troubles have worn off and people are buying more expensive stock than ever.—H. P. POTTER.

Georgia.

SAVANNAH.—The business situation looks good to us now. Last year's let-up seems to have been helpful to us lately, rather than harmful.—JOHN WOLF.

SAVANNAH.—The only way this section felt last year's troubles was in slow collections; sales kept up. As to 1909, we can't say, only hope for the best.—A. C. OELSCHIG & SONS.

Idaho.

POST FALLS.—The business is just fairly beginning to develop in this part of the country.—W. S. VAN DORN.

BOISE.—Last year's panic seems to have caused some decrease in this season's plant sales, but it did not harm the cut flower trade here. Prospects are good for the spring.—BOISE FLORAL CO.

Illinois.

ROCKFORD.—The outlook for 1909 is good indeed. The effects of the financial disturbance have been imperceptible here of late.—J. J. SOPER.

AURORA.—The prospects for the coming season look good to me. Last year's panic, though it probably caused us some loss of trade, was not as bad as expected.—JOSEPH M. SMELY.

BLOOMINGTON.—The outlook for business is good. This is largely a farming community, and though crops last year were not large, the prices were high enough to compensate for the lack of quantity.—A. WASHBURN & SONS.

PEORIA.—Stock is looking fine and prospects are bright for a fine supply of flowers. There is reason to expect a good trade for the balance of the season.—C. LOVERIDGE.

JOLIET.—It is a little early to make predictions for 1909, but we know of nothing to prevent our having a prosperous year.—ALBERT C. ROTT.

AURORA.—Business up to date has been unusually prosperous, but it is a little early to make a forecast of the coming season—AURORA GREENHOUSE CO.

Indiana.

MARION.—The prospect is good; business increasing every year.—MARION FLORAL CO.

KOKOMO.—Every line of business is improving in our vicinity and this gives good promise for the future.—WALTER W. COLES.

GOSHEN.—The outlook is fair. People here have not really been much affected by the troubles elsewhere, but are still a little scared.—COLONIAL FLOWER SHOP.

LA FAYETTE.—Orders are coming in fast and the future looks bright. The panic was helpful to us rather than injurious, as it led to the purchase of flowers at Christmas by many who would otherwise have bought something more costly.—F. DORNER & SONS CO.

Iowa.

BURLINGTON.—We don't feel any effect of slow business; it has been good right along.—JOSEPH BOCK.

MARSHALLTOWN.—The money troubles were only slightly felt and prospects now are better than ever.—WILLIAM H. FORD.

OSKALOOSA.—The flower-buying habit is growing and betokens an increase of business in 1909.—KEMBLE FLORAL CO.

DUBUQUE.—The prospect for spring looks good at present. The financial stringency was felt here little, if at all.—W. A. HARKETT.

FORT MADISON.—The outlook is good. The effects of the money shortage were noticeable early in 1908, but did not harm holiday trade.—J. M. AUGE.

DAVENPORT.—We think that prospects now are fair. Though the panic may have caused some injury to our trade as late in the year as October and November, it seemed to have just the opposite effect on our holiday business.—BILLS FLORAL CO.

Kansas.

HUTCHINSON.—Business is all right in Kansas, better every year.—JOHN STAMM.

LEAVENWORTH.—Spring prospects are excellent. The panic did not trouble us.—J. E. MEINHART.

TOPEKA.—As far as we can see, the outlook is good. We never felt the panic in Kansas.—JAMES HAYES.

WICHITA.—We have not been able to trace any of our trade conditions, either good or bad, to last year's panic. The panic affected the florists of this vicinity only indirectly. We consider the outlook as good as usual, which means a fairly healthy increase over the trade of the previous season.—W. H. CULP & CO.

Kentucky.

HOPKINSVILLE.—I think the prospect is fair.—T. L. METCALFE.

WINCHESTER.—The outlook for 1909 is the best ever and we are planning to build more houses. It seems hardly possible that last year's panic could have affected us, since business showed a large increase.—Shearer The Florist.

Paducah.—We still feel a little effect of the hard times.—C. L. Brunson & Co.

Mt. Sterling.—The outlook is fine. We all look for a big plant trade this spring.—Emil Fredrich.

Bowling Green.—We are not molested by the financial flurry and there is a splendid prospect for spring business.—Burdell Floral Co.

Maine.

Waterville.—We still feel the effects of last year's troubles; the outlook is not bright in Maine.—Mitchell & Co.

Portland.—Though the effects of the hard times were felt till late in 1908, florists here are all expecting a good spring season.—L. C. Goddard.

Lewiston.—We are now looking forward to a heavy spring trade, though business last fall was quiet and collections rather slow.—Ernest Saunders.

Maryland.

Frederick.—The outlook is not particularly encouraging. The panic had the effect, I think, of limiting the demand to the less expensive grades of stock.—Henry Trail.

Cumberland.—Prospects for spring are excellent. On account of the financial stress, the people seem to have economized during the early part of 1908, with the result that they spent more than ever at the close of the year.—John A. Bopp.

Massachusetts.

Holyoke.—Business conditions look prosperous now and we expect a big year.—Gallivan Bros.

Lynn.—We still feel a little effect of last year's panic; it hurt some at Christmas, but the outlook is good.—Gibbs Bros.

Newton.—Last year's panic did not seem to have any effect on this season's holiday trade. Prospects for spring are good.—John Irving.

Michigan.

Sault Ste. Marie.—We look for a better trade in the spring than a year ago; at least, we are working to that end.—William F. Weber.

Kalamazoo.—The outlook is exceedingly bright. Last year's panic, if felt at all, must have been helpful this fall, for business recently has been enormous.—G. Van Bochove & Bro.

Minnesota.

Albert Lea.—We did not notice any difference in business; it's increasing each year.—Lake Shore Greenhouses.

Owatonna.—Business has been good right along. We feel no effects of any panic. Can see nothing but the usual good business ahead.—Clinton Falls Nursery Co.

Mississippi.

Jackson.—Prospects are bright. I am putting in large quantities of outdoor plants and hope to keep up with the procession if it does not move too fast.—W. J. Brown.

Missouri.

Springfield.—Trade is steady; we feel no effect of the slow business complained of in some places.—W. A. Chalfant.

Nebraska.

Beatrice.—We didn't know we had a panic. It was not felt here. The prospects for the spring season are fair.—Dole Floral Co.

Fremont.—Prospects were never better for us and we look for a record-breaking trade in all lines. The panic to us was a joke. With a good farming country, big crops, good prices and plenty of work to be had, business never wavered.—C. H. Green.

Lincoln.—We in Nebraska have not felt the panic to any great extent, as ours is an agricultural state and we had good crops and high prices. The outlook for the spring is quite promising. Growers in this vicinity have a good supply of fine stock.—C. H. Frey.

New Hampshire.

Concord.—Business seems to have a push behind it that bespeaks a prosperous season in 1909.—G. J. Benedict.

Nashua.—We did a good business last year, and it is evident that flowers were purchased at the holidays by many people who were formerly in the habit of buying more expensive gifts. As to the outlook for the future—well, everything depends on Wall street.—August Gaedeke & Co.

New Jersey.

Hoboken.—We don't feel any effect now of last year's business setback.—M. Hendberg.

Paterson.—It is an encouraging circumstance that trade here has been good among the florists, in spite of the fact that many men have been thrown out of employment by the closing of shops and mills.—Edward Sceery.

New York.

Elmira.—A good many people are still out of work.—H. N. Hoffman.

Troy.—We have good prospects for spring trade and no longer feel any effects of the panic.—Sambrook Bros.

Watertown.—We can still feel the effect of last year's troubles, but the outlook for spring trade is good.—W. A. Clark & Son.

Saratoga Springs.—We can still feel the effects of last year's slump—you bet it hurt. The spring season will be better than last year, but it's hard telling what the outlook is.—T. J. Totten.

North Dakota.

Fargo.—We don't know anything about slow business out this way.—Shotwell Floral Co.

Grand Forks.—We think last year's panic had a decided effect on business. Trade would have been much better if the panic had not taught the people to cultivate the habit of economy. The future outlook, however, is encouraging, for crops were good.—Wickler Floral Co.

Ohio.

Zanesville.—Think prospects are very fine.—John D. Imlay.

Sandusky.—The outlook seems to us to be extremely favorable.—Central Greenhouses.

Akron.—There are prospects of a better spring trade than ever before. We feel no effect of last year's depression.—J. R. Norton.

Alliance.—We feel no effects of the so-called hard times; prospects are good.—J. F. Zimmerman.

Canton.—Don't see any reason why we shouldn't do as well as we ever did, in 1909.—Chas. Lindacher.

Oklahoma.

Oklahoma City.—Conditions seem to be favorable for good business during the remainder of the season.—C. W. Stiles.

Enid.—Did we feel last year's panic? Not in the least. The people of the southwest deny there was a panic and are flashing big bills.—Cowan Floral Gardens.

Pennsylvania.

Harrisburg.—We certainly felt the effects of last year's panic, but the prospects look fair now.—Paxton Greenhouses.

Allentown.—It's hard to say what the spring business will be. We don't feel last year's depression much now.—J. F. Horn & Bro.

KAISER'S MARYLAND PLANT.

Rudolph Kaiser does business at Annapolis, Md., the larger part of his patronage coming from the naval academy there, and from the well-to-do people whom it attracts to the city. At his store, 104 College avenue, he has a large palm house, but his range of glass is at West Annapolis, as shown in the accompanying illustration. Here he has 12,000 feet of glass in five well built greenhouses, where he grows plants and cut flowers for his retail trade, making a specialty of violets, roses, carnations and mums. He also has several acres of land, on which he grows outdoor flowers in the summer and also vegetables and fruits. Adjoining the greenhouses is a substantial residence for the foreman in charge of operations there.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

WHY MUM BLOOMS DAMPEN.

Speaking of the damping of blooms of chrysanthemums, which caused great loss to growers in the eastern part of the United States last autumn, W. J. Godfrey, the widely known English grower, says:

"This has been unusually prevalent in England during the past season, and the loss of promising blooms has been sorely felt by many growers. No one has propounded a remedy, all growers taking it for granted that the trouble arises from one of two causes: overfeeding or the soft growth caused by the moist conditions of the atmosphere which followed the heat and drought of the summer. The peculiar point of this theory is that the late blooms, which are produced on the softest growth, are less liable to suffer than the earlier ones, which are generally produced on the ripest and hardest wood. That an excess of manure will cause loss of blooms is beyond dispute, but this season plants which received no manure lost many of the most promising blooms.

"Experience has taught me that the trouble is the result of leaving on too much air at night. In the earlier part of the season, especially if the weather is hot and sunny by day, the night atmosphere is damp and murky. With this in mind, many growers open the top ventilators wide, the theory being that, by giving a slight heat by means of the hot water pipes, the damp air is expelled; whereas, the dry, hot air, being the lightest, is allowed to escape, to be replaced with other which is cold and damp, and it is this which causes the damage. Later on, the nights being colder and at the same time drier, the houses are kept closer, and damping is almost forgotten."

BEST EARLY VARIETIES.

Please advise me what varieties of mums you consider best as early white, pink and yellow, with good blooms, and not more than five feet tall. When is the best time to procure rooted cuttings for early bench culture? What is the best care for same before the time for planting the bench? How far apart should they be planted on the bench, and when? E. A. M.

The kinds I would recommend for early use are as follows:

White—October Frost, Polly Rose, White Cloud.

Pink—Pacific, Rosiere, Mrs. Coombs.

Yellow — Golden Glow, Monrovia, Crocus.

These will flower in the order named and will turn in more money than any other kind a man can grow. White Cloud and Golden Glow are comparatively new, but they have won a place for themselves on their merits. The latter variety can be got in from September 1 if desired.

Rosiere, in the pinks, is thin and not very satisfactory, but its earliness, when pinks are very scarce, makes it valuable.

The tallest growers are Rosiere, October Frost and White Cloud, so E. A. M. should figure on giving them the position where they can get the most headroom.

Good stock for early flowers should be rooted in February and March, and kept growing along as cool as possible, till they can be planted out in May or early June. The coldframe during April is as good a place as can be found. Stock is rooted in May and June, I know, but no grower should leave his early varieties till so late and then expect good results. To get a reasonable length of stem, be ready to plant out sturdy young plants in May, particularly so with Pacific and Polly Rose, as they are slow-growing.

The distance apart to plant is governed somewhat by the quality of the flowers that it is desired to obtain. For the finest grade 8x6 is as close as it is possible to plant single stemmed plants. This is for a quality that wholesales from 25 to 50 cents each. If E. A. M. figures on a cheaper grade of goods he can take up two or more shoots from his plant, but personally I always believe in letting the other fellow grow the cheap stuff.

E. A. M. understands, I presume, that he must take his buds in good season and not wait for terminals. Thus it is safe to take buds on Golden Glow or Monrovia after July 15, or the others early in August. One cannot cut flowers in September or early October if one waits for the September buds.

SALTFORD'S NARROW STORE.

One of the interesting features of the accompanying illustration is the demonstration of what may be done in the way of attractive arrangement for a flower store in a long, narrow room. The photograph, of course, shows the store in holiday attire, but the room presents little difference in general appearance at any season. It will be noted that at the back of the store a stairway at the right leads up to the conservatory on the roof. One of the interesting points to the average retailer who does business in a fairly prosperous community, is the display made of requisites. They are not put away in some store-room, but are attractively arranged in the most conspicuous places in the store. The case of fern dishes of various styles, and the collection of small Russian brass plant receptacles, make many a sale which would be lost if the receptacles were less conspicuously displayed. The office and work-room are at the rear of the store.

POTS AND POTTING.

Cleaning and Storing Pots.

Under the bench is about the poorest place that can be found for storing empty flower pots when not in use, but nevertheless it is the only place ever considered or used by most growers. When wanted, the pots are full of vermin, moldy and foul smelling, usually well soaked with moisture and unfit to handle, to say nothing of putting plants into them and expecting the plants to be healthy.

If hard pieces of the previous soil are sticking to the inside, they will tear the ball of soil to pieces when trying to knock out the next plants that are grown in them. This old soil will not soak off and become a part of the fresh soil put into the pot; instead, it sticks to the pot like cement.

The best way to keep pots is to have bins or stalls made in a row in the shed, and, after being used once or not more than twice, they should be washed as carefully as the kitchen cooking utensils. Plants are just as particular about having clean dishes as people are. They will not do well in old, sour, filthy pots. After the pots are washed or before they are used, they should be thoroughly dried out. In summer this is easy enough, but in winter they must be placed on the boiler or over hot pipes.

If there is no other convenient place than under the benches, the pots should at least be thoroughly washed, inside and out, the inside being the more particular part.

Advantage of Having Them Dry.

A dry pot has a great advantage over a wet one by being able to draw much moisture from the soil at the first watering after potting into them. This is beneficial, because plants just transplanted are slightly shocked, stop growing somewhat, and do not require as much water, so they are easily overwatered. All plants root better in a comparatively dry soil than in a wet one. Many growers soak new pots before potting into them, which is in most cases a mistake. I like to have them very dry; then, after potting, they can be given a heavy watering, sure to reach clear down, and can be watered again the next day without any worry about overwatering. Still, if soaked well, there need be no fear but that they get enough.

New pots always grow better plants than old ones, even if the older ones are well washed and dried, and these, in turn, will grow better stuff than the foul, dirty ones. If anyone does not believe it, let him try it on one large batch of plants divided into three parts, all the same and potted the same day, and placed on the same bench, etc. It will be a lesson not to be forgotten. The importance of cleanliness in all work about the greenhouses cannot be emphasized too strongly.

SWEET PEAS.

As the days perceptibly lengthen, so does the cold strengthen. The increasing amount of sunlight, however, already improves the appearance of the early sweet peas. The stems are now stronger, haulm more vigorous and flowers finer than at Christmas. A month hence they will be even better.

Where the plants have been flowering since the end of October, a little feeding will now prove helpful. This may be either bone meal or fine sheep manure, which can be broadcasted over the surface of the beds, which should then have a light forking over before water is applied. Be sure to keep all seed pods removed, also any dead haulms. Tying up will need constant attention, for it never pays to have bent or twisted stems. Give the flowering plants 48 to 50 degrees at night, which can be advanced 15 degrees on bright days. On dull days 55 to 58 degrees is sufficiently high.

Keep a sharp lookout for mildew. Dust the steam pipes with sulphur on its appearance and carefully avoid cold drafts, which usually cause the trouble. Red spider is the worst of all foes and once it gets a foothold is hard to eradicate. A spray nozzle and sixty pounds pressure is probably the best way to combat it. In fumigating, if you use tobacco stems, remember that the odor hangs to the flowers a long time and renders them practically unsalable. Better use some other fumigant, the odor from which passes away more speedily.

Recently sown seeds come in useful now for running up the posts in carnation and other houses of suitable temperature. For present sowing, it is not necessary to rely on the regular forcing kinds. Such sorts as Countess Spencer, Gladys Unwin, Dorothy Eckford, Miss Willmott, Helen Pierce, John Ingman and Frank Dolby are all suitable. Start either in flats of sandy loam, or in small pots containing two or three seeds each.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

A Letter From President Valentine.

To each member of the S. A. F. I send greeting and best wishes for the new year.

This is to be an important year for the florists. The tariff is to be revised and you are all interested in the result. In addition to that, it is necessary to follow up the work which has previously been inaugurated in the way of securing equitable rates from express and railroad companies, and the recognition of just claims presented against them. It is evident that a society that is strong numerically and financially can do more for its members than a weak one can, and I appeal both to your loyalty and to your self-interest when I ask you to at once assist in securing additional members. There are about 9,000 florists' establishments of all kinds in this country and our society has a total membership of 900, so that each member might find it possible to secure nine new members.

Of course we can hardly expect such results, but it is not too much to expect that each member will get at least one new member, and thus quickly double our membership. No florist can consistently say you "Nay," for there is not one of them whose business importance has not been increased by the fact that for over twenty years our society has been consistently working to promote the calling in which he is engaged. If any men could afford to stay out of the society it would be the big concerns, whose financial strength and whose volume of business would entitle them to a respectful hearing from any corporations with which they do business. But these very concerns are the ones you are certain to find enrolled on the books of our society. May it not be that some portion of their success is due to having associated with other bright men at our conventions, and to the added enthusiasm bound to come from contact with successful men in the same line of work?

To my mind, the annual report which is mailed to each member is of great value. It contains a complete list of the members, with their addresses, and to those who do not have a regular directory of the florists of the country it furnishes names of florists in nearly all the states. This list contains the live, progressive men, with whom it pays to do business.

If you had to send an order to be filled in a town where there were two florists and you knew nothing of either except that one belonged to the S. A. F. and the other did not, would it take you long to decide as to which one you would take a chance on? Is not that point alone enough to bring the retailers into the fold?

We hope that the tariff and transportation committee will be such diplomats that they will secure just what they want from Congress and that the express companies will concede all the things that can reasonably be asked of them.

But if a strong navy is a guarantee of peace to a nation, we may well assume that a strong membership and a full treasury will be our best reliance in securing the remedies we seek.

When the next annual report is published it will show how many new membership fees have been sent in by each old member. Let your name be prominent among these active workers for the good of the society.

So I urge upon you to at once go to work and secure new members—not next month, but now—and thus render to the society the loyal service it has a right to expect from you; at the same time making your membership more valuable to yourself.

Yours for a larger and more powerful society, J. A. VALENTINE, Pres.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Calceolarias.

Calceolarias do not naturally flower until the last of April or early part of May. They are now making satisfactory growth, the cool weather and absence of strong sunlight being much to their liking. Growth being now quite rapid, it is necessary to spread out the plants at least once a week. Elevate some of the stronger specimens on pots. The foliage is somewhat brittle and careful handling is required to keep it from being broken.

On no account allow the pots to become matted with roots before giving them the final shift, or the plants will disappoint you. While nice little stock can be flowered in 6-inch pots, those two inches larger will give much finer plants. For compost use two-thirds fibrous loam from an upland pasture, one-third old cow manure well broken up, with a little leaf-mold, fine charcoal and sharp sand added. Do not pot too firmly.

If your plants show a tendency to run up to flower, pinch back the shoots. Give a night temperature of 40 to 45 degrees and never omit the fumigation, or green aphis will speedily raise havoc with your stock. Abundant ventilation, shade from direct sunshine and light spraying on warm days are beneficial.

Cornflower.

Centaurea Cyanus, the well known blue cornflower, is always a popular market flower. A few growers get a moderate winter crop by sowing it in early fall and treating similarly to mignonette, but the best sales are in early spring, the demand being also much better at that time.

Sow the seeds thinly in rows two feet apart on either benches or solid beds. A night temperature of 45 to 48 degrees should not be exceeded, or the plants will become weak. The little seedlings will appear in a few days and a close, moist atmosphere will cause many to damp off. Keep the surface soil scratched over. Thin out where the plants have come up too abundantly and air freely to make the seedlings stocky. There are several colors of these centaureas, but the blue variety, Emperor William, is the best seller.

Coleus and Alternanthera.

Neither coleus nor alternanthera are as popular as they were. The decline in carpet bedding has caused a lessened demand for the latter and the advent of cannas of the Crozy type affected coleus. Yet there is still considerable call for them, and as they grow and flourish with so little care, it is not surprising that they still have many admirers.

It is better now to get in all possible cuttings from the old coleus plants. As these latter make ideal headquarters for mealy bug, get rid of the old stock at once. Alternanthera can either be pulled to pieces or propagated by cuttings. Whichever method is adopted, be sure to give it a brisk heat. The plants will barely exist in a cool house. As soon as the coleus and alternanthera are rooted, place the flats on a shelf in a warm house. You will get all the cuttings you want from these for later propagation.

Spanish Iris.

To have Spanish irises in flower by the middle of March, the flats should now be placed in a night temperature of 50 degrees. Do not on any account try harder forcing, as it will only result in complete failure. As the flats are now a solid mass of roots, a little liquid manure once in four or five days will prove beneficial. These irises, commonly known as "the poor man's orchids," are always a welcome arrival in the spring and bring good prices. Their extremely low price should encourage more country florists to try them.

Dahlias.

It is, of course, much too early to start any dahlias for outdoor culture, but a small batch grown under glass provides a welcome change in the late spring. The cactus varieties do not prove so satisfactory for this early flowering as the singles, shows and pompons. Do not make the mistake of planting a mixture of colors. Your customers do not want this. Restrict yourself to two or three popular shades, like Grand Duke Alexis, Kriemhilde and Countess of Lonsdale, colors which no one will ever find fault with. A single strong eye is all that is needed to a plant. Lay your tubers in a bed of moss in a warm house. Lightly sprinkle them until they start to break, then divide and plant them. Restrict the plants to a single shoot and stake these securely. Set your plants two feet apart in the rows and let the rows be a little wider apart than this. A carnation house temperature we find will grow good dahlias.

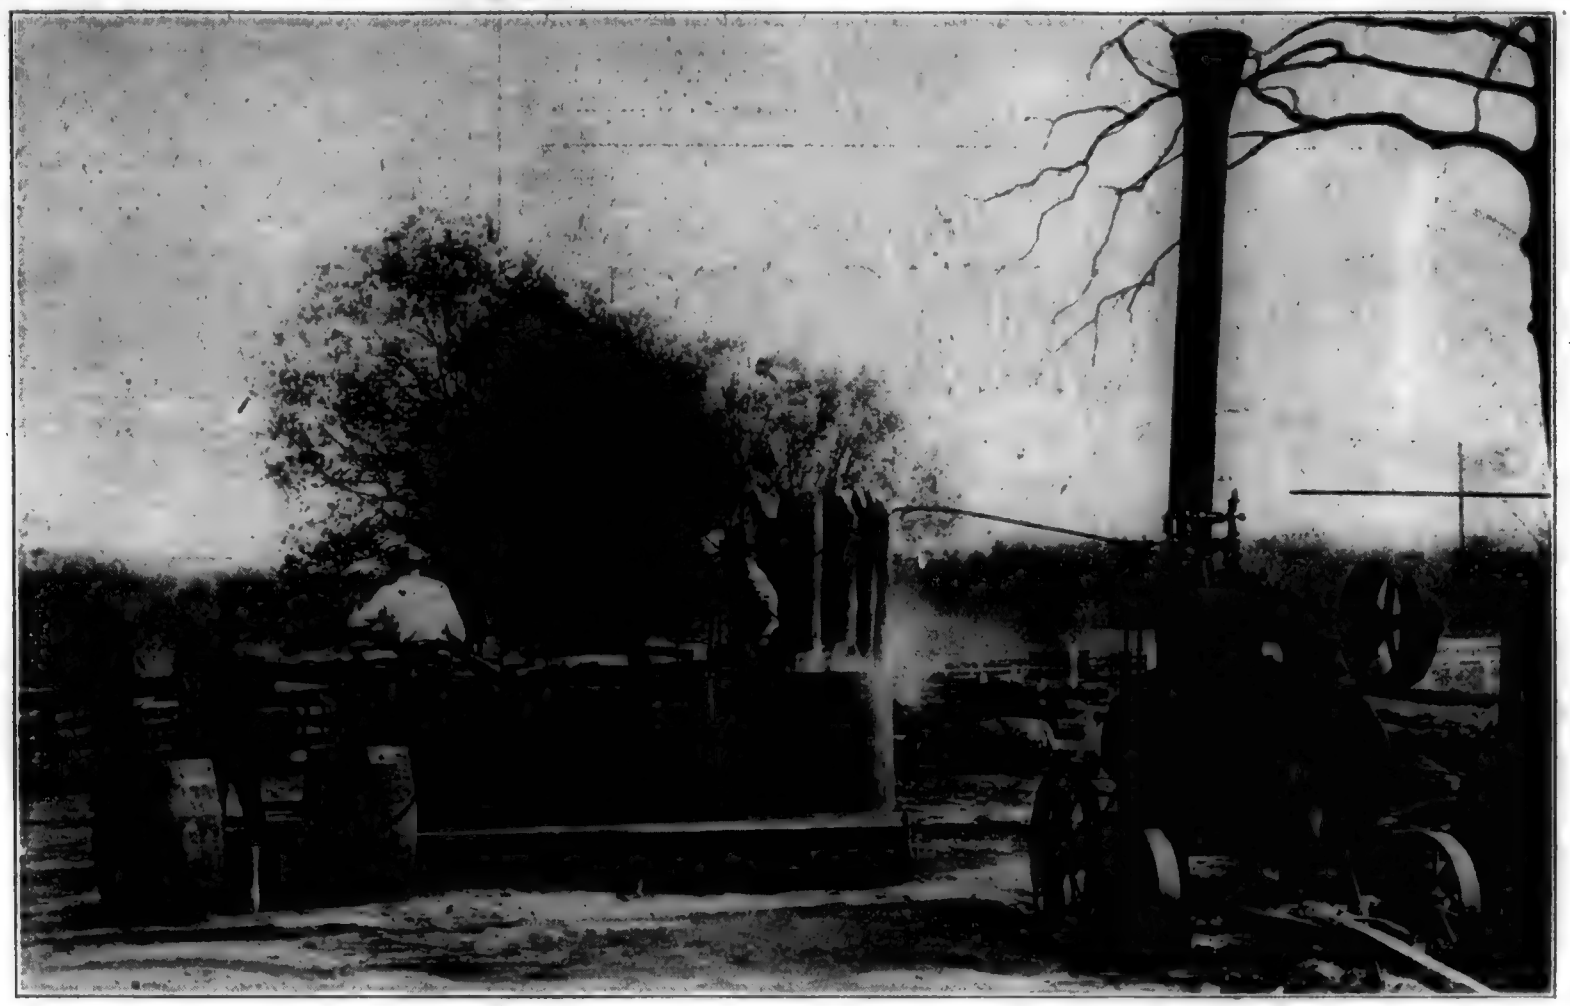
Purchase Seed Now.

The seedsmen's catalogues are now pouring in with each mail and will soon make a formidable and bewildering collection. Take time by the forelock and order your supplies of flower seeds during the present month. It always pays to try a packet of a few novelties, especially in asters, stocks, sweet peas and other staple florists' flowers. Many of these so-called novelties may turn out to be old friends under new names, or so slightly changed as to be hardly distinguishable, but every prominent seed merchant feels the necessity of providing a page or two of novelties each season. The task of so doing is sometimes quite considerable.

All the seed houses appreciate early orders. It relieves in a measure the tremendous spring pressure. It also ensures to the purchaser prompt delivery of his order. By waiting until later in the season it may be difficult to secure seeds of some special favorites, so order your seeds now, before the rush starts. By so doing you will help the overworked seedsmen and not be subjected to vexatious delays, such as are unavoidable later in the season.

PRESERVING GREENHOUSE WOOD

GOVERNMENT BEGINS TESTS.



Plans for Experiments.

The increasing scarcity of wood is already felt in many parts of the country and will undoubtedly be more noticeable in the next few years. The manufacturers of greenhouses and horticultural buildings, like other users of wood, are meeting with a great deal of difficulty in obtaining lumber suitable for their purposes at reasonable prices. Naturally the more durable woods have been in greatest demand and consequently this class of material has been the first to run short. This shortage has made it necessary to investigate carefully all possible substitutes for these valuable, durable species.

It is easy enough to find woods that are cheaper than heart cypress, which is most widely used for greenhouse purposes at the present time; but such woods are usually not durable, and unless treated with some preservative substance will not last more than two or three years in a greenhouse, making the cost of replacement in most cases prohibitive to their use. On account of the heat and moisture conditions to which greenhouse timbers are invariably exposed, decay is rapid.

The Cause of Decay.

Decay in wood is caused by low forms of plant life called fungi. These plants are not able to manufacture their own food, and so, like ourselves, must subsist on animal and vegetable matter. Their reproduction is brought about by minute spores, millions of which are constantly floating in the air, like dust, and being deposited everywhere. If conditions of heat and moisture are favorable, a spore falling upon a piece of wood germinates and sends out numerous thread-like tubes, called hyphæ, which exude an "enzyme," a substance capable of so changing the tissue of the wood that it can be assimilated by the fungus. After a spore has sent out masses of these hyphæ it gradually produces a spore-case, an example of which is the common toadstool. In this case countless Government's Open Tank Method of Treatment of Timber with Wood Preservatives.

(With slight modification this will be employed in the experimental treatment upon greenhouse timbers.)

numbers of these spores are borne and thrown off into the air, which in turn may attack wood and so continue the destructive work.

In order that hese spores may develop, they must have specific amounts of water, heat, air and food; therefore by reducing or eliminating any one of these it is possible to prevent them from developing. It will be readily seen that in the interior construction of greenhouses, heat can not be eliminated. Water may be kept away in some cases and air in others, but it is probable that the element which can be most readily controlled is the food, or the wood itself. This can be done by impregnating it with some liquid which is poisonous to the fungus and which will consequently prevent its growth.

Method of Treating Timbers.

For such purposes the open-tank method is well adapted. This method is based upon the use of an open tank, capable of withstanding heat, and either equipped with steam coils or so arranged that fire can be placed underneath.

Sufficient preservative is run into the tank to cover the portion of the timber which is to be treated, and the temperature of the liquid is then raised slightly above the boiling point of water. This temperature is maintained for a length of time depending upon the character of the wood and the treatment desired. At the end of the hot bath the timber is either quickly transferred to another vat, containing a cold preservative, in which it is submerged for a definite period of time, or else the heat is shut off and the timber is allowed to remain in the cooling liquid until the required absorption is obtained or until no further absorption takes place. The time required by the treatment may be shortened, without transferring the timber from one vat to another, by running out the hot liquid at the end of the hot bath and simultaneously letting in the cold liquid. The vacuum is brought about by alternate heating and cooling of the wood in the preservative, and atmospheric pressure is used to force the liquid into the wood.

Preservatives Employed.

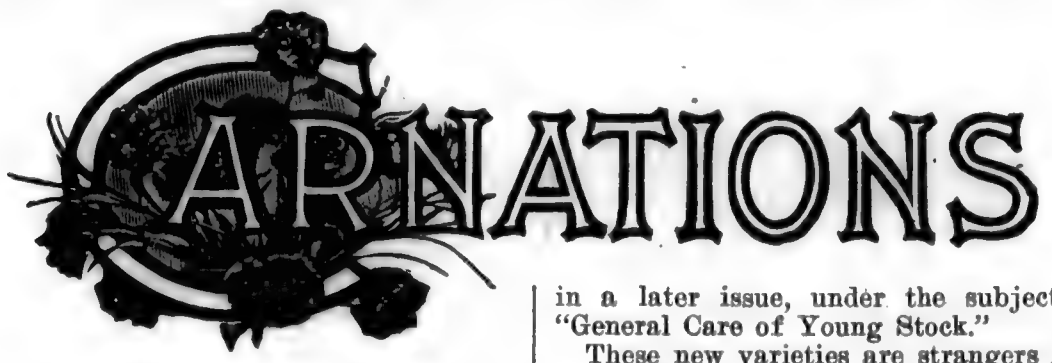
For all purposes the most effective preservative in general use today is creosote, or dead oil of coal tar. However, it probably can not be used in treating all classes of greenhouse timbers, because timbers so treated can not be subsequently painted, which is desirable in such structures. Moreover, the effect of its volatilization on young plants has never as yet been determined. Other preservatives, however, such as mercuric chlorid and zinc chlorid, are better adapted to the purpose, because they leave the surface of the wood in a suitable condition for painting. Both of these have the disadvantage of leaching out to some extent in the course of time. This can probably be largely overcome, however, by proper methods of handling. Of the two, mercuric chlorid is the less soluble and has better antiseptic qualities, but is unfortunately more expensive.

Records show that as far back as 1832 John H. Kyan successfully treated the timbers in the Duke of Devonshire's conservatories by simply soaking them in a mercuric chlorid solution. By this method the solution merely penetrated the wood to a distance of about one-fourth of an inch. By the open-tank method, as suggested, a complete penetration of some species can undoubtedly be secured and there appears to be no good reason, therefore, why such treatment will not lead to better results than have been attained in the past with this preservative.

Object of Experiments.

Although the preservation of other timbers is comparatively well understood in this country now, having been carried on successfully for half a century, the treatment of greenhouse timbers has been neglected. In order, therefore, to secure data which will be of value to the users of such material, the Forest Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture is preparing to carry on a series of experiments in co-operation with S. Jacobs & Sons, manufacturers of greenhouses and horticultural buildings, at their plant in Brooklyn. The object of the experiments is to learn:

1. What preservative is best adapted to the treatment of greenhouse timbers.



2. The minimum strength of the solution necessary to effectively guard against decay.

3. The possibility of treating cheaper grades of lumber so that they will last as long or longer than those at present used.

The preservatives to be used in the experiments are mercuric chlorid (corrosive sublimate), zinc chlorid, and probably creosote. The woods to be treated are sap cypress, longleaf and shortleaf pine. Cottonwood will probably be added later. The treating apparatus will consist of two tanks about 18x3x3 feet in size, one for the hot and the other for the cold bath. The heating tank will be made of 14-gauge galvanized iron and will be heated by about 100 feet of steam coil arranged in the bottom. The cooling tank is to be 2-inch plank and will be used exclusively for the mercuric chlorid solution, which acts on iron and therefore can not be used in metal tanks.

The manufactured timbers will be heated in a zinc chlorid solution, as previously described, or else in an improvised dry kiln for several hours and then placed immediately in the cooling tank containing the solution of mercuric chlorid. After the required time in this bath they will be removed, marked for future identification and made up into greenhouses. Records will be kept of the locality in which each treated greenhouse is erected and studies of their condition will be made from time to time. These investigations will be made public as soon as any tangible results have been obtained. Howard B. Oakleaf.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Buying New Varieties.

It has been said that purchasing varieties in the year of their introduction to the trade is a veritable gamble. Like many ventures in all lines of business, the light in which an investment is viewed makes it what it is.

If we buy everything on the list of new sorts, without regard to present needs, trusting to luck to strike a good one, then the transaction might be called a gamble. If we reason that the cuttings need no special attention on arrival, or if we allow the plants to suffer at any time by neglect or abuse, that is carelessness. When we view the matter fairly, and consider that the result of an investment in a new variety rests fully as much, if not more, with the grower than the introducer, the element of chance does not enter into the question.

My methods and my reasons for adopting them in purchasing new varieties were pretty thoroughly discussed in these columns last year, so I will merely say in passing that if one has a clean, healthy stock of a certain sort, which is paying well, he had better let well enough alone. Should there be any cause for hesitation in deciding whether or not to purchase a certain variety, it may be well to remember that, if meritorious, it will be scarcely less so a year later.

When in need of new blood and the choice is made, at least 250 cuttings should be bought.

Care on Arrival.

A week or ten days before a shipment is due to arrive, bring in the soil specially designed for cuttings. This soil was described a few weeks ago. Get pots in readiness and do not use a medley of sizes, but have them uniformly 2-inch, 2¼-inch or 2½-inch—not larger.

If, on arrival, it is impossible to pot at once, place without unpacking in a cool, shady place. On opening, should frost seem to have penetrated the package, remove the contents and, after sprinkling well with cold water, allow them to stand in a cool place for a few hours, but do not unroll the bundles until ready to pot. Once potting is started, the operation should proceed with dispatch until finished, and the plants should then be stood on a shaded bench entirely free from draughts. Water sufficiently to thoroughly moisten the soil, but not enough to form mud.

The temperature for the first week, or until they show signs of having taken hold of the soil, should be about that of the propagating house. As they become accustomed to more light and air, a cooler temperature is needed.

Subsequent treatment will be discussed in a later issue, under the subject of "General Care of Young Stock."

These new varieties are strangers in a strange land, and require extra care and encouragement in order to become quickly acclimatized. Personally, I prefer to buy cuttings unrooted, preparing and rooting them myself, thus materially aiding in the process of acclimatization.

A Flagrant Abuse.

It seems strange, after a grower has received a batch of cuttings bought at the rate of $10 or $12 a hundred, that he should deliberately set about to abuse them, but such is the case when they are potted in rich soil and grown in a high temperature with a view to obtaining a cutting from the tops, thus doubling the stock. So-called cuttings, obtained in this manner, even if induced to root, will never make anything but cripples, while the original, now a stump, is little short of worthless.

If one is determined to follow this evil practice, let him, in justice to the originator, label the cuttings under some other name than that by which they are known. Then no one will be misled, except the grower himself.

Geo. S. Osborn.

FLOWERLESS PLANTS.

I should like some information in regard to a bench of carnations in a house of mine. The north bench of Fair Maids is all in fine shape, with big plants, etc.; but the flower shoots, instead of running up to bud, shorten up the joints and carry a regular tufted top of foliage, side shoots and all. In this condition, of course, the plants do not flower. Various reasons have been given, such as lack of food, too much manure, poorness of the stock, etc. Both my south and middle benches are doing finely, though I saw one or two plants that are throwing the foliage. Can you give me the cause, name and remedy? H. E. G.

The trouble you complain of is by no means a new one and is not a difficult one to overcome, although it will cause you considerable loss this season. It is brought on by indiscriminate and wholesale taking of cuttings, without regard to the condition of the plants from which they are taken.

You will notice in some varieties an occasional plant which grows as you describe your plants. They are called wild plants. They simply grow and keep on growing, without making any bloom, and if left alone will grow to enormous proportions. Cuttings taken from such plants will invariably grow the same way. The novice who has not learned to discriminate between cuttings, except as to the size of cuttings and plants, is likely to whack into these strong looking plants for all the cutting that can be had. They root more easily and grow more easily than the type, and in a short time, if this kind of propagating continues, the whole batch will be of this flowerless kind. We have seen this very thing happen with the old variety, Lizzie McGowan, some years ago.

We have heard it said that if such plants are cut back hard they will come into bloom later. Perhaps so, but my advice to you is to throw out every plant of this kind. Certainly you do not want to propagate from them. A. F. J. B.

FEEDING CARNATIONS.

What is it best to feed carnations with? Would you advise mulching them with fine cow manure? G. & G.

There are many different manures and fertilizers applied to carnations. Much feeding should be guarded against during the short winter days, or you will have a big crop of burst calyxes. Fine cow manure, well decayed, makes one of the best mulches and can be applied now with perfect safety. Dried sheep manure is used with success by many. Mix a little fine bone with your cow manure and see that it is evenly spread over the benches. W.

The Market.

Your cold wave had us all shivering for a day, when the thermometer touched 20 degrees, but it was a brief respite, and before last week ended there came rain and almost summer temperature. Its influence upon the market can be readily imagined. The tendency was steadily downward. Saturday, January 9, violets had fallen to 50 cents, and Beauties the same. These prices were for the best. The present week opens with even warmer weather, with the usual promise of a cold wave, but we have now learned not to accept any weather predictions until they are realized.

With the mild weather has come inactivity in business and prices are far from satisfactory to the wholesale section. The best Beauties were selling January 11 at 50 cents and, outside of the novelties, 2 cents was top for carnations. Great quantities of both are coming from Philadelphia. Gardenias and orchids are quite abundant and prices are lower, especially on cypripediums. Of lilies there are enough and to spare. Valley holds fairly well. Tulips are here, and other signs of spring. Cut lilac is of splendid quality. The shipments of violets continue abnormal, and with the unseasonable weather little surprise is expressed at their recession in price. Vast quantities are cleaned up to the sidewalk merchants daily at almost summer prices. Colder weather seems to be an absolute necessity to save the wholesale market from demoralization. Fortunately this cannot be long delayed, and we will welcome whatever will bring the greatest good to the greatest number.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its monthly meeting January 11 and the attendance was close to the century mark, the enthusiasm and good fellowship unbounded. The new officers were installed. President Hallock's address was a gem of eloquence and all the new officers and trustees gave assurances of devotion to the club's interests. Secretary Young predicted the best year in the club's history. Vice-president Turner filled the chair at the president's request for a time and seemed "to the manor born."

President Hallock's committee appointments were as follows:

Legislative Committee—P. O'Mara, John I. Raynor, F. R. Pierson.
Essay Committee—S. S. Butterfield, Leonard Barron, A. H. Langjahr.
Committee on Awards—C. H. Totty, Robt. Simpson, Frank H. Traendly, A. L. Miller, A. R. Kennedy, W. Duckham, W. F. Sheridan.
Exhibition Committee—C. B. Weathered, John Scott, Jos. Manda, W. E. Marshall, John Birnie, Harry O. May.
House Committee—J. B. Nugent, Jr., Jos. Fenrich, R. M. Schultz.
Outing Committee — H. A. Bunyard, Louis Schmutz, Jr., J. Austin Shaw, Chas. Webber, J. Roehrs, Jr., Robert Koehne, W. G. Badgley, Charles Schenck, F. H. Traendly, W. E. Elliott.
Bowling Committee—C. W. Scott, Joseph Fenrich, Joseph Manda, W. E. Marshall, J. A. Shaw, W. E. Elliott.

J. K. Allen read the treasurer's report, which was most satisfactory and showed a balance in the bank of $3,150.81. The report of the trustees, W. E. Marshall chairman, was read and accepted.

A long discussion took place concerning the donation of silver and bronze medals to the Chrysanthemum Society of America, participated in by Messrs. O'Mara, Totty, Marshall, Scott and Traendly. The ultimate result was the carrying of the motion to that effect.

Chairman Turner, of the award committee, announced a visit by the members to the Scarboro plant of the F. R. Pierson Co. January 9 to pass upon the merits of White Killarney. The committee gave the new rose a score of eighty-nine points and recommended the award of the club's certificate.

A very interesting exhibit was made of hybrid amaryllis by Harry Turner, six distinct varieties of great size and beauty, which received a cultural certificate. J A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, sent a fine plant of Begonia President Taft, which was awarded a certificate of merit. A plant and 100 cut blooms of the new single violet, Baronne Rothschild, were shown by F. W. Fletcher, of Auburndale, Mass., who was given a hearty vote of thanks. George Geatrus, of West Hoboken, exhibited a dozen pots of a new fern closely resembling Scottii and Boston, on which judgment was deferred.

The names of eight life members were enrolled. For membership in the club the name of Leonard Barron was proposed.

The February meeting of the club will be carnation night. A. H. Langjahr offered three books as prizes, for the best vase of twenty-five blooms of a new carnation not yet distributed, 100 blooms of Enchantress, and 100 blooms of Lawson.

It was decided to have the annual dinner as usual and all details were left to the committee, the club first voting in favor of inviting the ladies, on motion of Mr. Weston, ably seconded by John Scott, who is now fully recovered from his long illness. The committee appointed is W. E. Elliott, A. L. Miller, J. A. Shaw and J. B. Nugent, Jr. It was decided that the club have its usual outing in the summer.

Various Notes.

As reported in last week's issue, E. V. Hallock, the new president of the Florists' Club, entertained the incoming officers, and those whose terms have just expired, at a beefsteak dinner at Castle Cave, Wednesday evening, January 6. The affair was a great success. The photograph, which might be entitled "Sweet Sixteen," appearing in this issue, speaks for itself. President Hallock announced his committee appointments and there was full discussion as to the club's work in the year just opened.

F. W. Fletcher, of Auburndale, Mass., was in the city January 11 and a guest of the New York Florists' Club.

The floral staff of Bloomingdale Bros. presented W. Wallace Burnham with a handsome loving cup, a token of affection and esteem. Mr. Burnham's successor has not yet been appointed.

R. Harry Cathcart, Jr., president of the Yuess Gardens Co., of Newburgh, was in the city January 11. He reports a successful season and is concentrating his two stores in the one large building, the whole of which will be utilized hereafter. Walter Mott, of this company, is now on his western trip, which will extend to Buffalo.

Anton Schultheis, of College Point, is sending some fine valley, orchids and lilac to Horace E. Froment.

Joseph A. Fenrich is doing jury duty—a two weeks' galling vacation for a busy man.

James Meikeljohn, formerly with the Knickerbocker hotel, as manager of its floral department, is now on the road for H. Frank Darrow.

Philip Recht, representing the Hinode Florist Co., was called suddenly to Europe last week on account of the serious illness of his father.

Miss Mills, proprietor of the Hinode Florist Co., says her Easter specialties will be wistaria, flowering cherry and miniature Japanese gardens, with plenty of lilies.

Thursday evening, January 28, has been chosen by the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association for the annual banquet, and the St. Denis hotel has been selected. It will be an elaborate affair.

A. J. Guttman says he will be at the Indianapolis convention with a carnation exhibit. His old pet, Victory, is still making good in the east.

W. A. Sperling, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., has just returned from a successful southern trip.

John A. Kessler, of the late firm of Schumacher & Kessler, and Wm. Kessler, formerly with Charles Millang, compose the new firm of Kessler Bros. that has leased the store above George Cotsonas & Co. and will handle plants and cut flowers at wholesale.

A. Le Moult, the veteran of the Bowery, moves this week to his new store at No. 202, where he will have ample room. This is only a stone's throw from J. J. Foley's. Mr. Le Moult celebrates, in the fall, the fiftieth anniversary of his career as a New York florist and will then retire from the activities and responsibilities of the business, leaving his son in charge. A large branch store has been established by Mr. Le Moult in the Bronx, near his home, which is proving a great success.

The great auto show is over, with its attendance of over 100,000, and the floral decorations were individual and numerous. All up-to-date cars are now supplied with vases for the use of fresh flowers.

At the Plaza last week the green room was beautifully decorated with American Beauties and palms by Thomas Young, Jr., for the McVicker-Horner wedding. At the same hotel the entire first floor of the immense building, twenty rooms, was decorated magnificently by Alex. McConnell for the debut of Marjorie Gould. In lavishness and elegance it has never been excelled.

M. A. Bowe has a large dinner decoration booked for this week that will make inroads in the orchid and Beauty supply.

Edgar J. Knight, for a number of years in charge of the noted orchid collection of Clement Moore, of Hackensack, N. J., leaves this position February 1 to go into fruit farming on his own account. He is one of the best orchid growers in the country. His present assistant succeeds him.

The fame of Wertheimer Bros. has penetrated to the land of the Mikado, a florist at Tokio having written for their catalogue.

Frank Albrecht's greenhouses, at Wyckoff avenue and Norman street, Brooklyn, were damaged by fire on the night of January 7 as the result of defective heating apparatus. The loss is said to be $2,000 on the greenhouses and $4,000 on stock.

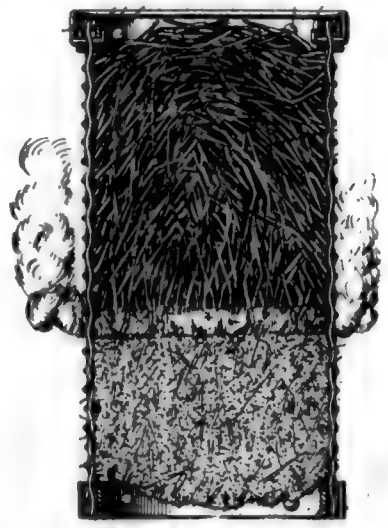
OBITUARY.

Robert Johnstone.

Robert Johnstone, of Chicago, died January 11 at Valmora Ranch, Watrous, N. M., where he went a few months ago in the hope of recovery from tuberculosis.

Mr. Johnstone was well known in the trade, having been identified with the business at Chicago for more than fifteen years. He was about 45 years of age and came to this country with his parents when a child. Mrs. F. W. Timme, Chicago, is a sister. Some fifteen years ago Mr. Johnstone started in the greenhouse business on the northwest side, growing a miscellaneous stock and continuing to own the property up to the last few months. For the last couple of years prior to giving up work he was connected with Vaughan & Sperry. Mr. Johnstone served several terms as secretary of the Chicago Florists' Club and was an enthusiastic and effective worker in everything he undertook.



The remains are now on their way to Chicago, but the date of the funeral has not yet been determined.

William B. Reed.

William B. Reed, of Chambersburg, Pa., died January 8, after a long illness. He had been in the business for a good many years and had built up a large trade, operating a well kept establishment of good size, growing a general line of stock for the local demand. He was well known to the florists of eastern Pennsylvania and in Chambersburg was looked upon as one of the leading men of the city.

Henry F. Cooper.

Henry F. Cooper, Sr., died suddenly at his home on John street, Medway,

The Lasten Fumigator.

Mass., January 3, of rheumatism of the heart. He was 76 years of age and leaves a wife and two sons. For fifty years Mr. Cooper was superintendent of the Medway Mfg. Co., but with his son, Henry F. Cooper, Jr., he was extensively interested in the greenhouse business.

Carew Sanders.

The death of Carew Sanders, which occurred on Wednesday, January 6, removed one of the oldest florists at St. Louis, a man who was well known and respected by all. His death was hastened by the shock he received by the burning of his home on Sunday, January 3, while he was ill and in bed. He was carried out of the burning building to St. Luke's hospital, where he died.

Mr. Sanders was born in Sussex, England, and was 82 years of age. He came to America with his brother William, in 1848, and secured employment in Cincinnati, later returning to New York. When his cousin, the late Edgar Sanders, came to America, both went to Cincinnati and were engaged by Joseph Longworth, grandfather of Congressman Nicholas Longworth. In 1856 Mr. Sanders removed to St. Louis and engaged in the nursery business with Norman J. Coleman. The firm was known as Coleman & Sanders and for many years did a general nursery business. After the firm dissolved partnership Mr. Sanders started in the florists' business, building at 5600 Delmar boulevard, the present location of his son, C. C. Sanders. He retired from active work twenty years ago, having accumulated a large amount of property, which in late years has become quite valuable.

Mr. Sanders was a well read man and often contributed to horticultural magazines. He was one of the oldest members of the St. Louis Florists' Club. He is survived by his widow and four children and thirteen grandchildren.

The funeral took place Friday afternoon, January 8, from the residence of his son, W. S. Sanders, 5522 Clemons avenue, to Bellefontaine cemetery. The pallbearers were selected from the local florists and were Fred. C. Weber, E. A. Michel, Theo. Miller, Frank Fillmore, J. F. Ammann, C. A. Kuehn, Fred Meinhardt, and J. J. Beneke. The floral offerings were many and beautiful. The St. Louis Florists' Club sent its usual offering. Among other florists present were John Steidle, W. C. Young, Otto G. Koenig, Harry Young, J. F. Windt, Francis Fillmore, Wm. Ellison and others.

J. J. B.

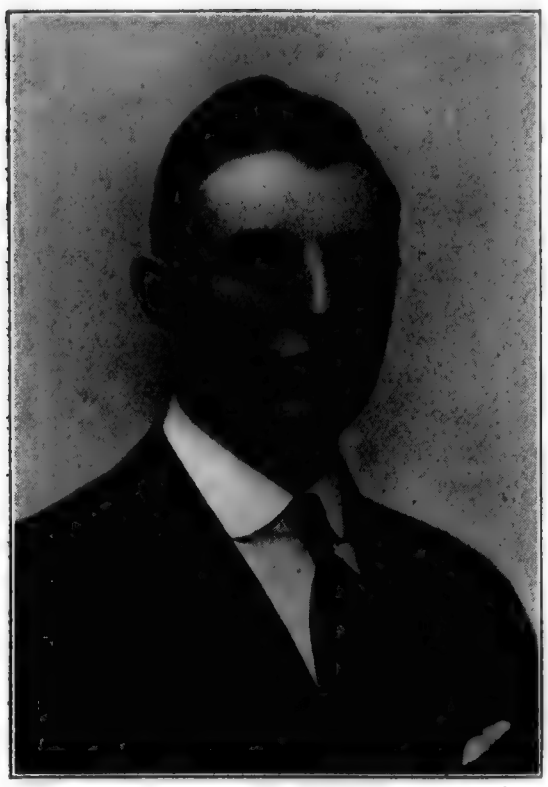
Elizabeth Carp.

Mrs. Elizabeth Carp, mother of William H. Carp, of Ashland, Ky., died December 31, 1908, at the age of 65 years, and was buried in Woodlawn cemetery, Ironton, O.

Samuel Lewis Smith.

Samuel Lewis Smith, formerly a florist in North Easton, Mass., died January 4, in his home at 55 Albion street, Brockton, Mass.

Martin Griffin.



Martin Griffin, 75 years old, the florist of the treasury department for nearly half a century, is dead at his home at Washington. Mr. Griffin was born in Ireland, but came to this country when a young man. He was one of the oldest residents of Washington, having resided in that city for fifty-five years. He is survived by five sons and three daughters.

W. Heins.

W. Heins, nurseryman at Halstenbek, Holstein, Germany, died December 8, from apoplexy, on entering his office in the morning. The deceased had reached the age of 75 years, and was the son of the founder of the nursery business, the most important in South Holstein. Millions of forest and hedge plants are sold annually, many finding their way to America.

FUMIGATING AND SPRAYING.

Fred Lautenschlager says he, like many another good man, began life at the bottom and worked up; but he does not think that is the way it should be with a greenhouse fumigant. To put it a little more plainly, he has conceived the idea that the best way to get action on the insects in a greenhouse is to put the fumigating apparatus up in the ridge of the house and let the fumes fall. Mr. Lautenschlager has done a great deal of experimenting in the last few years in connection with a fumigator which he invented and patented. He says he noted that in the forms of fumigation commonly used the fumigating medium was lighter than air. With the source of the fumigant placed on the walks, the vapor rising often left the lower part of the greenhouse only lightly fumigated, if at all. When he hung his fumigator close to the ridge the fumes given off were quickly cooled by contact with the glass and thereby became heavier than the atmosphere. The result was that the fumes settled, just as one sees a fog settle upon the ground. In this way the house was filled evenly full of vapor, clear down to the ground, completely enveloping the benches and the plants on them.

Frank Johnson.
(Financial Secretary, Chicago Florists' Club.)

Mr. Lautenschlager is sure that in this method he has found a way of greatly increasing the effectiveness of every form of fumigant and there is no patent on this idea, as there is on the Lauten fumigator. Every grower is invited to try it for himself. Whatever you use for fumigating, hang the apparatus up in the peak of the house and watch results.

The Lauten fumigator is one of the simplest of devices. It is merely a cylinder of extra heavy wire net. It is packed full of wet tobacco stems, stood up in the greenhouse (or hung up, under the "down draft" system) and the stems are set afire at the bottom. The result is that instead of giving off smoke, the fumigator gives off steam. The steam is emitted from the point of combustion, as shown in the accompanying illustration. The only point necessary to watch is to see that the tobacco stems are properly moistened. Alois Frey, head gardener at Lincoln park, Chicago, uses the fumigator and likes it well. The quantity of stems used for each fumigator is a half bushel. These are simply spread out on the floor and moistened with a watering can. A little experience will tell when they are moist enough, and not too moist. They must be tightly packed in the fumigator to get the right results. Mr. Frey uses one fumigator for each 100 feet of the length of the house to be fumigated. The fumes are given off slowly and the fumigation is kept up for several hours.

Mr. Lautenschlager recently made an arrangement with the Wilson Plant Oil & Fertilizer Co., Chatham, N. J., to put the fumigator on the market. Its simplicity should commend it to those who have found fumigating something of a task where the complicated systems are used.

George Asmus.
(President, Chicago Florists' Club.)

Speaking of fumigators leads to sprayers. At the big plant of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill., use is made of a device called the Unit sprayer, which consists of a hose nozzle on the top of which a brass globe is attached, with a small pipe leading into the water channel through the nozzle. Insecticides or fertilizers can be placed in the globe and the suction of the passing water causes its mixture with the water flowing out through the nozzle. The sprayer is made by the J. F. Cass Mfg. Co., Detroit, and seedsmen have taken it up as affording their customers an easy way of applying nitrates to the lawn.

quintette, for "handsome is as handsome does," and Mr. Asmus has a reputation as a doer. The vice-presidency will this year be even more of an honorary office than usual, for Mr. Asmus is on record as stating that the only time Mr. Waters will have the opportunity to preside is when the president relinquishes the chair in order to take the floor in behalf of some motion he wishes to see go through. E. F. Winterson, the new treasurer, requires no introduction; he has held the office before, has been the club's president, and is known as a good fellow wherever florists gather. The recording secretary, J. H. Pepper, and the financial secretary, Frank Johnson, are comparatively new recruits, Mr. Pepper having taken a transfer from the New York Florists' Club a year or two ago. Mr. Johnson, as well as the vice-president, is a member of the staff of the A. L. Randall Co., and a young man who is making a reputation as a worker. It is his job to keep the club in funds.

CHICAGO CLUB OFFICERS.

The portraits of the new officers of the Chicago Florists' Club adorn this page. The word "adorn" is used advisedly, as all readers will agree. George Asmus rightly is at the head of the is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19 to 22, 1909.

The REVIEW brings results.

THE Missouri Botanical Garden has issued its sixteenth announcement concerning the admission of garden pupils.

THE Agricultural Experiment Station at Cornell University has just issued another bulletin on the peony by J. Eliot Coit, who formerly was in charge of the trial of peonies carried on there by the experiment station and the American Peony Society.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

The Hail Association.

Secretary Esler, of the Florists' Hail Association, calls the writer's attention to the fact that, in condensing the report of that association for publication, certain important statistics were left out, and he wishes that members will correct the report as published in the Annual Report of the S. A. F. by adding the following:

Extra one-half and extra whole insurance upon 7,354,293 square feet of glass, making a total risk upon 29,092,566 square feet of glass.

W. N. RUDD, Sec'y.

GENERAL BUSINESS.

The bank clearings are possibly the best index to the general business activity. The record for December, 1908, covering the returns from 110 leading cities, shows a most encouraging state of affairs. As compared with December, 1907, the increase is 52.6 per cent, and compared with 1906, when trade was very active everywhere, the gain is 0.4 per cent. The improvement is most marked at New York, but is largely due there to increased stock market activity and does not reflect actual business conditions. Outside of New York the improvement appears mainly at the west. Boston reports a small gain, but Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Baltimore and New Orleans report decreases. There are gains at Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City.

The following figures show how the December clearings compare with those of the same month in 1907 and in 1906 at the cities named:

Cities.	Percentage of change, compared with 1907.	1906.
Boston	+39.1	+ 0.1
Philadelphia	+16.1	—14.4
Baltimore	+15.7	— 8.0
Pittsburg	—10.1	—20.5
Cincinnati	+25.0	+ 2.1
Cleveland	+ 5.8	—10.5
Chicago	+39.1	+12.5
Minneapolis	— 3.8	— 3.3
St. Louis	+20.9	+ 9.4
Kansas City	+48.0	+41.7
New York	+52.6	+ 0.4
New Orleans	— 7.8	—22.9
San Francisco	+31.4	—19.6

The same comparison by sections shows:

Dec. clearings.	Compared with 1907.	1906.
New England	+35.9	— 0.6
Middle	+ 9.6	—14.0
South Atlantic	+13.5	— 4.2

FUNCTIONS OF EXPRESS CO.

The business of the express companies is eminently one of detail, and to no class of shippers is the close attention to detail more important than to florists. It has been stated by an authority on the subject that an express company purchases the right of transportation at wholesale and sells it at retail to the public. But in addition it has many other functions, closely related, however, to the primary one just stated:

Through its order and commission department an express company will purchase goods for customers at any store in any town or city where it has an agency. It will file legal documents, redeem pawned articles and issue money orders and letters of credit that are payable through its correspondents all over the world. It will enter and clear at custom houses any articles of import and export, transport goods in bond to any desired port of entry, exchange foreign money, make collections, pay gas bills, and, in short, will attend to any legitimate business transaction as the customer's agent.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The general report is that last week was one of the dullest in a long time. When the temperature fell about 60 degrees in a little more than twenty-four hours, it shut off all but the most necessary business in all lines of trade, and the florists suffered with the dry goods and other lines. The weather began to warm up toward the end of the week, but there was an accumulation of stock to be disposed of at low prices, in spite of the fact that the cold weather had had its usual effect in reducing supplies. The market stiffened a little on Saturday, especially on roses, but from Wednesday to Saturday there was not much doing. The shipping trade fell off almost as much as the local trade. While the temperature was below zero a good many shipments, both coming in and going out, were frosted.

This week opens with a little better business. The weather continues cold, and storms and still lower temperature are predicted. Supplies have been reduced all along the line, but demand also is below normal. Prices at the beginning of the week were a little better than last week, but still are low. Roses are holding up in price better than anything else except Harrisii lilies, these latter often being unobtainable at any figure. Maid and Killarney have lost much of their color, but some fine stock still is seen. Short roses were in good demand January 11.

In last week's slump the violet suffered more than any other flower; it is not especially in request for street wear when the temperature is 12 degrees below zero and the wind blows sixty miles an hour. Quite a few shipments from Rhinebeck were frozen, but no one missed them; the receipts were so large and prices so low the comparatively small losses did not affect averages. The loss of unsold stock was considerable, but at the same time small lots of the best grade were making fair prices.

The daily receipts of both roses and carnations would be far below requirements with any ordinary demand. The market looks for a revival in business almost any moment, and when it comes, if cold, dark weather still prevails, there will be a sharp advance in prices.

Guardian Angel's Fire.

With the thermometer registering well below zero January 7, fire destroyed four greenhouses at the Guardian Angel Orphan Asylum, on Ridge avenue, Rogers Park. The seven remaining houses in the range were frozen up solid, including 50,000 cuttings. The houses were planted to roses and carnations. The loss is estimated as between $5,000 and $6,000.

The Guardian Angel Orphan Asylum operates about 100,000 feet of glass, Miss Gunterberg selling the cut at the Flower Growers' Market. The plant consists of two separate ranges, the fire having originated in the boiler-room of the one destroyed.

Club Meeting.

George Asmus was elected president of the Florists' Club at the meeting January 7, after one of the most interesting contests in the club's history. It usually has been necessary to urge the office upon someone, but the club has been coming to the front so rapidly in the last two years, under President Bruns and President Kill, that this year there was a keen contest for each of the offices. The election resulted as follows: President, George Asmus; vice-president, T. E. Waters; recording secretary, J. H. Pepper; financial secretary, Frank Johnson; treasurer, E. F. Winterson; trustees, Leonard Kill, J. F. Klimmer, August Poehlmann, C. H. Fisk, H. N. Bruns.

In the absence of President Kill, who was out of the city, F. F. Benthey occupied the chair in the early part of the evening, but gave place to H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, during the election and that gentleman conducted affairs in accordance with the best international usage.

Victor Bergman and Frank Pesternick were elected to membership. Proposals were received from H. A. Olson and Robert Lang. Resignations were received from J. N. Mozine and J. D. Thompson. A. F. Poehlmann made a detailed statement of the club's part of the national flower show affairs, which was extremely satisfactory.

Scheiden & Schoos exhibited a vase of their new red carnation, W. H. Taft, which was favorably commented upon.

Refreshments were served, as usual.

Chicago to Indianapolis.

At the club meeting, January 7, F. F. Benthey, chairman of the transportation committee, stated that he has arranged with the Pan-Handle (Pennsylvania) railroad for a special car to the Indianapolis carnation convention and urged everyone going to write or telephone F. F. Benthey, 35 Randolph street, at once, stating how many berths are required. It is necessary to know how many will go to get the proper accommodations. It is expected there will be at least twenty in the party from Chicago and vicinity. The special car will go out at midnight Tuesday night, January 26, being ready for occupancy in the Union depot, Canal and Adams streets, at 10 p. m. The car will reach Indianapolis in time for breakfast the opening day of the convention. The fare is only $3.70, sleeper $2, each way.

The Weather in 1908.

Chief among the notable features of the year 1908 were its abnormal warmth, its deficiency of rainfall during the growing season, and its abundance of sunshine throughout the last seven months. During no other year in the history of the weather bureau were the monthly mean temperatures uniformly above the normals. The severe drought which set in early in June lasted until well into November, with only temporary breaks. In January, and from June to December, inclusive, the sunshine was greatly above the normal, only July and December of these months having less than ten per cent excess over the normal. February and May were the cloudy months of the year, having sixteen and thirteen per cent, respectively, less than the normal amount of sunshine.

exhibition of carnations at the Art Institute this afternoon, Thursday, January 14.

E. F. Winterson says it is not well to believe all the tales one hears of sudden riches.

Fred Miller, at Thirty-fifth street and Calumet avenue, says he is having an exceptionally good trade, and the quantities of stock he is buying back up his statement.

Bassett & Washburn's people wore their overcoats at work January 11. The flow pipe which heats the city store had frozen over night and burst. Business was good enough to keep them warm.

Percy Jones says that if any grower is not doing as well this season as last he feels sure it is because of differences in the quantity or quality of his cut; he finds that quality for quality the stock is averaging fully as good prices this season as it did last season.

Leonard Kill spent a few days last week at Memphis, visiting Otto Schwill.

A. A. Sawyer, the Oak Park pansy grower, was at E. H. Hunt's one day this week exhibiting a new device for facilitating the wrapping of plants, on which he has applied for a patent. It consists of a wire frame on which bottomless paper sacks are nested. When a plant is to be wrapped, the pot is placed within the wires provided to hold it, the sack is drawn up until the plant is covered, the top is enclosed, and the deed is done, for the sacks are made at the bottom to fit tightly around any size of pot.

Weiland & Risch say that a little good weather will bring in another heavy crop of fine Killarney; the buds are there, all ready for a little genial sun to bring them out.

Kruchten & Co. note a large increase in the demand for funeral work, with a consequent increase in the call for short roses.

C. A. Samuelson was obliged to have one of his valuable horses killed January 12, because of incurable disease.

J. A. Budlong estate has been cutting an especially good crop of Bride and Maid. Even on last week's weak market they sold them as high as 15 cents, and many buyers who have been using Killarney turned to Maid.

"Mark" Hannah, a well known figure around the market, is dead.

E. C. Amling has had a few yellow tulips this week and reports a special demand for them, and for jonquils.

Wietor Bros. say March is as early as the trade wants mum cuttings, although the best general sale for carnation cuttings is in January and February.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says he has never seen a cold wave that shut off business so completely as did that of last week, and another peculiarity he notes is that since things started up again the call has been for the cheapest grade, where usually the demand is for the best and the shorts are the hard stock to sell.

Peter Reinberg has about made up his mind to let 1909 go by without building any new greenhouses, but the temptation

Otto Goerisch, of the A. L. Randall force, welcomed another daughter into his home Sunday morning.

Zech & Mann have had an especially good run of shipping this week.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is planning to exhibit strongly at the Indianapolis carnation show. Their stock is in better shape this season than for several years past.

J. E. Jensen says the business in rooted cuttings is good, running mostly to large orders. Practically every order calls for one or more of four varieties: White Enchantress, White Perfection, Beacon and Victory. Winsor produces so many cuttings that the supply is larger and the demand less than it otherwise would be.

The fertilizer plant of Darling & Co., at the stock yards, was the biggest of the establishments destroyed in Chicago's fiery cold night of January 6. The loss is estimated at half a million dollars and is of special interest to the trade because Darling & Co. were the manufacturers of a large proportion of the fertilizers sold by wholesale florists and used by growers.

Among the week's visitors were: Harry Philpott, Winnipeg; L. A. Pletcher, Rochester, Ia.; Wm. E. Hand, Argos, Ind.; Wm. F. Dreer, Philadelphia; Peter Weiland, New Castle, Ind.; Charles M. Treanor, South Bend, Ind.; Harry Bock, with Joseph Bock, Burlington, Ia.; Charles E. Heite, vice-president of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., Kansas City, Mo., looking for material for seven new greenhouses, each 27x260.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Business continues fairly satisfactory, with the wholesalers' stock clearing fairly well each day. There has been a large supply of everything except lilies, and these, too, are coming more plentifully again. But stock, as a rule, is not bringing very satisfactory prices.

Please pardon our delay in remitting for next year's subscription, but business has been so good that we hardly had time to eat—but we would not miss receiving a copy of

E. FRIEDERICHSEN & SONS.
Wilton Junction, Ia., Dec. 28, 1908.

Among the retailers things are moving along, some days good and others only medium. There have been a number of large decorations that helped considerably. Society seems to have shown more life lately, and all the larger stores profited thereby, but the smaller dealers and out-of-town people do not seem to have much to brag about.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met January 7, with quite a crowd present. Two new members were elected and four new names proposed. It being nomination night, the following were named for office next year: President, Fred Burki; vice-president, P. S. Randolph; secretary, H. P. Joslin; assistant secretary, Chas. Crall; treasurer, H. L. Blind; executive committee, E. C. Reineman, John Weiland and John Bader.

While there was a display of primulas by some of the parks and private gardeners, also of roses, both of which were good, a good deal of the attention was directed to the new roses which were exhibited for the first time. The F. R. Pierson Co., represented by J. R. Fotheringham, showed White Killarney. The rose pleased all who saw it and the growers who are acquainted with Killarney were quite enthusiastic over it. The Waban Conservatories, Natick, Mass., also sent a bunch of White Killarney, which were grand, stems thirty-six inches long and the buds full three inches long, and when open were the most artistic flowers imaginable. The flower has more petals than Killarney and the inside petals have a way of twisting so that even when fully open the flower does not seem empty in the center. The Waban flowers did not arrive until the day after the club meeting, but have been on exhibition ever since, along with Pierson's, at the store of Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., where they have been looked at and handled, and were still in fair condition one week after they were shipped.

The Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, sent Mrs. Jardine and My Maryland. The Jardine is pretty well known here and did not attract so much attention, but it is conceded a good thing and seems growing in favor. My Maryland was the one which most were curious to see. The blooms were not the best, and all could see that when stock is more plentiful the rose will be better. The bud is a good shape and the color a good, clear pink all the way through. If it proves half that is promised for it, its place on the pedestal is assured. The general opinion is that Killarney will stay, that White Killarney will be received with open arms, that My Maryland will have a place of its own and Bride and Maid must behave very nicely or the new sorts will send them to keep company with Cornelia Cook and Catherine Mermet.

The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. sent in vases of fifty each Richmond, Killarney, Bride, Maid, Cusin and Bon Silene, which were excellent.

By a unanimous vote the secretary was instructed to invite the Carnation Society to make Pittsburg its meeting place for 1910.

Harry Bunyard, who happens this way so often on meeting night, was also a visitor, but will not be from now on, for he became a full-fledged member.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had the decoration for the Darlington ball, which was one of the swellest this season.

Randolph & McClements had the decoration for the annual banquet of the Carnegie Steel Co. officials. This is always an elaborate affair, but this one was above the average. The large banquet hall was decorated with palms, ferns and poinsettias. There was a large oval table with an open center the full length of the room, in which were about a dozen electric fountains throwing up perfumed water and surrounded by ferns, poinsettias and orange trees in fruit.

DETROIT.

The Market.

There is, of course, always room for more business, but little complaint is being heard. All good stock available is rapidly disposed of at good prices. Some exceedingly fine Richmond and Killarney are obtainable. White roses are not plentiful.

Those up on society matters say this is a dull year. It is true that this season we have had only about twenty debutantes, as against thrice that number last year. Many costly bouquets are sent to Miss Debutante and in nearly every case some decorating is called for, some of these decorations last year running into considerable money. But there is always other business for those who will have it at a reasonable figure. There has, for instance, been a steady demand for violets all winter; also loose flowers for the many receptions, teas, sick ones, birthdays, etc., have sold well. Many funeral pieces have been called for from time to time this winter, but these were mostly moderate-priced orders. Not every city is a second Chicago or New York, where there are always a number of people willing to pay for a little extra gilt on the box.

Various Notes.

Fetters and Schroeter are the only downtown florists who close up promptly at 6 o'clock every evening, except Saturday. While an occasional sale may be lost, it is doubtful whether these few sales would pay the light and other expenses resulting from keeping open evenings.

Some attractive calendars are being distributed by some of the trade in Detroit. Wm. Hielscher's is excellent. E. A. Fetters is issuing a pretty monthly calendar, a picture of a charming girl on each one. B. Schroeter is sending out both a monthly calendar and one for the whole year. A handy pocket mirror and card case bear the name of John Breitmeyer's Sons.

One hundred and twenty-five couples attended the Florists' Club's annual dancing party, given at Harmonie hall, January 7. Besides dancing, there were several good numbers on the program. As a fitting climax our thoughtful entertainment committee, under the direction of Charles Plumb, provided a very relishable lunch.

The old buildings opposite Taepke's store are soon to be torn down to make way for a modern eight-story building, the same to be entirely occupied by one of our large retail furniture dealers. This should be good news for Taepke's.

Philip Breitmeyer was inaugurated as mayor of Detroit Tuesday morning, January 12. The mayor's offices in the City Hall were elaborately decorated by members of the Detroit Florists' Club. Besides several wagon loads of palms, there was a profusion of flowers. A vase of 100 best Beauties from Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, attracted much attention, even from the florists.

J. F. Sullivan, in behalf of the Detroit florists, presented Mr. Breitmeyer with an elaborate desk pad, ink well, pearl handled pen, etc.

President W. B. Brown presided at the unveiling of a gold frame containing the portraits of the past presidents of the club. This was too much for Mr. Breitmeyer and took him fairly off his feet.

Tuesday evening a reception was held, when Mrs. Breitmeyer and the rest of the family shook hands all around.

Among the crowd Tuesday morning were seen the faces of nearly all the florists.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The florists of New Castle and Richmond are planning to entertain the carnation growers who come here to attend the carnation convention and hope to get a large number to visit their cities.

We are experiencing all kinds of weather, from warm, mild and spring-like to severe winter, and back to the spring brand again, all in a week. Trade in all lines has been rather quiet during the last week.

The Indianapolis Florists' Club has perfected plans for a smoker for the visiting members of the craft during the carnation convention, to be held Wednesday night, January 27. This will be a most enjoyable affair and for sociability it cannot be beat. The club wants all visitors to attend, so we can all get acquainted. A word to the wise is sufficient. S.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

The Springfield Florists' Club has begun active preparations for the convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association, to be held here February 16 and 17. A committee, consisting of W. T. Homburg, A. C. Brown, George W. Jack and R. T. Donnell, has been appointed to take charge of the trade exhibition feature and has issued a circular soliciting orders for space. The meeting will be held in Arion hall, as last year, and a large attendance is expected. Springfield itself has eighteen firms in the business. W. T. Homburg, 829 South Second street, is secretary of the club and will reply to all inquiries regarding space or other matters.

KANSAS CITY.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. is having an excellent season. In fact, the flower business in Kansas City is growing year after year and the Rock Co. proposes to keep abreast of the procession. It has been decided to increase the greenhouse establishment largely this year and Vice-president Charles E. Heite has been in Chicago this week looking over the most up-to-date establishments there and getting estimates on the material for seven modern houses, each to be 27x260. The company grows a general line of stock, both plants and cut flowers, for its retail store.

IT gives me pleasure to renew my subscription, as I owe my success in large part to the REVIEW.—F. W. BROOKE, Ithaca, Mich.

We are offering a grade of roses in this line a trifle better than the ordinary run of stock. Our "best" are very fine; in fact, in all the grades the flowers are good. We know that in Brides and Maids you can get the best market value from us.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The market is steadily declining. Gardenias are a bright, particular exception to the general rule. They are extremely fine for the season, fairly plentiful, and in excellent demand. The decline in other flowers is most noticeable in the poorer grades and in white, despite the large amount of funeral work, both in and out of town. It would be waste of time to enumerate the lower values in each variety of flowers. Suffice it to say that the decline is general, the purchasing power of a dollar having increased about twenty per cent since a week ago in ordinary grades, and from five to ten per cent in select grades.

The other features of the market are the strengthening in the demand for Easter lilies, led by a special order for 1,000 blooms, presumably for the wedding of a prominent banker's daughter; the spasmodic demand for callas, which comes all at once and then is gone, and the heavy supply of really superb orchids, chiefly Cattleya Trianæ. The minor features in the market are the increase in the quantity of violets and of single daffodils, and the livelier demand for greens, notably plumosus in bunches.

The dullness in the local market was most apparent on January 7 and 8. Saturday, January 9, was not as good a clean-up as the six preceding Saturdays since Thanksgiving. The early part of the present week has opened quietly, with a few large social events, and some good shipping orders, but not enough to affect the market as a whole.

Dorothy Gordon.

The novelty committee of the Florists' Club visited Wyncote December 30 to see the new carnation, Dorothy Gordon, growing in the houses of the Joseph Heacock Co. The committee consists of Edwin Lonsdale, J. W. Colflesh and Robert Craig. Following is its report:

"The variety resembles Rose-pink Enchantress in color and form, but is superior to that variety, in being of a more uniform color, and is also larger and of greater substance, and is apparently as free a bloomer, of stronger constitution and a stiffer flower stem. Your committee tested the keeping qualities, and find them to be good. The flowers were kept in an ordinary potting shed and were salable four days after being cut."

The Ball Season.

The ball season in Philadelphia was opened New Year's night by one of the most brilliant balls ever given in Horticultural hall, that of Mrs. Wheeler. The decorations were beautiful, but need not be given here in detail. The Benedicts', Mr. Elkins', and the First Assembly followed in rapid succession. All gave abundant opportunity to display the decorator's art.

The decorations for the Assembly ball were fine. The well known ball-room in the Bellevue-Stratford is so handsome as to require but little adornment. This little the decorators, J. J. Habermehl's Sons, added in the best taste. The color scheme was in red and white, scarlet azaleas, especially forced for the purpose, white azaleas, and white callas being relieved by perfect specimen palms and banks of green. The supper room was filled with small tables. Each table had a vase of flowers, either red or white. For red, American Beauties were largely used, also poinsettias; for white, calla lilies.

It is believed that more bouquets were carried at the Assembly this year than for many years past. Among these bouquets quite a number were made up in the old-fashioned style, such as grandmother carried, with several varieties of flowers arranged stiffly in rows. The bouquet, when finished, was set off with one of those beautiful lace bouquet holders, the like of which grandmother never even dreamed. Both H. H. Battles and Pennock Bros. had a number of these bouquets. There were also bouquets made in the present style, a single variety of rose, of highest grade, being used; or it may be lilies of the valley, or orchids, or violets. Charles W. Kahlert, manager for Pennock Bros., spoke with pleasure of the surprise his firm had felt at the increase in the Assembly demand, which for a number of years had been largely confined to the dinner table decorations for parties preceding the ball.

The Surprise of the Week.

The street is full of it! "Handsome Harry" has gone to Rice's! That was the word all through the wholesale district, with little sympathetic waves in many of the retail shops, where "Handsome Harry" is such a favorite. "Who is it?" you say, "Is Phil driveling?" Not at all. Robert Schock has retired from the wholesale commission world to accept a position with M. Rice & Co. His friends wish him every success.

Various Notes.

Paul Berkowitz, well and favorably known as a member of the firm of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., reports a strong demand for prepared green foliage, fern fronds, Sprengeri, and plumosus asparagus. His firm will make a specialty of St. Valentine's day boxes.

John Montgomery has taken charge of his son, J. T. Montgomery's place at Toughkenamon, Pa. Carnations and smilax are the chief crops.

Walter P. Stokes sent a heavy cut of Easter lilies to this market for the holidays.

John P. Habermehl, commenting on the New Year's business, said a decided improvement was noticed at the Bellevue-Stratford, New Year's being fully equal to that holiday when it was at its best some years ago. The demand was chiefly for gifts, violets being especially favored.

Eugene Weiss, of Hatboro, Pa., who has been ill for a fortnight, is happily recovering.

The Robert Craig Co. has a fine thing in the scarlet seedling carnation, Red Wing. It is planted closer than most varieties on the bench, and appears a fine producer of good salable flowers of a brighter scarlet than Beacon, a bread and butter sort, so to speak.

J. Otto Thilow, secretary of the Henry A. Dreer Co., will speak before the students at State College, near Bellefonte, Pa., January 15, his subject being "Civic Improvement."

The Henry F. Michell Co. has received a large importation of begonias and gloxinias.

Sydney Bayersdorfer has returned from a successful southern trip. The florists in the cities he visited are expecting a busy month in February.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had a handsome decoration at the Mercantile Club January 11, for the wedding of Miss Weiner.

George A. Strohlein arrived at Plymouth, England, January 11.

Robt. Scott & Son have been experimenting with the mechanical watering system in a rose house on their place at Sharon Hill. The mechanical device is only used in summer.

Robert A. Stewart, Jr., made a hit with his hemlock wreaths and crescent at Christmas.

Berger Bros. are making a specialty of Easter lilies for the decorator.

The Century Flower Shop had a special Killarney sale January 9 that proved quite successful. PHIL.

The Market.

Conditions are not so satisfactory as could be wished. Prices have dropped during the last few days. The continued open weather has been instrumental in keeping the market heavily stocked and, while there is now a good demand for social functions, it is insufficient to entirely absorb the supply. Roses are good and not overabundant. Killarney is now the most popular variety, followed by Richmond and Beauty. Carnations have dropped and are again to be had at $1 per hundred. Some of the leaders at present are Beacon, Fenn, Victory, Afterglow, Winsor, Enchantress, White Perfection and Octoroon. Violets are rather more plentiful and have likewise fallen in value.

Sweet peas are constantly improving. In bulbous stock, quite a few La Reine tulips are arriving, also some Cottage Maid. Golden Spur narcissus is also coming in more freely. Freesia is quite plentiful. Lilium longiflorum is of good quality. Speciosum is abundant, but does not sell well. About all of it appears to be the rubrum type. The white would sell better. Mignonette is good. Gardenias are scarce. Cattleyas and Cypripedium insigne are in good supply. No change in asparagus, adiantum and other green goods supplies.

Various Notes.

The executive committee have all plans perfected for ladies' night at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, January 19, and the entertainment will be the best ever offered on a similar occasion. An attendance of 400 is anticipated. There will be fine exhibits and a host of other attractive features, which no one can afford to miss.

There was a large and interested audience at Horticultural hall January 9 to hear W. H. Bowker speak on "The Yeast of the Soil." Quite a lengthy discussion followed the lecture, mainly devoted to the comparative values of stable manure and commercial fertilizers.

The two flower markets are busy on preparation of their schedules for the coming trade shows. Quite a number of valuable cups and other specials have been promised.

We are having some real winter weather, but business is reported as good, especially among those who decorate for large receptions and weddings; they have been unusually busy with this sort of work since the first of the year. The downtown stores have been exceptionally busy with funeral work.

Roses were not so plentiful and cleaned up fairly well each day. Good Beauties were in demand. Romans and Paper White narcissi are plentiful. has become the Kalisch Bros. Floral Co. The company is incorporated for $20,000. The father, William Kalisch, has retired and the new company consists of Edward Kalisch, John Kalisch and Mrs. Kalisch, their mother. Edward Kalisch reports a good business since the holidays. He left for Chicago Monday night, January 11, on a business trip.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, was a caller last week. Mr. Ammann is secretary of the Illinois State Florists' Association and invites any of the trade to attend the meeting of the society at Springfield, Ill., February 16 and 17. Mr. Ammann reports business good at his Edwardsville and Alton stores.

A number of local florists and the St. Louis Horticultural Society donated many cut flowers to the volunteer theatrical performance at the Olympic theater last week for the benefit of the Italian earthquake relief fund. The sum realized from the sale was quite large.

Henry Baer, of Peoria, and Swan Peterson, of Gibson City, Ill., are consigning fine carnations to C. A. Kuehn. Ed Gurlach, the manager, says cut stock has been rather plentiful since the first of the year.

W. C. Smith, of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., says California violets have been selling fairly well since the New Year. Hugo Gross, W. J. Pilcher and the Ahners, of Kirkwood, are among the heaviest shippers.

William Winter and F. W. Ude, Jr., of Kirkwood, are sending in an extra lot of fine carnations and California violets to H. G. Berning. Mr. Ude has a fine lot of Nelson Fisher carnations this season, including Red Fisher.

The death of our friend, Carew Sanders, last week was a great shock to his many friends in the trade. The account of his death and funeral will be found in the obituary column in this issue.

apolis, should make it known at once to W. C. Young, president of the Florists' Club.

There was quite a good attendance at the Florists' Bowling Club Monday night, January 4, the first bowling in the new year. Secretary Smith will send out notices for ladies' night. J. J. B.

HAMMONTON, N. J.

William Colwell is contemplating adding more houses to his range this season. The plant now consists of seven houses and probably this space will be doubled before spring. Lettuce is his main crop.

J. Murray Bassett, of Packard street, has added a propagating house and potting shed to his already well-equipped place. The new house will be used for dahlias, Mr. Bassett's specialty.

Emile Lelache, of Waterford Works, has two nice houses of violets. The place consists of about six houses, well stocked. Mr. Lelache, does a wholesale and retail business in Camden. He has decided to sell his place at Waterford Works, as business calls him nearer to the city.

H. K.

New Britain, Conn.—Andrew Bromley has just completed another greenhouse 20x40.

I feel that I cannot get along and be up to date without the Review.—W. H. H. Riddle, Butler, Pa.

I consider the Review the only florists' paper in this country for ready reference.—G. V. Gooding, Waterbury, Conn.

Portland, Me.—Miss Mabel Hayes, chief designer for H. A. Harmon, has gone to Georgia for a three week's vacation.

Falls City, Neb.—Simanton & Pence say Christmas business was immense; much better than ever before. They did not have enough stock to supply the demand. Good stuff was wanted. Plants sold well.

Mansfield, O.—Peter Ott is said to be the oldest florist in this city, and he is certainly one of the oldest florists in the state. For more than twenty years he has been the florist for the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, looking after the flower beds all along the line of the road. Mr. Ott celebrates his fifty-first wedding anniversary this month.

Winchendon, Mass.—The greenhouses conducted by William W. Rhuland have been badly damaged by fire. The loss was at first reported as over $4,000, but that estimate, apparently, did not include all the probable injury to the stock from smoke and exposure to the cold. Henry J. Whittemore, from whom Mr. Rhuland leases the greenhouses, is making arrangements for rebuilding and enlarging them.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
Pres. Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. J. Pieters, of Hollister, Cal.

W. W. RAWSON & Co., Boston, are this year celebrating their twenty-fifth anniversary.

ON the boat from Hamburg, reaching New York January 9, Roelker & Son had twenty-five cases of valley pips, and H. F. Darrow five cases.

THE seed trade is a unit in advocating specific duties, but in a good many lines of manufactures the tariff framers are being told that ad valorem duties are the only fair ones.

Now that the best stocks of the Globe varieties of onion seed are down to where they formerly were, it is thought that there will be much less chance of the planter trying to grow his own seed.

THE seed potato prices in some of the catalogues issued early are quite too low compared with the current market price of eating tubers. A change of conditions may even things up before shipping time, however.

THERE has been quite an advance in the price of onions; 60 cents per bushel has been paid at the car during the week. If onions reach $1 per bushel during the next month it will mean a great deal to seedsmen by adding to the demand for onion seed.

THE house committee on agriculture, now at work on the annual appropriation bill, has inserted the usual paragraph providing for the congressional free seed distribution, bids for the stock for which are this week being received at Washington.

J. M. THORBURN & Co., New York, include with this year's general catalogue, which by the way is the one hundred and eighth, an eight page order blank which makes it necessary for the customer to do no more than set down the quantities of vegetable seeds wanted and foot up the cost.

THE stiff cold weather of the past week has kept the onion set shipper guessing. Below zero weather is hard on an onion set shipment that is in transit during this temperature, even though it be contained in a refrigerator car. In this connection it is well to again state that frost does not hurt the onion set. The main thing to be remembered is to let them thaw out gradually and spread them out to allow the moisture to dry off.

THE Maine seed-potato crop was short in 1908 and prices are advancing.

WM. F. DREER, of Philadelphia, passed through Chicago January 7, en route to his winter home at Santa Barbara, Cal.

SLUIS SEED STORE, the new firm at 644 West Sixty-third street, Chicago, is preparing to go after the market gardeners' mail order trade.

IT is reported that the winter-flowering sweet peas are being largely taken up in Germany, Anton C. Zvolanek having appointed F. C. Heinemann, of Erfurt, as agent.

THE seed department of the German Nurseries, Beatrice, Neb., was established by Carl Sonderegger three years ago and is growing rapidly. The second year's business was double that of the first, while the business for 1908 has been treble that of 1907. A. H. Luck is in charge of this department and says the prospect is good for a still larger increase this year. At present 100,000 catalogues advertising the nursery and seed departments are being sent out, 65,000 in English and 35,000 in German.

THE whole country seems to be looking toward Chicago for onion sets, both for present shipment and for the coming year's crop. It appears from reports that this crop can only be grown satisfactorily in that vicinity. It is strange that no enterprising concern at other points that might be just as suitable can be located. The Chicago set growers, however, are not complaining and are doing their best to meet the requirements. From present reports, an increased acre-

THE SITUATION IN SEEDS.

Reports generally show the seed trade to be in good shape to take care of the expected large increase of business for 1909. Most of the wholesale and retail catalogues are being circulated and the prices in one correspond with the other, in a manner that is gratifying. Uniform prices are a good thing. The seed buyer will usually give his favorite firm the preference if the prices are equal. There is still a tendency to give new names to articles that are already standards under other names, but if these items have been more carefully grown or more carefully selected it is something of a gain to the planter and works no loss to anyone. Wholesalers report good business and the mail order seedsmen are getting quick response from their catalogues and all hands consider the outlook bright.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending January 2 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto	18	$ 263	Mustard	23	$ 46
Anise	26	373	Poppy	187	1085
Canary	411	660	Rape	25	205
Cardamom	3	364	Sugar beet		2207
Clover	400	9045	Other		20181
Fennel	50	218

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $17,925.

SEED SAMPLES.

For several years the customs officials have been supplying the Department of Agriculture with samples of seeds as per the following order issued by the Treasury Department January 5:

At the request of the Secretary of Agriculture it is directed that, until July 1, 1909, 2-ounce samples of all importations of 100 pounds or more of grass, clover and forage-plant seeds be prepared at the earliest practicable date after entry and forwarded to the seed laboratory, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., labeled with names and addresses of consignors and consignees, name of seed as given in the invoice, and quantity of the consignment.

This is the sixth or seventh successive year that this order has been issued in exactly similar language, but its appearance this year is exciting some of the newspaper correspondents who think it something new; they try to read into it some reference to the proposed pure seed legislation, or the administration of the pure food laws.

TENERIFFE.

The Onion Seed Industry.

The important and, I may say, the only cultivation in the island of Teneriffe which interests American seedsmen is the Teneriffe-grown Bermuda onion seeds.

Onions have been raised in Teneriffe for over 100 years, but the first attempt at exporting the Bermuda onion seed took place about sixty years ago, and the honor of the first exportations is due to Peter S. Reid, of Puerto Cruz, Orotava. Gradually the business began to take some importance, and the cultivation of the Bermuda onion became a regular source of income to agriculturists over here.

Lack of organization in this trade brought along with it bad faith on the part of some of the growers of seeds and seed dealers, who used to buy from small people and then resell to the exporters after all sorts of mixtures had been added. The consequence of such unfair play was getting the exporter into great trouble with customers abroad, who also in turn had to suffer for it.

At present, exporters have all become more conservative, and it is rare to find any complaint with the seeds shipped from here, inasmuch as through a careful selection of source of supply, and by increasing the exporter's own sphere of culture, the acreage now devoted to onions for seed has been reduced considerably as compared with four or five years ago.

It is estimated that in the full boom of this trade about 100 acres of land were cultivated, but nowadays this figure has been brought down to something like fifty acres only; but undoubtedly the seed is much more select, and the stock is becoming purer and purer every year.

Growing the Crops.

Onions are gathered in the month of July and then warehoused until September or October, which is the time for planting to obtain seed the next fall. The land is treated in the same way as for planting potatoes; that is, making furrows about three feet apart, and the onions are planted one foot apart from each other. Before the planting takes place, the land is dressed with stable manure thoroughly mixed up with the soil. The onion plantations are never irrigated soon after the bulbs are in the ground, lest they should be injured, and it is only after the first showers or continuous rains that the bulbs commence their germination.

When the young plants have attained seven to eight inches, the work of cultivating and destroying all weeds is proceeded with. After this, and when the main shoot has taken some strength, farmers raise the soil around each plant, so that the roots may get a firmer hold on the ground and resist the force of the wind.

At this point the onions require the soil to be continually moist, as otherwise, if the plants are left to suffer a long spell of drought, and then water is given them, the result will be the appearance of disease almost immediately, and the crop is absolutely spoiled.

The onion has several enemies in the insect life which during the process of development may make their appearance, for several reasons, among which I may mention that if in the early part of the spring we have continuous rains, followed by a burning sun, the plants get weakened and disease spreads havoc among all plantations, and the heads not growing well, seeds are very scarce and of poor quality.

The grower of onion seeds must have some amount of experience, for if too much animal or mineral manure is put on the soil, and he does not know the habits of the plant, and when water is needed and when not, and other small but important details, he will have lost his money and his whole time. I have known of a case where a grower new at this cultivation planted 100 cwts. of onions and the seed crop was only twenty-five pounds.

Harvesting and Cleaning.

In the month of July the heads full of seeds get ripe, and the operation of collecting the ripe ones is done. The way to know the state of ripeness is when the little flowers open up and show their black seeds.

Once the ripe heads are gathered, they are laid on sheets in the open to dry, and at night are covered to avoid the dew, which would spoil the seeds. In this state they are left to dry in the sun during four to six days, and then they are taken up, and with a wooden hammer these heads are softly beaten down in order to get the seeds out of their envelopes.

The harvesting period lasts about a fortnight, or even more, because all the heads do not mature at the same time, and every day the ripe ones are picked, leaving the others until fully matured. This is an operation which requires much vigilance with the men at work, to be sure that all the seed is properly matured before drying.

Once all is gathered and the seed collected, there is another process to free the seeds from straws, etc. The operation is as follows: The laborers get a sieve on which the seed is put, and, raising said sieve above their heads, they sift the seed, which falls down on the ground, and at the same time the small straws, etc., are carried away by the wind. This is done several times over, but then the seed is not yet absolutely clean, and is carried under roof, where women sift once more the seeds in a finer-mesh sieve.

Sometimes the seeds are strongly adhered to the skins of the heads, and the above operations are not sufficient to free them from impurity. In this case another process has to be put in hand; namely, the water process.

Now, this is one of the most important and risky things to be done in the whole manipulation of the seeds, and, as I will explain later, if the utmost care is not exercised, many evils may arise from the negligence of a few minutes.

Cleaning in Water.

When the onion seeds are to be cleaned this way, they are put into a receptacle full of water, and the little straws and empty seeds will float on the surface, while the seed, cleaned and good, will be deposited at the bottom of the tank.

If by any negligence the seed is left in the water just one quarter of an hour, it will germinate, particularly should the weather be hot and the water get slightly tepid. Naturally, the inexperienced will be surprised to see the small white points on the seeds, but will think nothing more of it, since in being rubbed or dried in the sun, the small white points disappear and the seeds look quite equal to the rest; but such seed has absolutely lost all its natural germinating power, although being quite fresh.

After taking the good seeds out of the tank they are put in the open to dry, but also in this care must be exercised not to make the layer more than half an inch thick, for if it is thicker the sun cannot get down to the first layer of seeds, which, keeping some quantity of moisture, will germinate and spoil.

These operations cannot be left to hired people; they must be done under the very eyes of the farmer, because the least delay will cause great loss and subsequent trouble with everybody handling such seeds.

The regular exporters of seeds have come to understand these things and exercise the most minute supervision over their crops in all details, so that they may be certain of the quality of the product. They will no longer purchase crops of the production of which they have no personal knowledge. Also, they are most careful in the selection of the bulbs for planting for seed purposes, so that there is steady improvement in trueness to type.

BANQUET BY IOWA SEED CO.

A banquet was given at the Chamberlain hotel, Des Moines, Ia., January 4, by the Iowa Seed Co. to the heads of its different departments. Besides the two largest stockholders in the company, there were fourteen employees present at the banquet, each a head of a different department of the concern. C. N. Page, manager of the company, made the principal talk of the evening, urging sociability and friendliness among the different departments of the concern. One fact brought out was that more than half of the heads of the departments own stock in the company. A report for the year up to this time was made. The business for the five months just completed was more than sixty-three per cent above that of the previous year, and that of the last three months was double that for the corresponding months last year.

THE CANNED GOODS PACK.

Statistics of the packs of corn, peas and tomatoes in the United States for the season of 1908, compiled by Frank E. Gorrell, secretary of the National Canners' Association, have just been made public and will be of interest to the seed trade as indicating the enormous extent of the demand for seeds in this industry. The pack is given by states to show distribution. Cases contain two dozen tins.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—Fire broke out shortly after midnight, January 5, in the greenhouses of J. W. Ingalls & Co. When the alarm was turned in the flames had complete possession of one house and had entered the two others belonging to the company. The fire department was able to check the fire, but much of the glass was broken and the stock ruined by the cold weather and water. Mr. Ingalls had not placed any estimate on his loss, but it will amount to several thousands of dollars. Two of the houses were erected last fall.

200,000 feet of glass to Cut Flowers

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

There was quite an improvement in the demand for flowers last week, all special stock being ordered ahead or sold on sight. The social season is now on in earnest. Balls, dinners and weddings are of daily occurrence. One of the largest balls given this season was held at the Belvidere hotel, where red was the chosen color, using 1,500 red roses and 1,500 red carnations, besides an enormous quantity of potted plants. We were visited by a cold wave, but it did not go lower than 16 degrees above zero and only lasted three days. We are now having sultry, cloudy weather, with the temperature around 28 degrees.

Roses show the bad effects of so much cloudy weather, being weak-stemmed and off color. Carnations are equal to the demands. Sweet peas are coming in more plentifully, but move slowly. Jonquils have made their appearance in the markets. Violets are seen in large quantities; even the street fakers have them in large bunches, with prices to suit all. There are now on the market many azaleas which could not be gotten on the market for Christmas. They move slowly.

Various Notes.

Robert Carl, one of the assistants at the Florists' Exchange, has been suffering with what was thought to be blood poisoning. The origin of the trouble was proved to be a piece of glass one inch square, which had been in his hand for five years and was caused by falling through a greenhouse at T. Vincent's, on Baltimore street. The glass was located by the use of X-rays.

The Park Board, after carefully considering the wants of the various public parks and squares in the city, has finally adopted a schedule of such improvements as it proposes making this year. The Guy Strickland has bought the flower store on Broadway and Monument street from W. O. Stran.

E. A. Seidewitz has a large specimen of boxwood trimmed to represent a goose, with a long neck, around which was a red four-in-hand tie. It was placed at the entrance to his store on Charles street. Mr. Seidewitz has one of the largest and best show windows on this prominent thoroughfare. Q.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

With the cold wave which struck this vicinity and brought the mercury down to 17 degrees below zero, business for the first part of last week seemed to be frozen up, but improved considerably by Friday and Saturday. Stock shortened up a good deal, but as business was slack, there was enough to go around, especially in roses and carnations. Beauties, sweet peas, violets and bulbous stock have been plentiful since then, and the same can be said of green goods.

Club Meeting.

Owing to the cold weather, the attendance at the last club meeting, held January 7, was light. The retiring president, Fred Holton, asked C. C. Pollworth to install the new officers, which he did in a most acceptable way. President-elect C. Dallwig then conducted the meeting in a masterly way, which, if kept up, ought to make this one of the club's most successful years.

The matter of a flower show, to be held next fall, came up and a committee of three was appointed to gain information regarding a suitable place, etc., before definite action as to holding a show will be taken.

A letter from the State Board of Agriculture, stating that suggestions would gladly be accepted regarding the alterations of the premium list for this year's state fair, was at hand. This certainly is good news for prospective exhibitors.

The chair appointed the following on the new entertainment committee: Gust Roesch, Will Zimmerman and Eugene Oestreicher. They, in turn, promised to hold a dance in the first part of February.

Various Notes.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. reports a steady cut, especially of carnations, from their own greenhouses. They had no trouble in keeping up the required

The Market.

Business is mighty quiet in this city. We are glad to see almost any kind of a customer come in, no matter how small the order is. Somehow the bottom seems to have dropped out of business, for no special reason. There is no life to the demand. No one seems to want anything. The buyers for the various stores walk into the wholesale houses and don't seem to care whether they buy anything or not. As luck will have it, the supply of stock is not heavy and the greater part of the good stock is sold out at a fair price. There has been a pretty good out-of-town demand, which has helped us a great deal. The small town florist is usually short of stock at this time of the year and we can figure on a pretty good shipping trade.

The weather continues unsettled. We had some pretty cold weather last week and were led to believe that winter had come for sure; but we were mistaken again. It soon warmed up and another touch of spring was here. Now we are promised another big drop in temperature, and I hope that a spell of cold, clear weather is in store for us, so that stock will have a chance to improve a little. The bad weather is making the roses look pretty sick and carnations are showing signs of splitting. Cold weather, with sunshine, is what we need.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Florists' Society on Saturday evening, January 9, was a decided success. It was held at William Murphy's store, on Main street. There were over thirty members present and they got down to business in a way that shows what the Cincinnati boys can do when they get started. Many topics were discussed, all bearing, of course, on the convention of the S. A. F. Finally it was decided to appoint a committee of ten, who will have full charge of the entertainment and various other matters. The following gentlemen were appointed: J. A. Peterson, C. E. Critchell, Albert Sunderbruch, D. Rusconi, Gus. Adrian, J. W. Rodgers, Ed. Forter, Wm. Murphy, R. Witterstaetter and E. G. Gillett.

A meeting of this executive committee will be held Friday, January 15, at 2 p. m., at E. G. Gillett's wholesale house, 131 East Third street.

A special meeting of the Florists' Society will be held at Weiland & Olinger's, 136 East Third street, on Saturday, January 23, at 8 p. m.

After the business session was over, lunch, cigars, etc., were served, through the courtesy of William Murphy and C. E. Critchell, and all turned in with the usual florists' appetites. Everyone had a fine time and is anxious for the next meeting, at Weiland & Olinger's.

Various Notes.

T. W. Hardesty is back at his store, after a siege of the grippe, and R. D. Ruttle is keeping close to a good, warm fire, trying to get rid of an attack of the same trouble. Charles Jones is still confined to his bed and, from what we hear, he is in a pretty bad way. We hope, together with his many friends in this city, that he will be able to weather the storm.

Walter Gray reports having cut his last mums January 7. The variety was Jerome Jones. His first mums were cut October 17.

J. F. Pogue, of Coulthard & Pogue, reports having been done by the no-good check racket. But if they didn't recover the money they got revenge, for Mr. Pogue, on discovering that the check was worthless, started out as a detective and was able to land his man. Now the offender is locked up and his chances of spending a few years in prison are good. Several other counts have been discovered against him. C. J. Ohmer.

PACIFIC COAST.

NARCISSI IN CALIFORNIA.

The scarcity of outside stock after the chrysanthemums have disappeared from the market is always a cause of worry to the florists in the vicinity of San Francisco. There is but little to depend on until the arrival of spring, with its wealth of annuals. The narcissus is practically the only article that can be depended on to supply a pure white flower, and most of the growers handle this valuable bulb so shiftlessly that it is neither an object of revenue nor one of beauty. Of the easiest culture and equally easy sale, it is so often neglected that it does not produce any blossoms until it is brought into competition with quantities of other outside, later blooming stock, and then the prices get so low that it is hardly worth gathering and marketing.

This year furnishes another sample of the carelessness of the growers. Winter rains were very late in commencing and they only paved the way for several weeks of heavy frosts. Consequently, just as the narcissi were well out of the ground, they received such a set-back that it will be several weeks before they will recover enough to make an effort to continue blooming.

The proper way to handle narcissi is to transplant them at least once in three years. Do not plant them too deep in the ground. See that the soil is worked several times during our dry season and give them no water at all before it is time to start them growing for the season's crop of flowers. If we have very early rains, watering is not necessary, but in a vast majority of cases the watering should be commenced about the end of August and several good soakings given at intervals of two weeks each. In this way a crop of flowers can easily be had at Thanksgiving and from that onward until the frosts make them slow to develop into bloom. A portion of the patch should be reserved and covered with lattice frames as soon as the weather becomes severe. In this way, if the bulbs have been previously watered, they can be flowered perfectly with absolutely no trouble or loss and the stems will be much longer than anything grown in the open.

When we have a mild winter, such as that of last season, there is no advantage in using frames, but the early and successive plan of watering should not be neglected, as our rainfall usually does not commence until December, and when, in addition to this, as in the case of the present season, we have a cold snap as well, the season for good prices will long since have departed before the bulbs recover enough to bloom.

A majority of the narcissi growers give their bulbs but little attention and as a consequence they do not blossom until the climatic conditions are favorable, in which case they are one of the poorest paying articles that anyone can devote his ground to. G.

VICTORIA, B. C.

Current Comment.

Holiday trade was good. On Christmas eve the flower stores were practically cleaned out of stock. Better prices were the rule. Carnations sold at $1.50. Holly trade was brisk and great quantities were shipped away this year.

The Fairview Greenhouses showed some excellent poinsettias, fifteen to eighteen inches across. Their mums also were among the best in town. Wilkerson & Brown had a house of mums which came in just right and cleaned right out. A. G. Woodward had a quantity of mums and carnations and also made a clearance.

Wilkerson & Brown have acquired the business on the corner of Fort and Cook streets, recently owned by Hall & Laing, who bought it from J. T. Higgins last April. E. A. W.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business in San Francisco and vicinity is not any livelier than it should be, but it is slightly ahead of that of last year at the corresponding time. The weather has turned warmer than it has been at any time since Christmas and the quantity of flowers brought into town by the growers is on the increase. Carnations can now be bought at from $2 to $3 per hundred for fancy stock. Roses continue high in price and only fair in quality, and there is a decided shortage on white and light colored stock.

Violets are plentiful and are in better color and form than they have been at any time during the season. Quantities of Ard Righ and other kinds of early daffodils are seen and they find quick sale in the shops. Valley is a glut at present. Roman hyacinths do not move as fast as they should do at this season and are not paying the growers very well.

A fine lot of L. longiflorum is in full crop now. They cost the stores from $1.50 to $3 per dozen. Orchids are seen in sufficient quantity in the store windows to make a showing, now that the heavy buying is over. Green stuff and California red berries are still being used largely in the decorations of store windows, and fruit blossoms will be the next item depended on in the decorative line.

Various Notes.

F. W. Winters, for the last three years in the florists' business in Spokane, Wash., is in town on a few weeks' visit.

The greenhouses formerly owned by the late A. Galloway, of Fruitvale, Cal., have been purchased by H. Hayashi, of Fitchburg, and will be removed there in a few weeks.

C. C. Morse & Co. have purchased 160 acres of land at Hayward, Cal., and will devote it to the growing of seeds and general nursery stock.

L. O. Beery, formerly of Los Angeles, has opened a plant sales yard at 101 Valencia street. He has received a large stock of bay trees and specimen boxwoods from Belgium.

Thos. A. Cox, formerly of the Cox Seed Co., has given up his country residence at San Anselmo for the season and will live in town until next spring.

R. D. Hunter, of the Germain Seed Co., Los Angeles, is in town.

Geo. Roeding, the Fresno nurseryman, paid a flying visit to town on New Year's day.

H. W. Brandenstein has been appointed park commissioner by Mayor Taylor.

Peter Thiesen, of Golden Gate, is cutting a lot of elegant freesias at present. He is showing a new seedling that is much admired and has proved to be a good seller. It is of a more waxy substance than the ordinary variety and is borne on a somewhat stiffer stem. G.

M. Sievers has taken a ten-year lease of the store at the northwest corner of Powell and O'Farrell streets, at a total rental of $72,000.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

THE Massachusetts Agricultural Experiment Station has issued a bulletin entitled "Shade Trees," by E. A. Start, G. E. Stone and H. T. Fernald.

CARL SONDEREGGER'S German Nurseries, Beatrice, Neb., sent out nearly forty carloads of stock last year and look forward to an increase in 1909.

A BRIEF note on the death of W. Heins, the German nurseryman from whom large numbers of seedlings are procured, appears in this week's obituary column.

RED CURRANT bushes may be pruned in the same way as gooseberry bushes. A peculiarity of the red currant is that it will thrive in more shade than almost any other small fruit tree.

IN pruning peach trees that are trained to walls or wire trellises, all the old wood should be sacrificed, in order to give plenty of room to tie in as much as possible of the wood of last season's growth. Care should also be taken to encourage young growth from the base, so as to keep the whole tree well supplied with fruiting wood.

LILACS.

How does one proceed to grow lilacs from their own roots? R. G.

In regard to the growing of French lilacs, it would not pay to grow them from cuttings. They are usually grown budded or grafted. The California privet is a favorite stock used to graft them on, and they can be treated in about the same manner as that pursued by the nurserymen in root-grafting apples.

January and February are good months to graft. When done, keep them in a cool cellar, where they will not start, and plant them outside early in spring. They can be tied in bundles of ten or more after grafting and packed in moss or clear sawdust. Plant so the union is a couple of inches underground, or even a little deeper if the soil is light, and under favorable conditions they make fine stock for forcing in two years.

The Persian lilacs are the kind that root readily from hard wood cuttings. Wood of them of the past season's growth can be cut into lengths of about four inches and cuttings planted in sand in a cool greenhouse. If made now they would be rooted early in March. They could then be potted in 2½-inch or 3-inch pots and would be ready to plant in the field during May. In good soil they should grow two feet or more by the fall of 1909 and if wanted for forcing could be dug and potted in October and would bloom in the spring of 1910.

ANTOINE WINTZER.

SAN JOSE SCALE.

Time to Apply Remedies.

Although the San Jose scale occurs on a great many kinds of deciduous trees, its ravages are much more pronounced on pear, apple and peach trees than on any others. Peach trees are special favorites of this pernicious insect, and are apparently less able to withstand its attacks than either of the others. Now is the time to apply remedies for this scale, as well as for many other insect pests. In summer, when the trees are in full leaf, if the scale has survived from the winter, in no matter how small a number, it will get its most deadly work in without halt or hindrance, simply because nothing that will kill the scale can at that time be applied with safety.

The insect lives in winter protected by the scale. The males emerge in May, and in June the females begin to bring forth a new generation and continue to produce young for five or six weeks, or until their death. The young are hatched inside the insect, and on their entrance into the outer world they crawl about for a short period and then stick their beaks into the bark and forthwith cover themselves with the waxy scale that thereafter forms their protection. The females mature in thirty days, and in a few days more produce young.

The scale is enormously prolific, so much so that authorities declare that the descendants of one female in one season will reach several billions. The rapidity with which the scale multiplies should be of itself enough to make owners of fruit and other trees vigilant at a time when vigilance counts for so much.

Hardy Roses and Ramblers

FOR FORCING

The right time to buy Roses is when they are fresh and well-ripened. Roses potted up in the Fall or late Winter become better established and force better, and are far more satisfactory in every way, and you can retard or force at your leisure. We recommend the American-grown "Ramblers." Don't attempt to force imported Ramblers; the general experience is that they are failures.

HARDY PERPETUAL ROSES

We offer extra strong forcing two-year-old dormant, low budded stock, in the following varieties, true to name:

The Lime-Sulphur Solution.

There are many remedies, home-made and in the market, for destroying San Jose scale, but the one that is easiest of preparation, and perhaps fully as effective as any, is the lime, sulphur and salt solution, which is prepared as follows: Lime, unslaked, twenty pounds; sulphur (flowers), eighteen to twenty pounds; salt, eight pounds; water, sixty gallons. Slake the lime in five or six gallons of hot water, using an iron kettle with a capacity of twenty-five or thirty gallons. While the lime is slaking, sift in the sulphur gradually at the same time, keeping the mixture stirred and adding enough water to make a thick paste. Then add the salt and about ten gallons of water, and boil for nearly an hour. Pour through a strainer made of tin or brass wire, sixteen meshes to the inch. Add water to make sixty gallons, and the mixture is fit for use. Larger or smaller quantities can be made in the same proportions.

The nature of the insect makes it evident that if it is to be destroyed the agency of destruction must be so thorough in its work that not one can escape; otherwise further trouble may be looked for. D. M.

.....ROSES.....

BUYING RADISH SEED.

No forcing radish has ever been found to be superior to the old Scarlet Globe Short Top when really good, select stock is grown for seed, but seedsmen have so many high sounding names attached to every old thing in stock that the gardener cannot tell whether he is getting extra quality or regular grade by the names on the package.

The right way for all hothouse growers to do is to get acquainted with their seedsmen and explain what they want. The seedsman knows how much more "finest quality" means to the grower under such heavy expense, and he can furnish a really select lot of seed at a very little more cost than regular grade and a better investment cannot be made.

STEM-ROT OF LETTUCE.

I have made a business of lettuce under glass for four years and have read with interest everything in the REVIEW on the subject. In the issue of January 7 a correspondent gives an account of his troubles with stem-rot. One cannot grow lettuce without facing this difficulty. Last year I had a bench 4x50 feet sown to lettuce. As soon as the seeds were well on the way, they began to bend over, though the cotyledons were still plump and firm. Nearly one-third at one end of the bench perished by the time the second leaf was a half inch long.

I used nitrate of soda, one heaping teaspoon to the gallon of water, and gave a liberal top watering; at the end of a week the stem-rot had called a halt. After two more applications, a week apart, I advertised, two insertions, in the REVIEW, and sold from that bench 10,000 as fine, healthy and thrifty plants as were ever marketed. I would like others to try the remedy and report.

I would say, further, that I never try to grow lettuce without the application of the nitrate of soda on first appearance of the trouble, and diseased patches are never seen in my beds. I have used the same soil three years, and the lettuce is perfect this year.

W. L. LEEKA.

MUSHROOMS VS. TOADSTOOLS.

I would like to ask if there is any sure way of knowing a mushroom from a so-called toadstool, either by location in which it is found or by the form of fruit. I find lots of these coming up in my lettuce bed, and although they are just like the pictures of mushrooms in catalogues, I would like to be sure, if possible, as I have enough for some profit. They look like big white balls pushing through the soil. I thought that from the sod and manure they had germinated themselves, as I understand that is the way spawn is produced.

C. A. S.

There is an old saying that the only sure way of telling mushrooms from toadstools is by eating them. If you live, they are true mushrooms; if you die, they must have been toadstools. A great many, however, of the so-called toadstools, or fungi, are edible and of excellent quality, some of them equal to the true mushrooms, Agaricus campestris. Many of the latter often appear in lettuce, carnation, rose and other beds where cow, sheep or horse manure has been freely used.

The common mushroom varies considerably in appearance, both according to soil, locality and the spawn from which it was grown. Those produced from American pure culture spawn are thicker-stemmed and heavier than the English Milltrack variety, the one most largely grown in Europe and America. The fleshy head is smooth or scaly on the upper surface, varying in color from white to different shades of tawny or fuliginous brown. The gills on the under side of the head are free, at first very pale, changing by gradations in age to pink, purple and brownish black. The stem is white, varied in shape, full, firm, furnished towards the top with a white, persistent ring. Mushrooms for market are usually picked when the gills are pink. They have a distinct odor from any of the other fungi and, with those who know, can readily be distinguished in this way.

FORCING CUCUMBERS.

Raised Benches vs. Solid Beds.

In different localities the growers of hothouse vegetables have many peculiarly different practices, both in the construction of their buildings and in their cultural methods. It seems evident that some pioneer grower in each locality has been the guiding star for all the younger growers or new-comers going into the business in that locality. If a grower appears to be successful in the business, others quickly follow his methods in every detail; so it is that in each forcing house community the places are all on one plan and quite different from the ways of growers of another locality.

For instance, in forcing cucumbers, the growers about London, England, grow their cukes on raised beds, in narrow houses, with only two benches in a house and the vines trained overhead, A-shape, parallel to the roof. In this country the methods are quite different. In the eastern states, especially around Boston, Mass., the growers all have wide houses, thirty to fifty feet across, and running east and west, with a shed roof or long span to the south. In these houses six to eight rows of vines are grown. The beds are not raised, but made on the solid ground. In the western states the houses are built in connected ranges, with several houses in a section and no partitions between them. The houses are from twenty-five to thirty feet in width and they are equipped with raised benches, exactly as for growing cut flowers.

In an argument on greenhouse construction, an old, successful grower recently remarked that the style of house did not matter much, if only it was high and light. The problem of benches or beds is far more of a study. The cost of building is far greater for raised benches than for solid beds, and if solid beds are as good, then why build raised beds?

Solid Beds Gaining in Favor.

It was not many years ago that it was thought that cucumbers would not grow at all in winter on the low or solid beds, but recently many growers have been getting fine crops from the solid bed houses. Personally, I prefer the low beds. I do believe that in fall or winter the plants on the raised beds do much better, but this one point is offset by their not continuing to bear as well as those grown on solid beds. In spring and summer, when the heaviest crop is grown, the solid beds are certainly to be preferred. The roots have more room and the soil does not dry out and bake hard, as it does in the raised benches in extremely warm weather.

When some one gets a more satisfactory method than we now have for generating heat under solid beds, to warm the soil somewhat when desired, in the cold, dark winter months, then solid beds will become more popular than they are now. I am anxiously awaiting developments in the experiments of running an electric wire along under the rows, but I fear that the expense for electricity would put this idea out of the question.

TRI-CITIES.

Current Comment.

Jack Frost visited the Tri-Cities last week. The temperature went to 14 degrees below zero on Wednesday morning and hovered around 5 and 6 degrees below all day on Thursday.

George Waekel has been visiting his folks on a farm near here, and called on several of the florists before returning to his duties.

L. Stapp met with an auto accident last week, but, luckily, the damage was confined to the machine. He was speeding his auto toward Moline. When about halfway on his journey, the tires of the machine skidded on the slippery car track, and in a moment a telephone pole interfered and all was over. Mr. Stapp was compelled to return to Rock Island's repair shops and take the car back home.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club tonight, January 14, the subject for discussion will be "Fertilizers and Their Uses." H. M.

The Market.

Trade has kept up well since the holidays. The weather is cold, about 14 degrees above zero. Daffodils and tulips have made their appearance and are the first indication of approaching spring.

Various Notes.

The florists are having pretty window displays this week. The Baur Floral Co. has dwarf orange trees in fruit. Offerle & Schaal have Beauty roses, and J. V. Laver has Harrisii lilies on display.

G. H. Baur has won some honors at the University of Pennsylvania. Besides distinguishing himself in other ways, he was chosen on the debating team which is to compete with all the large colleges.

Elmer Chester has re-entered professional life. He is traveling with a theatrical company in vaudeville. B. P.

PALESTINE, ILL.—E. T. Oldham has been dangerously ill for the last two weeks with rheumatism, grippe and tonsilitis. His mother came and took care of him and the greenhouses. He had a remarkably prosperous business last year, with a better Christmas trade than in any previous year. He reports that there will probably be a greenhouse built next summer at the neighboring town of Robinson.

The Market.

Business continues to be good. Beauties are a little scarce at present. Other roses are in good supply and selling well. There is a fairly good supply of carnations and the demand is also good. Longiflorums of good quality are on the market, but the call for them is a trifle slow. Violets are not moving so well as they did. The demand for bulbous stock is not as good as it might be. Sweet peas, freesias and sweet alyssum of good quality are used in funeral work. Green goods are in good supply and demand.

The weather was cloudy and cold last week in this section, and has shortened stock somewhat.

Various Notes.

The fifty-seventh annual meeting of the Kentucky Horticultural Society is held at La Grange, this week, January 13 and 14.

A visit to Leonard Knight's farm, on the Harrodsburg road, found everything in good shape. Mr. Knight has two houses, 50x350 feet, devoted to vegetables and is harvesting a good crop of lettuce. Twenty-two acres of ground are used for other crops. Another house is being built and will probably be used for violets next year. Beets, spinach and radishes are also grown by him in great quantities.

S. S. Kelley is cutting some good carnations.

August Leclere, at the asylum, has been on the sick list, but is able to be out again.

Fister Bros., on the Maysville road, have a good crop of cauliflower and lettuce.

J. Ferdinand Keller, manager of the J. A. Keller greenhouses, is busy with Easter stock and other work.

R. H. Tacke, superintendent of parks, has been busy with landscape work.

Mr. Moore, the florist at the State University, has been cutting a good crop of Marechal Niel roses.

The Michler Bros. Co. is busy with Easter and spring stock.

Anderson & White say business is good with them. They have a good stock of ferns.

Honaker is cutting good roses and carnations.

J. P. Keller says roses and carnations are in good demand with him. He was also busy with funeral work last week.

The Market.

Trade has been brisk for the last week or so, as there have been a great many receptions and dances, and the numerous debutantes in the last two weeks have aided much in giving the florists plenty to do. On several occasions the decorations were elaborate, and the call for fancy grade stock has therefore been strong since Christmas. There has been a good sprinkling of funeral work, too.

The Killarney rose is coming into favor more and more and promises to be a good rival of the old favorite, Bridesmaid. Violets, sweet peas, valley and, in fact, all fancy stock have been at a premium for the last week.

Various Notes.

The decoration for the inauguration of Governor Harmon was quite elaborate, both at the State House and at Memorial hall, where the ball was held. This was one of the biggest events in years, as there seemed to be unusual enthusiasm shown. The whole city was decorated with flags, bunting, etc., and made a beautiful sight, especially the electric arches, on which many flags were displayed.

The city of Columbus will be called the Arch City in the future, as the electric arches originated in Columbus some years ago and have proven such a good advertisement for the city that the North Side Board of Trade extended the arches several squares farther north some months ago, and now they are to run east and west on Broad street. So it can well be called the Arch City, with several miles of electric arches.

There has been no meeting of the Florists' Club since the holidays, as everybody has been too busy.

The Munk Floral Co. reports that stock is cleaned up daily and a great deal more could be sold.

E. Metzmaier had hard work on several occasions to get enough stock for orders.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. reports heavy business in decorating, etc.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has leased a big portion of the store of the C. T. Phillips Wall Paper Co., 44 North High street, and this will give them plenty of room for their increased business, which outgrew their old quarters at 47 North High street.

Robert Schenck was in the city last week. J. M.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal; closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Delivery begins with December.

CHAS. KNOPF FLORAL CO., Richmond, Ind., and S. J. REUTER & SON, Inc., Westerly, R. I.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50 00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

The Market.

The usual after-holiday depression in business made its appearance last week, and as there was little funeral work, stock piled up early in the week, which always means a cut in prices. There was practically no demand for any kind of cut flowers, and stock had to be forced on the buyer. With dark and cloudy weather prevailing, there has been no heavy cut of anything, and under normal conditions stock would have been cleaned up each day.

Tulips have made their appearance, but are not eagerly sought, on account of the short stems. There are quantities of narcissi, Romans, valley, callas and carnations. The only short cut is on roses, which are a little off crop, but there is still plenty to supply the demand. Violets, heretofore in short supply, are also to be had in quantity. Beauties are scarce and poor.

On Saturday, January 9, the street faker made his appearance on the downtown streets—an unusual condition for so early in the season, at least in Cleveland.

Various Notes.

Robert Kegg has been sending in some fine stevia, as well as a good cut of Enchantress carnations.

F. R. Williams is taking a winter vacation in the south, spending some time in Florida as well as making a trip to Cuba and the places of interest in the vicinity.

Cliff & Son have opened a branch store at the corner of Superior and East Ninety-second streets.

WASHINGTON.

State of Trade.

Business was not so good last week. There is general complaint among the store men. Stock of all kinds is plentiful, roses particularly so.

The Gude Bros. Co. is cutting some of the finest Killarney and Maryland ever seen in this vicinity. A vase of Maryland shown January 8 had stems four feet nine inches long. This firm also is cutting some fine white lilac.

Various Notes.

Geo. Cook had a large dinner for Senator Depew January 5, using 200 Killarney roses and white lilac, and the next day he had another for the same table, using jonquils and mignonette.

At the reception given by Secretary Bonaparte the centerpiece was worth special mention. It was made of yellow roses, cypripediums and oncidiums. Poinsettias were used through the house. The work was done by Z. D. Blackistone.

Clark Bros., on the Bladenburg road, are sending in some good double poinsettias.

Small & Sons had the decoration for the Townsend ball in honor of Miss Ethel Roosevelt. This was an elaborate affair. The decorations extended over the two floors. Lilacs, azaleas and palms, American Beauty and Killarney roses were used by the hundreds. It required six van loads of blooming stuff alone and two loads of palms.

Another affair of last week was the Bachelors' German at the New Willard hotel. The entire banquet hall was done in red and green, poinsettias and Beauties. The 250 corsages were of red carnations and the 250 boutonnieres of the same color.

The regular club meeting for February was ladies' night. At the business meeting Henry Trail, of Frederick, Md.; John Allen and Albert Esch were elected to membership. The flower show committee made its final report, showing a good balance on the right side of the ledger. Gude Bros. Co. exhibited a vase of My Maryland roses, and the awards committee, John Robinson, Geo. Cook and Peter Bisset, gave it a special first-class certificate. After the adjournment there was a program of music and dancing, followed by refreshments.

W. R. Smith, who has been quite ill, is on the mend.

This has been a week of visitors. S. S. Pennock, Mr. Meehan, Mr. Fancourt, Mr. Bayersdorfer, Jr., Martin Reukauf, Mr. Eschner and Mr. Skidelsky, all of Philadelphia, were here. O. O.

Bowling at Flatbush.

The Astoria Florists' Bowling Club journeyed to Flatbush January 7 in Wm. H. Siebrecht's touring car. After visiting the different greenhouses, all sat down to a good supper, and then made for the bowling alleys. Mr. Kessler offered three prizes, two silk umbrellas and a bottle of champagne, the highest three men in the second game to get the prizes. Although Mr. Kessler made the highest score, he did not compete for any of the prizes. The result is shown below:

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Florists and gardeners of Rockford met January 11 at the J. J. Soper greenhouses and organized the Rockford Florists and Gardeners' Association and nominated officers, who will be elected next Monday night, January 18, at the H. W. Buckbee greenhouses. They are: President, C. H. Woolsey; vice-president, J. J. Soper; secretary, S. M. Sadewater; treasurer, C. W. Johnson.

A resolution of sympathy was presented and passed, expressing condolence to J. W. Ingalls, who suffered the loss of two greenhouses and their contents January 7, when they were visited by fire.

The object of the associations is for social and business reasons. Among those present was Louis Bauscher, of Freeport.

The organization starts out with twenty members, but the list will increase rapidly, it is expected.

Greenhouse Heating.

LOCATION OF TANKS.

Why do you recommend attaching the expansion tank to the return near the boiler, rather than to the flow pipe at the highest point? A. B. R.

If the expansion tank were placed at the high point on the riser, the hottest water would be driven into the expansion tank instead of through the system. With the expansion tank on the return, the hot water is driven through the pipes and the expansion is cared for by driving the coolest water in the system into the tank instead of the hottest.

SMALL RISER PREFERABLE.

Many thanks for the piping layout for hot water which you gave me in a recent issue of the Review. I am using a 2-inch flow to feed twelve 1½-inch returns thirty feet long, as you recommended, and think it is going to work all right. A friend tried to persuade me to put in a 3-inch flow, saying there would be too much friction in the 2-inch flow to feed that number of returns, claiming the water would have to run so much faster in the flow pipe. How was he in error? A. B. R.

The small riser induces a rapid flow in the riser, which is merely a conveyor, and allows the work to be done in the returns, which are in reality the radiating pipes. L. C. C.

HEATING A FRAME.

I thought of trying an experiment in the way of heating a hotbed in which I have planted violets. I will try to explain everything as clearly as I can and would like for you to give me an answer to the questions I ask and all the help you can. The bed is 4½x12½ feet, made of 1-inch planks, double walled, with sawdust between. All told, the wall is four inches thick. The bed is on the south side of a shed and the north side of the bed is just about four inches from the wall of the shed. I have the water tank in the shed and run the pipe down and out into a coil in the hotbed. For covering the bed I have used the heaviest grade plant-bed cloth with a good painting of white lead and linseed-oil, which makes it water-proof. I have the covering made in sections and can ventilate when necessary. I can keep the water in the tank boiling hot, or not so hot if necessary. I would like for you to tell me if you think this arrangement will work. If you don't think it will, can you suggest something similar that will? I don't want to fix anything too expensive, but something that will keep the bed warm enough to raise the violets successfully. The covering that I used for the bed lets in considerable light when it is on the bed, about like oiled paper or perhaps more.

T. H.

I do not think your plan for heating the violet frame will work well, if at all. If the heating tank was on a level with the surface of the soil in the bed and the flow pipe was taken out of the top of the tank and the return connected with the bottom, or side near the bottom, you would then have the elements of a heating plant, but you can not well make the water circulate through a loop lower than the heating plant. In fact, I believe the water might be boiled in the tank for some time without modifying the temperature in this loop to any great extent. If the heating plant was in a cellar or pit and the piping on a level with or slightly above the tank it would be all right. L. C. C.

The Review will send the Book of Grafted Roses for 25 cents.

CRACKS IN BOILER.

What can be done to stop a small crack in a cast iron hot water boiler? I have heard that meal put in the boiler would expand and stop the leak.

A. B. R.

It is sometimes almost impossible to stop leaks from small cracks unless they can be closed by rust. Sometimes it is possible to drill the boiler and place a plate on the inside and clamp it tightly against the side of the boiler, using a gasket washer as a cushion. Sometimes stove cement can be used on the outside. It bakes on and closes the crack.

The beginning of the year has been marked by extra good weather, which seems to have encouraged people to buy a few plants, and business in this line is improving. There is a movement on foot to plant trees all over the avenues, parks and banquettes. A considerable number of palms have been planted already, but good shade trees are also needed. The trouble is that the selection of the sorts to plant is not always right. The sur-

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

The new year opened with a rush of work for the florists and decorators, the numerous coming out balls, together with receptions, dinners, teas and other social functions, making a decided improvement in the local situation. Then, too, the inauguration of state officials, as well as of the municipal governments of the five cities, also stimulated the demand for cut flowers and floral designs. It is conservatively estimated that at the inaugurations of 1908 more than $2,000 worth of floral work fell to the florists, being well scattered among the leading firms of the five cities, Providence, naturally, receiving the cream. This year the record of 1908 was left far in the rear and few years have witnessed such rich displays as were to be seen when the new legislative bodies took up their duties.

Various Notes.

There were forty-six designs and bouquets at the funeral of Ira E. Goff, January 9. These included several emblematic pieces from various associations with which the young man was affiliated. Mrs. A. Olsen, of East Providence, furnished seventeen of the pieces.

John Gunn, of the Pine Grove Conservatories, Woonsocket, reports a big run on potted plants and funeral pieces.

Simon Colitz, of the Rustic Flower Store, has removed from 75 Main street to 306 Main street, Woonsocket. Previous to his removal he conducted a successful auction sale.

Fred B. Luther furnished the handsome floral arch of maidenhair and American Beauties that was presented to Mayor Fletcher on inauguration day by the Central Club.

W. B. Hazard furnished the immense fac-simile of the state seal that was presented to Governor Pothier. The anchor was of violets and the outline of the seal was of carnations.

Edward Brooks and O'Connor have been especially busy with elaborate decorations since Christmas.

The floral pieces received by Governor Pothier on inauguration day were sent by him to the Church of the Holy Ghost to decorate the altars on the occasion of pontifical requiem mass for the repose of the souls of those who lost their lives in the Italian earthquake.

At the inaugurations of state and city officers, O. H. Williams & Son had eight bouquets and four baskets; John F. Wood had six bouquets and four baskets; William Appleton had nine pieces; MacNair, eleven; William Chappell, seven; James B. Canning, seven, and others similar numbers.

Mrs. A. Olsen, of East Providence, is bringing in some fine callas, cutting an average of about fifteen dozen each week.

LENOX, MASS.

The evening being an ideal one, on Saturday, January 2, the members of the Lenox Horticultural Society turned out in full force to support the newly elected officers, which argues well for the new year. The meeting was full of interest from start to finish. Allan Jenkins occupied the chair. Arthur Reseaux and James Dennie were elected active members. Percy Ellings was unanimously elected assistant secretary.

It was voted to hold the society's annual ball, which is always looked forward to with much interest in Lenox and its vicinity; also a dinner. The committee for the former consisted of J. Clifford, H. P. Wookey and W. Jack; for the latter, E. Jenkins, A. H. Wingett, A. J. Loveless, S. Carlquist and F. Herremans. The dates are to be decided by the committees.

The following question was asked and created lively discussion: What is the proper depth to lay drain tile? The depth recommended by those present, for average soils, was from three to four feet, from thirty to forty feet apart, though instances were mentioned where drains laid to the depth of four feet, in heavy clay soils, had failed to bring about the desired result. From two and a half to three feet, in heavy, tenacious soils, had been found more satisfactory. It must be taken for granted that the shallower the drains are laid the closer they should be together. For instance, drains laid at the depth of four feet should be effective for a distance of twenty feet on either side; consequently forty feet apart is considered the proper distance, while drains laid at a depth of three feet or less should be correspondingly closer together.

Another question was: Is bleeding injurious to vines or trees? The general opinion was that bleeding, as it is understood horticulturally, is not necessarily dangerous to vines or trees in a thoroughly healthy condition, and while it is not recommended to willfully prune vines or trees at a time when they are apt to bleed, numerous instances were cited where maple and birch trees had bled quite profusely and yet showed no signs of material injury.

Still another question was: Why are standard fruit trees planted in preference to pyramid or bush? The consensus of opinion was that pyramid or bush trees are preferable to standards in many ways, chiefly because nearly three times as many can be planted per acre, they are much easier to prune and keep clean, can be got into full bearing in less time and produce better fruit, though they are not so long-lived as standards.

The Best Investment Any Beginner Can Make

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO., Caxton Building, 334 Dearborn St., CHICAGO

MONTREAL.

The Market.

After a week of mild and sloppy weather, we are now getting a cold spell, with the thermometer down to 12 degrees below zero. On the whole, the weather has been very agreeable so far.

Since the holidays trade has continued to keep up splendidly and stock is in fine condition. Funeral work in large quantities, with many big designs, is keeping us all busy.

Various Notes.

We report, with sorrow, the death of Mr. Hall, father of the well-known member of the firm of Hall & Robinson.

A serious loss occurred this week to Mrs. White, when fire destroyed her pretty little bower. She has arranged to carry on her business as usual a few doors west of her store, and we hope the loss will soon be recovered. She deserves great credit for the attractive way she had decorated her place for the holidays.

A recent letter from F. Bennett reports him to be doing well in Victoria, B. C. Mr. Bennett is growing some beautiful roses, especially the Mrs. Jardine variety. His carnations are also in fine shape.

Campbell's report "lots of work and good stock."

The Canadian Floral Co. keeps its windows among the most attractive in Montreal.

C. Smith, of Lachine, says it is easy to dispose of all his stock.

J. Bennett has some good mushrooms at present, some of them weighing nearly half a pound each. TOMMY.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Business has been rather poor since Christmas. New Year's day trade was disappointing. Roses and carnations are plentiful and are selling at low prices. Other stock also is abundant. A few tulips are coming in, but are not in demand. There also is enough green goods on the market. The weather has been rather changeable. Wednesday and Thursday, January 6 and 7, were quite cold, but Sunday we had summer time again. K. R.

LOUISIANA RED CYPRESS

"The Wood that Won't Rot"

Described by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.

"Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our Greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has all rotted out. We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years, while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve years. We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose. BASSETT & WASHBURN."

Ask your dealer for Louisiana Red Cypress and if he hasn't got it, get him to write us, or write us yourself.

The Man from Missouri Says, "Show Me"

We have shown a great many growers, who appreciate the advantages obtained, and the testimonials of such growers should be sufficient to convince those who are nearsighted.

Put on your glasses and watch the future testimonials of satisfied customers, if you have overlooked the past ones.

Bear in mind that we are headquarters and solicit your business for greenhouse material.

We anticipate a large demand this season. Orders aggregating over 16,000 feet of gutter were placed with us during the month of December.

Is your order included in the above? If not, why not?

Nothing is saved by waiting.

Therefore, write at once for an estimate on your next addition, to the Gentlemen:

We have used the Garland Valley Gutter and Drip Conductor from the day it was put on the market and have in use now about 14,000 feet.

We find that the very first we installed are still as good as new, have had no breakage and no repairing, which undoubtedly speaks well for your gutter.

Yours respectfully,

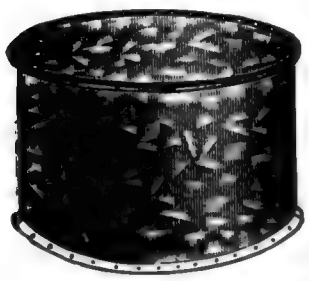
Des Plaines, Ill.

Gentlemen:

We have used the Garland Valley Gutter and Drip Conductor from the day it was put on the market and have in use now about 14,000 feet.



We find that the very first we installed are still as good as new, have had no breakage and no repairing, which undoubtedly speaks well for your gutter.

Yours respectfully,

Marjorie Gould Sets New Style in Bouquets for Debutantes

La Pompadour, Designed by her Clever Mother, takes Society by Storm.

From the New York Evening Journal, January 11, 1909.

What promises to become one of the greatest fads in society is the new floral piece, "La Pompadour," such as was carried by Miss Marjorie Gould, at her coming-out dinner and dance at the Hotel Plaza. The creation, which consists of American Beauty roses, ferns and lilies of the valley, was made by Alex McConnell, society florist.

"La Pompadour" is a loose bunch of flowers arranged in pyramidal form, standing about two feet in height. It required much effort on the part of the young debutante to carry it.

Miss Gould's floral piece was the idea of her talented mother, Mrs. George Gould. She wished for something elegant but plain, and with the aid of Mr. McConnell, designed "La Pompadour."

Bordering the roses is a fringe of lilies of the valley that fall over a ruche of blush pink chiffon spangles with crystal dew drops. This is fitted into a holder of lace made of blush chiffon on which a lace design is painted in white. The latter is puffed and shirred and has the artistic French touch, which makes the new creation one of the most exquisite floral designs known. Tied around the stem is a broad pink satin ribbon, veiled with dew drop chiffon, making a big bow with long ends.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS. Infringers will be prosecuted. We are the originators and sole distributors of the genuine Sparkling Dew Drop Chiffon, REGISTERED IN THE UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE. Write for samples.

THE VACANT CHAIR.

The chair of roses and orchids is an elaborate design, requiring much careful work, savoring more of the mechanical than of the artistic. It is, however, a necessary design in that it is often called for, and the illustration gives it in its least hideous form. It is one of the funeral designs by Charles Henry Fox, photographed at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. Mr. Fox's expression when shown this photograph said more clearly than words: "I sometimes have to do this sort of thing, though I wish it were otherwise." PHIL.

STEAM ON SHOW WINDOWS.

What can be done to keep the steam and frost from forming on a florist's show window? C. B.

You will find that in any store in which the air is warmer than outdoors, the windows will at times be covered with steam, especially during the winter months. Even in dry-goods and clothing stores, where there is practically no dampness, they experience the same trouble.

This steaming of the windows is due to the condensation of the watery vapors in the atmosphere, this condensation being brought about by the vapors coming in contact with the glass, which is colder than the interior of the room. Grocers and butchers have much trouble with steam on the windows, but florists probably get the limit.

During severe weather this continual moisture on the glass freezes and one layer upon the other is formed, in time producing a heavy coating of ice, usually thickest at the bottom, for the moisture has a tendency to run down on the glass.

There are various schemes for obviating this trouble by causing a passage of air on the inside of the windows, as, for instance, small ventilators at the top of the windows, or a number of holes drilled through the window-frame at the bottom. Electric fans in motion are also resorted to, but this scheme can hardly be adopted in a florist's window. This current of air prevents steaming, as it produces a continual change in the layer of air coming in contact with the glass.

Some florists have their windows constructed in such a way that there is an opening between the floor of the window and the sill, and warm air from a steam or hot water pipe underneath the floor of the window coming through this opening prevents the steam from freezing or obscuring the view.

Unless your windows are so constructed as to prevent steam forming, you will have to resort to other methods. An application of a solution of two-thirds alcohol and one-third glycerine applied lightly to the glass will keep the moisture from freezing, but this solution is in itself a nuisance, as it gives the glass an unclear appearance.

I have found the best cure to be cold water applied freely to the glass. Just take an ordinary sprayer and flood some water down the inside of the window. Doing this once or twice a day, usually toward evening, you will find sufficient.

Should the window be so constructed that water cannot be applied freely, then the only remedy I can suggest is to wipe off the steam from time to time with a cold sponge or cloth. H. S.

[If any reader has a better method, the REVIEW would be glad to receive a letter describing it.]

THE ART OF BUYING.

I give my ideas on buying not as an expert, but timidly, with the knowledge that it is the bachelor who writes on "How to Bring Up Children." Yet there is encouragement in the thought that it is the married people who read what the bachelor writes, showing clearly that they know the difficulty of the problem and are eager for suggestions that may aid them in its solution.

The vast increase in the production and consumption of cut flowers has created a field for the buyer; a position requiring as much judgment, tact and, above all, knowledge as any position for which many men devote four years of college training. A past master in the art of buying is as deserving the degree of B. A. as is a college graduate.

The principal requirements for a successful buyer are: First, the ability to locate stock of the desired quality and quantity to meet his special needs; second, the ability to attract and hold the seller; third, the ability to gauge the market correctly.

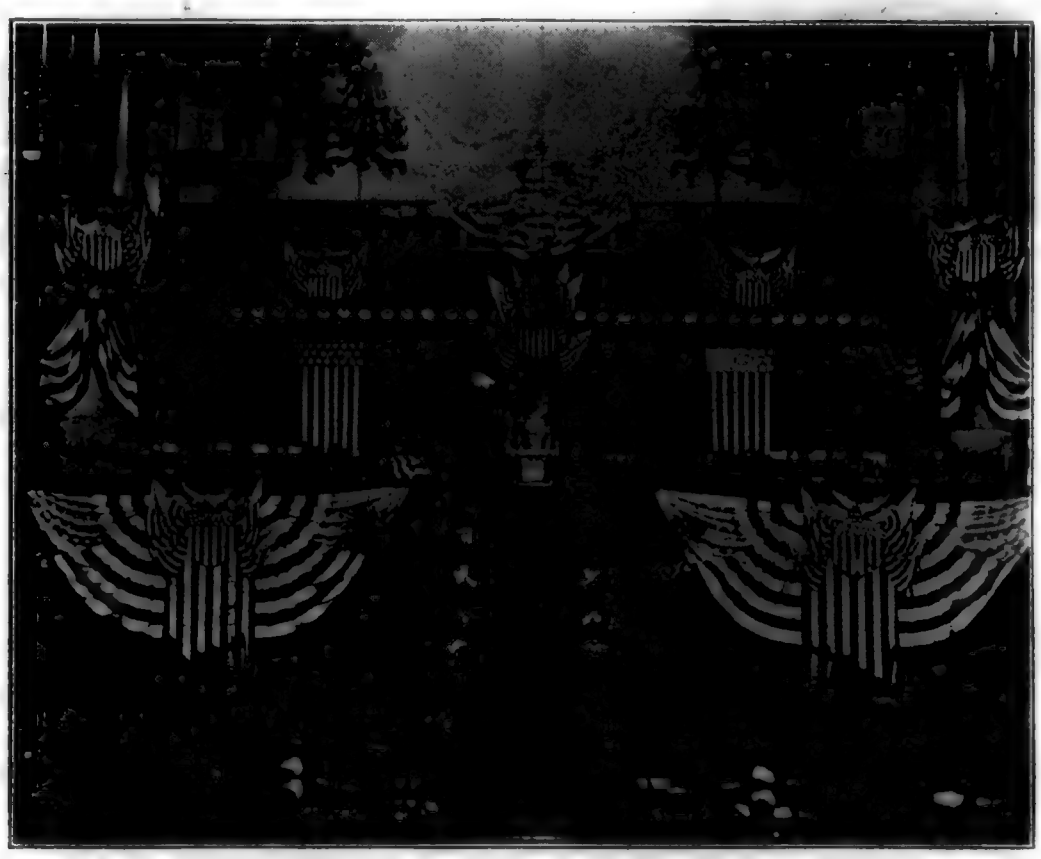
Perhaps the best way to bring out the first point clearly is to narrate a little incident that occurred a few years ago at the opening of the flower season. A salesman offered one of the brightest Philadelphia buyers a bunch of American Beauty roses of unimpeachable quality. The buyer was evidently pleased, but he asked one question: "How many plants have you?" The answer was unsatisfactory, showing that the stock was not sufficient to produce a steady supply of Beauties when they were most needed. The buyer at once declined and purchased what he needed from a salesman whose stock and record warranted the belief that his roses would be forthcoming in midwinter.

The second point, perhaps, is one of personality combined with a certain amount of fair dealing, of geniality. Stating clearly what is wanted and settling promptly when settlement is due are important factors. An able buyer will not find fault unnecessarily or demand impossibilities. He accepts conditions as he finds them and makes the best of the material offered.

The third point is probably the most important of all, for the market is subject to such extraordinary fluctuations that even the best buyers must be caught at times. A clever buyer never admits, even by a wink of an eyelid, that he has overbought or oversold. Supply and demand may be changed in a moment, and despite the utmost care some unforeseen condition will arise completely destroying all calculations.



There are a few kindergarten rules that the best buyers always observe. They insist on a slip with every order, verify that slip at once, and at once either O. K. it or make their claim. An order, once given, stands. Claims are made only when absolutely necessary; better, far better, not to deal with a man, they say, than to have friction.

The best buyers agree that it is better not to "bear" the market hard in times of overproduction where quality is desired. They could often buy more cheaply than they do, but feel that by doing so the quality would certainly retrograde.

The methods adopted for "bearing" the market during times of scarcity are many and varied. I quote again:

"What a pleasure it must be to you to know when you get up each morning that so many of your flowers are sold absolutely!"

This cheerful comment was from a buyer who was short of some of the stock in question. One cannot help admiring such a buyer. He had the art of seeing and ability of pointing out the salesman's weakest point. The novice would probably have said, "I must have those flowers at once, no matter what they cost," and then might have disputed the bill afterwards. PHIL.

Decoration for Inauguration of New York's Governor.

AN ALBANY DECORATION.

William C. Gloeckner had the decoration in the assembly chamber at the state capitol, Albany, N. Y., when Governor Hughes was inaugurated for the second time. The accompanying illustration gives a better idea of the way the flags were used than it does of the disposition of the plants and cut flowers, but flags were by no means the principal feature of the decoration. Many wagonloads of palms and ferns were used, and over 700 yards of laurel wreathing. Of the cut flowers, the principal feature was a vase of sixty magnificent Killarney on a pedestal near the center of the platform.

WIEGAND'S ESTABLISHMENT.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs made at the establishment of A. Wiegand & Sons, Indianapolis. Two of the pictures show the interior of the store at chrysanthemum time, one of the pictures affording a glimpse into the conservatory. The exterior view shows the store front and show house. The pictures give evidence that Wiegand & Sons have facilities for handling an excellent business, and that their establishment makes a showing likely to attract the best class of trade.

EARLY ASTERS.

What time should asters be sown to be in bloom by the first part of July and what are the best kinds to be forced?

To have asters in flower by July 1, greenhouse treatment will be necessary.

Sow the seeds at once. Good varieties are Queen of the Earlies, known in some seed lists as Queen of the Market, and Comet. The first named I would advise using, as it is a prolific bloomer and the flowers possess rather more substance than the Comet. Prick out in flats when of sufficient size to handle, and from these to benches. Allow the plants eighteen inches between the rows and nine inches between the individual plants. Compost such as you would use for carnations or mums will grow good asters. Give the plants no shade, and a minimum temperature of 48 to 50 degrees when benched. C. W.

EDUCATION IN FLORICULTURE.

A Course in Designing.

What course would you advise for a young man desiring knowledge in the art of floral designing? I am working in a florists' store, but the class of work done does not afford a chance, nor does it cover the finer and higher points of the art. Are there any works treating on the subject? E. J. W.

[If there is any way for this young man to secure the knowledge he seeks, other than hunting another job in a better store, the REVIEW will welcome the opportunity to tell its readers about it. What do you suggest?]

Wanted—A Correspondence Course.

Would you inform me if there are any agricultural schools that give correspondence courses in floriculture or landscape gardening? I have made investigations in regard to several of the correspondence schools, but fail to find anything in that line.

I think correspondence courses in floriculture or landscape gardening would be a great thing, as so many young men who are working at the florists' trade, and expect to follow it as a life business, have no opportunity to attend the Massachusetts Agricultural College, or any other agricultural college, for that matter, but could easily spend an hour or so every day with their text-books and papers.

Good books that treat on all branches of floriculture are obtainable, but books often leave out the details on which success in plant culture depends. A course of this kind would not only give details, but would create an interest in the work. The student could watch the progress he was making and would gain a great amount of encouragement and confidence, and feel that he was accomplishing something.

I believe it would be a great thing if the agricultural colleges would adopt correspondence courses. It would be a great benefit to the young men who have decided to learn this business, and would elevate the florists' trade at large.

BEGONIA REX.

In the REVIEW of December 10 I noticed an article on how to root Rex begonias by cutting the mature leaves in one and two-inch squares, by standing erect in sand in a regular propagating bed. In this article it is directed to pot off "as soon as the little plants appear." I now have 200 Rex begonias started as above. Should I leave them in the sand until the small plant leaves appear above the sand? I have always taken them out of the sand as soon as rooted, but it takes a long while for the small plants to appear and then they grow very slowly. G. C. H.

You will have better success if you let the little plants appear before potting off the portions of leaves. When repotting, use 2-inch pots and a compost of leaf-mold and sand. Give a good bottom heat for a short time and they will grow fast. Remove to a cooler location when rooted around the sides of the little pots. C. W.

WHITE FLY.

I send you a box with some leaves of ageratums, which at times are covered with a little white insect like a little miller or fly. I would like to know what it is and how to kill it. What harm does this white bug do? I have to be careful what I use, as my dwelling is connected with my greenhouse. E. T. O.

The shoots received were infested with white fly, one of the worst pests the florist has to contend with. The only real remedy, one which will exterminate it, is fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas, but situated as you are, with your dwelling attached to the greenhouse, I can hardly advise the use of the gas. The next best remedy I can suggest is syringing your plants with soap and water every third or fourth day. Use any hard soap, one pound to ten gallons of water. Syringing with warm water also kills many of the pests, but if you try the soap and water you will speedily reduce the flies in number.

If at any time you decide to use the gas remedy, you will find the formula in frequent past issues of the REVIEW. Many growers now fumigate with nothing else. C. W.

WHITE KILLARNEY.

As is well known in the trade, the F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., took time by the forelock in the matter of White Killarney rose and last season bought half the stock of the originator, the Waban Rose Conservatories. The accompanying illustration shows one of the splendid big houses at Scarboro devoted to White Killarney. The photograph was taken only a few days ago, just after the house had been inspected by the awards committee of the New York Florists' Club. It was a sight that will gladden the heart of any rose grower and the New York committee gave White Killarney a score of 89 points and recommended the award of the club's certificate.

In F. R. Pierson's eyes there is a special interest attaching to the illustration on this page, showing the vase of White Killarney roses. The receptacle is a specimen of Rookwood pottery and was a Christmas gift, last month, to Mr. Pierson, from his employees at the Tarrytown section of his business. He prizes it above any of the many fine trophies his stock has won on the exhibition tables throughout the country.

ROSE PLANTS TURN YELLOW.

Please state what is the matter with the rose plants sent you today. They are of the variety Bridesmaid and were planted in August in a rather heavy, clayey compost, about one-quarter rotted cow manure. They seemed to start all right and I expected to get fair returns from them by next spring, but about December 15 we noticed that they all acted like the enclosed plants, turning yellow and dying, although an examination of the roots showed them to be in a healthy state. They were planted in solid beds, were not overwatered at any time and were allowed to dry out occasionally. Can we do anything to save them or would you recommend throwing them out? The temperature at night is from 58 to 60 degrees, and in the daytime from 64 to 68 degrees, with all the air possible. Golden Gate and Ivory, grown under the same conditions, are doing nicely. E. T.

After a very careful examination of those plants, I fail to find any trace of disease. The plants seem to have been weak from the start, and when weak stock is planted as late as August it has a hard road to travel. Such stock usually holds up until the short days come, when steady firing has to be kept up, and then the strain is too much for them.

By keeping the surface well stirred up and making no attempt to force by feeding or otherwise, they may do something by spring. The temperature is just right. Ribes.

MILLIPEDS.

I recently received a shipment of Asparagus Sprengeri, and upon investigation found the roots infested by a small army of crustaceous creepers. I am sending you in a bottle a number of live specimens and I would esteem it a favor if you would tell me what they are and how to exterminate them, and also what danger there is of their spreading to other plants. Also, is there danger of their boring into the woodwork of benches, etc.? As a general description I would say of these insects that they at first sight appear to resemble a wireworm, only they are of a dull color, similar to the common wood louse, which they again resemble in being sort of armor-clad, which crunches when crushed under foot. They are slow moving and seem to have difficulty in climbing even the edges of a smooth saucer. They are about three-fourths of an inch long and with nearly an even width of about one-sixteenth of an inch. On each side are so many legs that the common wood louse is not in it. When touched they coil up in a spiral, similar to the way the wood louse rolls into a ball. The infested plants seem honeycombed between the roots and nodules and the pest has such a powerful grip of the jaws that it is quite hard to pick them out with the point of a knife. Sometimes I cut the body in half in trying to get the insect out of its hole. E. M. A.

The crustaceous creepers you received are commonly known as thousand-legs or millipeds. They are common in soil under glass, which has become somewhat old and sour. In tomato houses they are sometimes so abundant as to almost cover the soil surface. I do not find these to be destructive. They can be destroyed by scattering tobacco dust over them when seen on the surface, and I think a watering of some nicotine extract diluted will clean them out of your Sprengeri pots. These are less harmful than the sow bugs or wood lice, with which you are probably well acquainted. C. W.

CEMENT FOR WALK.

In the REVIEW of December 24, page 10, I saw an item about the use of cinders in a concrete wall. Can we use the ashes and cement without the addition of any sand? We have been thinking of putting a walk in front of our greenhouse, and we should like to know how we must mix the cement so that it will stand the passage of a load of coal over it, as we put our coal in from the front.
E. L. B.

When cinders are used for concrete, it is best to sift out the finer ashes and take out the larger clinkers. No sand is required.

I am not quite so certain that this concrete would stand on a sidewalk where heavy loads have to be taken over it. The usual method of mixing with gravel in the proportion of six or seven parts of gravel to one of cement ought to serve for this purpose. RIBES.

CINDERS IN CONCRETE WALLS.

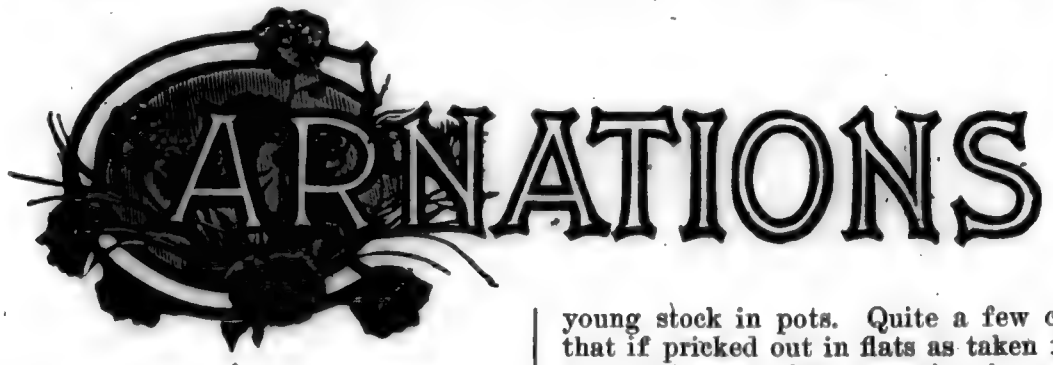
In the REVIEW of December 24, page 10, you tell about making a concrete wall from ashes or cinders and cement. I should like to ask if it is best to sift all fine ashes from the cinders. How thick a wall would be most satisfactory for holding the sides of a greenhouse where the sashbars are sixteen feet long, and would it be best to put a section of woven wire fence through the wall? It seems to me that this is an important question and deserves a thorough reply, for if the florist can work up his cinders into sides for greenhouses, he increases his profits. C. S. M.

It is best to sift out the finer ashes and remove the large clinkers before mixing with cement, as this makes a more uniform concrete and sets more quickly.

As to the thickness of the walls, much depends on how the house is to be braced. If the roof is to have no other support but the walls, in that case the walls will have to be at least twelve inches thick. With center and purlin supports, the walls can be from six to eight inches thick. With well made concrete there is no necessity for any woven wire, although it is safe to imbed some bent piping around the corners.

There is no doubt but that cinders can be utilized for this and many other purposes, such as making benches, etc. It depends a good deal on the ingenuity of the florist. RIBES.

Geraniums



STOCK FOR BEDDING.

Geraniums will now require constant attention. A few days of neglect will seriously cripple the plants, particularly if they are left crowded together. Fall rooted stock should now be nicely established in 3-inch pots and ought to be kept spread out to make the plants sturdy. It will be possible to take tops from many of the strongest, if this has not already been done. Insert these singly in 2-inch pots containing sandy loam, but no manure of any kind. Given some bottom heat and a minimum temperature of 50 to 54 degrees, they should be nicely rooted within three or four weeks. Let them have the full sun and, after the initial soaking watering, run on the dry side until rooted. Better results usually follow this method of propagation than where a regular propagating bench is used. It is a big error to put the cuttings in a bench where you are rooting coleus or crotons, where a night temperature of 65 degrees is maintained. Much of the blight often found on geraniums may be traced to this method of propagation.

It is a great mistake to keep geraniums constantly soaked at the root. Some growers even go the length of spraying the plants over each time the hose is used.

As a matter of fact, they will keep harder and healthier if run a trifle on the dry side. Allow them to get tolerably dry before watering. You will find less diseased foliage if you treat them in this way. A temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night should not be exceeded.

In shifting geraniums, avoid the use of manure not fully rotted and well dried. It is safer to use more bone and less cow manure at the final potting, which should be into 4-inch pots. Do not allow any flowers to be produced yet and remove all moldy or decaying leaves, which will quickly cause others to be affected in damp, sunless weather.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

In the Cutting Bench.

When inserting cuttings in the sand, always begin at a certain end of the bench when facing it—right or left, as may be most convenient, but make a practice of working at all times in the same direction, following the last cutting in a batch with a label denoting the variety, and instead of filling out the row with the beginning of another lot, start a new row at the far side. This may seem somewhat elementary, but failure to observe this simple rule, or a similar one, has led more than one grower to believe himself the fortunate (?) possessor of a sport.

Do not try to see how many cuttings can be gotten into a certain space, but give them breathing room, allowing more for the larger sized.

A common table or putty knife is all that is required to cut the furrows which are to receive the cuttings, and the only guide needed to make them straight is the eye. The late William Scott once remarked that "the man who cannot draw a straight line in the sand across a bench, without a rule, had better go back to washing pots."

Be particular that no leaves, clippings or wilted cuttings are left in the sand to decay. Do not permit discarded cuttings or any vegetable matter to be thrown in the path or under the bench. All such should be removed as found, and destroyed.

In removing a batch of rooted cuttings from the sand, there is an occasional one which has failed to root or possesses but a poor apology for a root. Such may as well be thrown away at once, for although given another trial and induced to root, they are quite sure to lack vigor.

Twenty-one days is considered about the minimum time in which the average carnation cutting should root and be in condition for potting. It is preferable that the process consume a longer period rather than a shorter one, as, if completed sooner, it is safe to conclude that too much heat is being used.

I am not an advocate of allowing the rootlets to attain much length in the sand. Taken up when about one-eighth inch in length, they come away from the sand readily, without injury, and being disposed in natural position around the cutting's base, there is no bunching or cramping of these delicate feeders.

The Question of Pots.

The question arises in the minds of some as to the advisability of growing young stock in pots. Quite a few claim that if pricked out in flats as taken from the sand, much less attention is needed to produce plants equal in size to those grown in pots. Others object to the use of pots on the ground that stock suffers more or less unless shifted, which entails increased expense for labor. We will admit that it is less work to set out and care for rooted cuttings in flats than in pots, also that equally large and even larger plants can be grown by this method. But, while in adopting the pot system we may increase labor, the advantage gained in later operations repays us fourfold, and as to comparison of size in plants the relatively small one is, as a rule, the more desirable.

By the use of pots we are able to give each plant more individual attention, but one great advantage derived is most apparent at housing time, when it will be observed, as the plant is lifted, that the root system, instead of extending over considerable area, is in a compact mass, the original ball quite frequently being intact. This lessens liability of serious check and facilitates rapid benching. If this is given full consideration for its aid in reestablishment, the labor expended in potting falls into insignificance.

Extra early propagation, employment of rich soil and too high temperature are the principal causes of stock outgrowing the pots and needing a shift. In order to secure the desired quantity of stock, extra early propagation is sometimes unavoidable, and, if the varieties are likely to be valuable, a shift will pay, but there is no excuse for using rich soil or maintaining excessive temperature.

I venture the opinion that comparatively few growers realize the benefits to be derived from growing young stock in a low temperature. As soon as the newly potted cuttings are sufficiently established to stand full sun, they should be gradually accustomed to lower temperature, until finally the thermometer of the house in which they are to remain until planted out, registers around 45 to 50 degrees during the day and 35 to 40 degrees at night, with air in abundance. This treatment not only encourages a slow, steady growth, but induces a partial rest, not to mention the value of low temperature as a hindrance to the existence of insect pests.

"CARRIED OVER" CARNATIONS.

At Joliet, Ill., the Chicago Carnation Co. this season tried an experiment with last year's plants which turned out remarkably successful. The stock which was used specially for propagating for the season of 1907-8 was cut back and grown on for blooming for the season of 1908-9. Results to date have been more than satisfactory. For instance, White Enchantress is said to have given fifteen blooms per plant before January 1 and the present condition of the stock assures a fair cut for some time to come.

The plants were cut back in April, after they had been on the benches at least seven months, but it should be noted that they had been grown for cuttings and not pushed for blooms during the dark days of winter. After cutting back, some were treated just as roses to be carried over are handled, a part of the old soil being scraped off and replaced with fresh compost, while some were lifted and planted on another bench in fresh soil. There is to be noted no apparent difference in results by either method. White Enchantress, White Perfection and Beacon each did equally well handled this way.

Manager Pyfer says the Carnation Co. has about 200,000 cuttings in the sand, a good part of the space now carrying its second batch. The demand is running largely to White Enchantress, White Perfection and Beacon. There is some call for Splendor, for Lawson is down and out and there is need for a good pink. The next novelty to run into big figures for sales the year it is sent out will likely be a dark pink. The Chicago Carnation Co. has a variegated that both Mr. Pyfer and Mr. Olsem think will travel. It could be used as a pink when first open, but later is like a good Prosperity. "You know everybody would be growing Prosperity," said Mr. Olsem, "only they can't make it bloom. Well, this will bloom." It is not yet named.

JOTTINGS ON VARIETIES.

Beacon gave five flowers per plant up to January 1, according to the record kept by P. W. Peterson, foreman for the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., at Joliet. He says, moreover, that cuttings of Beacon are thus far in greater demand than any other variety with them, although he looks for an increase in the call for White Enchantress that will, before the end of the season, run its sales up to a total above all others. This year the Thompson Co. has about three times as many White Perfection as White Enchantress, but Mr. Peterson says the proportions will be reversed next season. Up to January 1 White Enchantress had given an average of about one and a half blooms per plant more than Perfection. There is still a good call for cuttings of Enchantress, although it is the one sort everybody is offering. The call for Rose-pink is good, but not so great as last year, nor so great as for White Enchantress, but Mr. Peterson thinks the grower who fills his space with nothing but Enchantress and its sports won't go very far wrong. The plants of Winsor are literally full of good cuttings that the demand thus far does not seem to warrant taking off and rooting.

Mr. Peterson says he finds it worth while taking extra precaution to keep his cuttings from wilting between the time they are taken from the plants and insertion in the sand. When taken from the plants they are not held in the hand, but are placed in small baskets. When a few have been gathered they are taken to a couple of dexterous young women who have a table in the same house. As quickly as twenty-five are trimmed up they are tied in a loose bundle that is stood in a shallow fibrotta pot containing a couple of inches of water. They stay in the water until they go into the sand. The way he has figured out the cost, there is money in rooted cuttings at a good deal less than the prevailing figures and the grower can afford to give this stock the best care of which he is capable.

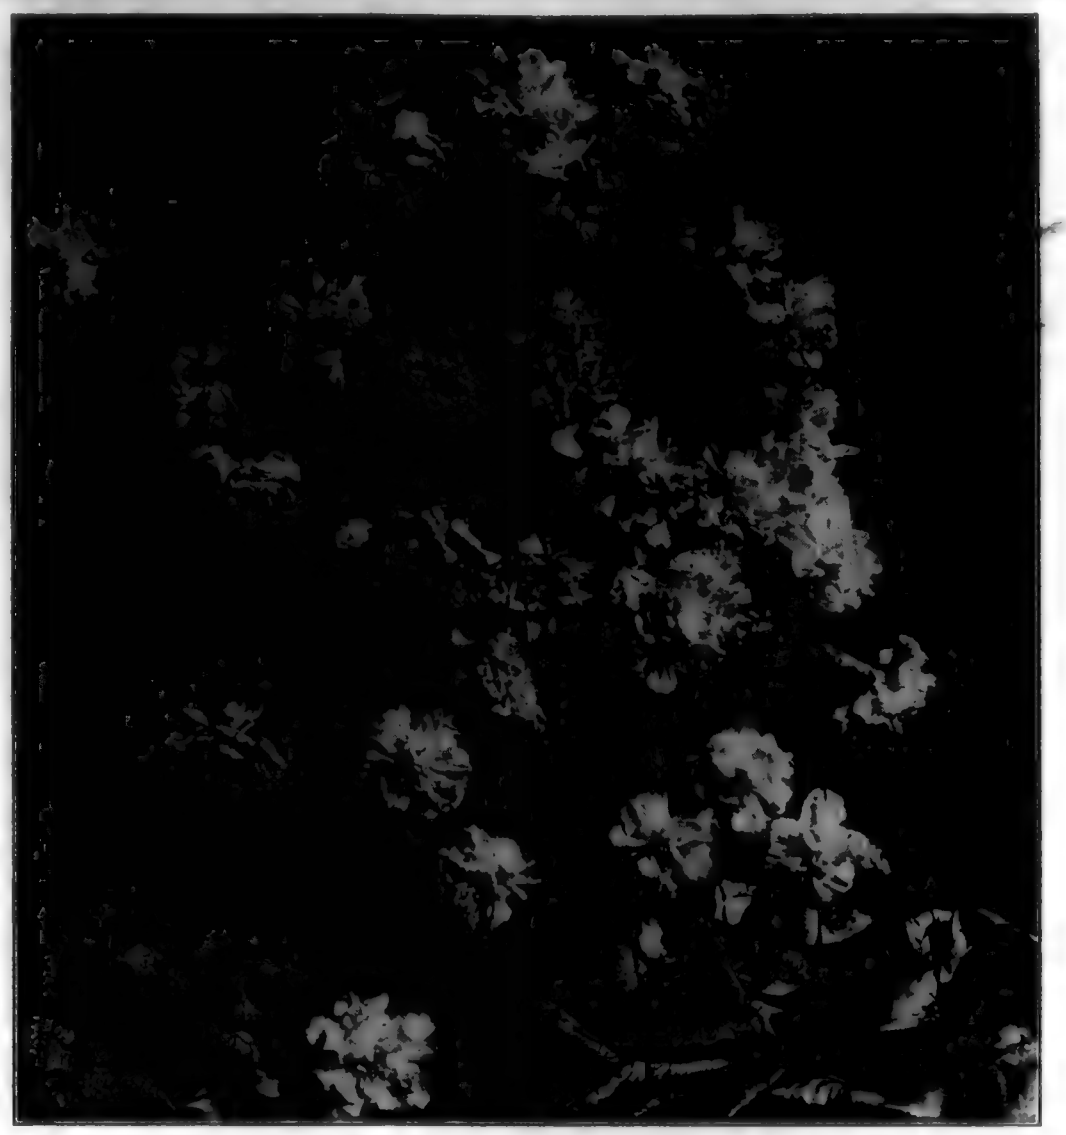
All the stock now flowering with the Thompson Carnation Co. was planted on the benches about the middle of June. This year half the plants will spend the summer in the field.

CARNATION SHOW AT CHICAGO.

Exhibits of Splendid Quality.

The high quality of the exhibits was the notable feature of the carnation show held at the Art Institute, Chicago, January 14, under the joint auspices of the Horticultural Society of Chicago and the Chicago Florists' Club. This was only the second of the series of monthly exhibitions planned by the Horticultural Society and, so far as number of exhibits goes, it not only was a long step in advance of the first of the series but lacked only in the essential element of publicity outside the trade. There was a good attendance of local florists, but not many of the general public knew of the show, and it did little to help the usual daily attendance at the Art Institute. Still, those present found the room containing the flowers the most attractive one in the big building that afternoon.



The showing of novelties was notable. The exhibit from greatest distance was that of Albert Roper, Tewksbury, Mass., who sent his variegated, Bay State, and created a favorable impression. The Wanoka Greenhouses, Barneveld, N. Y., were represented by two of their new ones, Wanoka, crimson, and Apple Blossom, pink and white; flowers of moderate size, but some way giving the impression of floriferousness. From closer at home, F. Dorner & Sons Co. had a fine vase of Pink Delight, shell pink, not a large flower, but one that seems to take the growers' eyes. They also had several unnamed seedlings of promise.

Of the home growers, Hunt Bros., of Evanston, sprung a new one in Mary Tolman, a salmon pink that everybody thought looked good. Highland Park Greenhouses showed Lucille for the first time this season, a large flower on the Prosperity order. The Chicago Carnation Co. showed a striking novelty as No. 55, bright pink but white at the edge of the petals. They also had a good vase of Sarah Hill and a splendid one of White Enchantress. Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association showed Defiance and Greenwood, besides several seedlings under number. Greenwood is a salmon pink that scored eighty-eight points and on the exhibition table looks to be the best thing Mr. Rudd has yet turned out.

Last, but by no means least of the new sorts, were the two reds, O. P. Bassett and W. H. Taft. The Bassett had the most conspicuous corner in the exhibit and was a center of attraction, both for growers and public. Bassett & Washburn also showed two plants of Formosa longiflorums.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. had the largest exhibit of all, including fine vases of eight standard varieties.

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, sent a vase of White Killarney rose, which almost all the growers are adding to their lists this year, and Peter Reinberg was represented by 100 long Beauties that got as much attention from the ladies as a whole table of carnations.

Carnation James Whitcomb Riley.

The Judge's Report.

C. W. Johnson, of Rockford, acted as judge. In his report he gave the newer varieties the following scores:

O. P. Bassett, red, exhibited by Bassett & Washburn, 86 points; Bay State, variegated, by Albert Roper, Tewksbury, Mass., 85; Lucille, variegated, by Highland Park Greenhouses, 81; Sarah Hill, white, by Chicago Carnation Co., 83; No. 55, pink and white, by Chicago Carnation Co., 79; Wm. H. Taft, red, by Scheiden & Schoos, 75; Wanoka, crimson, by Wanoka Greenhouses, Barneveld, N. Y., 81; Apple Blossom, variegated, by Wanoka Greenhouses, 83; Mary Tolman, salmon, by Hunt Bros., Evanston, 82; Pink Delight, shell pink, by F. Dorner & Sons Co., La Fayette, Ind., 84; No. 175-06, red, by F. Dorner & Sons Co., 85; No. 68-06, white, by F. Dorner & Sons Co., 81; No. 6204A, flesh pink, by Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, 81; Greenwood, salmon, by Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, 88; No. 11004C, crimson, by Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, 80.

Of the exhibits not scored Judge Johnson said in his report:

"White Enchantress, Chicago Carnation Co., a fine vase of blooms as regards color, stem and size, but some of the flowers are a little weak and lack in substance.

"Defiance, Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, extra fine color, calyx and stem; flowers a little under size.

"Vase of assorted yellows, F. Dorner & Sons Co.; some good deep yellows in color among them, but lack a little in size; fair stem.

"Vase of seedlings, Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association; some good pinks, whites and scarlets; average size of flowers good, petalage a little soft.

"Poehlmann Bros. Co., Victory, Enchantress, White Lawson, Beacon, Mrs. Lawson, Winsor, White Perfection, Winona; color, extra good; size, medium; stem, good; substance, extra good; calyxes, all good; fragrance, good; worthy of bronze medal.

"Two Formosa lilies, by Bassett & Washburn; size and number of flowers to each plant extra good; stem particularly good; highly commended on all points.

"White Killarney rose, F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.; fine color; substance excellent; stem and foliage particularly vigorous and clean; highly commended.

"Peter Reinberg, 100 American Beauties; flowers of fine color, size and petalage; stem and foliage good; highly commended."

Nick Miller was in charge as manager and was assisted by Henry C. Dunn, who came all the way from Tewksbury, Mass., with Roper's exhibit of Bay State, and who turned in and worked with a will.

WILL VISIT GROWERS.

Among the arrangements for the entertainment of visitors at the Indianapolis carnation convention is a trip to Richmond by way of Cumberland and New Castle. The stop at Cumberland is to be made for the purpose of visiting the greenhouses of Bertermann Bros. Co. The firm has arranged to supply tickets to Cumberland to all who call for them at their store on Massachusetts avenue. One of the illustrations in this issue is an arrangement by Irwin Bertermann, using the firm's new yellow carnation, James Whitcomb Riley.

As a matter of fact, they will keep harder and healthier if run a trifle on the dry side. Allow them to get tolerably dry before watering. You will find less diseased foliage if you treat them in this way. A temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night should not be exceeded.

For instance, White Enchantress is said to have given fifteen blooms per plant before January 1 and the present condition of the stock assures a fair cut for some time to come.

The plants were cut back in April, after they had been on the benches at least seven months, but it should be noted that they had been grown for cuttings and not pushed for blooms during the dark days of winter. After cutting back, some were treated just as roses to be carried over are handled, a part of the old soil being scraped off and replaced with fresh compost, while some were lifted and planted on another bench in fresh soil. There is to be noted no apparent difference in results by either method. White Enchantress, White Perfection and Beacon each did equally well handled this way.

Manager Pyfer says the Carnation Co. has about 200,000 cuttings in the sand, a good part of the space now carrying its second batch. The demand is running largely to White Enchantress, White Perfection and Beacon. There is some call for Splendor, for Lawson is down and out and there is need for a good pink. The next novelty to run into big figures for sales the year it is sent out will likely be a dark pink. The Chicago Carnation Co. has a variegated that both Mr. Pyfer and Mr. Olsem think will travel. It could be used as a pink when first open, but later is like a good Prosperity. "You know everybody would be growing Prosperity," said Mr. Olsem, "only they can't make it bloom. Well, this will bloom." It is not yet named.

JOTTINGS ON VARIETIES.

Beacon gave five flowers per plant up to January 1, according to the record kept by P. W. Peterson, foreman for the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., at Joliet. He says, moreover, that cuttings of Beacon are thus far in greater demand than any other variety with them, although he looks for an increase in the call for White Enchantress that will, before the end of the season, run its sales up to a total above all others. This year the Thompson Co. has about three times as many White Perfection as White Enchantress, but Mr. Peterson says the proportions will be reversed next season. Up to January 1 White Enchantress had given an average of about one and a half blooms per plant more than Perfection. There is still a good call for cuttings of Enchantress, although it is the one sort everybody is offering. The call for Rose-pink is good, but not so great as last year, nor so great as for White Enchantress, but Mr. Peterson thinks the grower who fills his space with nothing but Enchantress and its sports won't go very far wrong. The plants of Winsor are literally full of good cuttings that the demand thus far does not seem to warrant taking off and rooting.

Mr. Peterson says he finds it worth while taking extra precaution to keep his cuttings from wilting between the time they are taken from the plants and insertion in the sand. When taken from the plants they are not held in the hand, but are placed in small baskets. When a few have been gathered they are taken to a couple of dexterous young women who have a table in the same house. As quickly as twenty-five are trimmed up they are tied in a loose bundle that is stood in a shallow fibrotta pot containing a couple of inches of water. They stay in the water until they go into the sand. The way he has figured out the cost, there is money in rooted cuttings at a good deal less than the prevailing figures and the grower can afford to give this stock the best care of which he is capable.

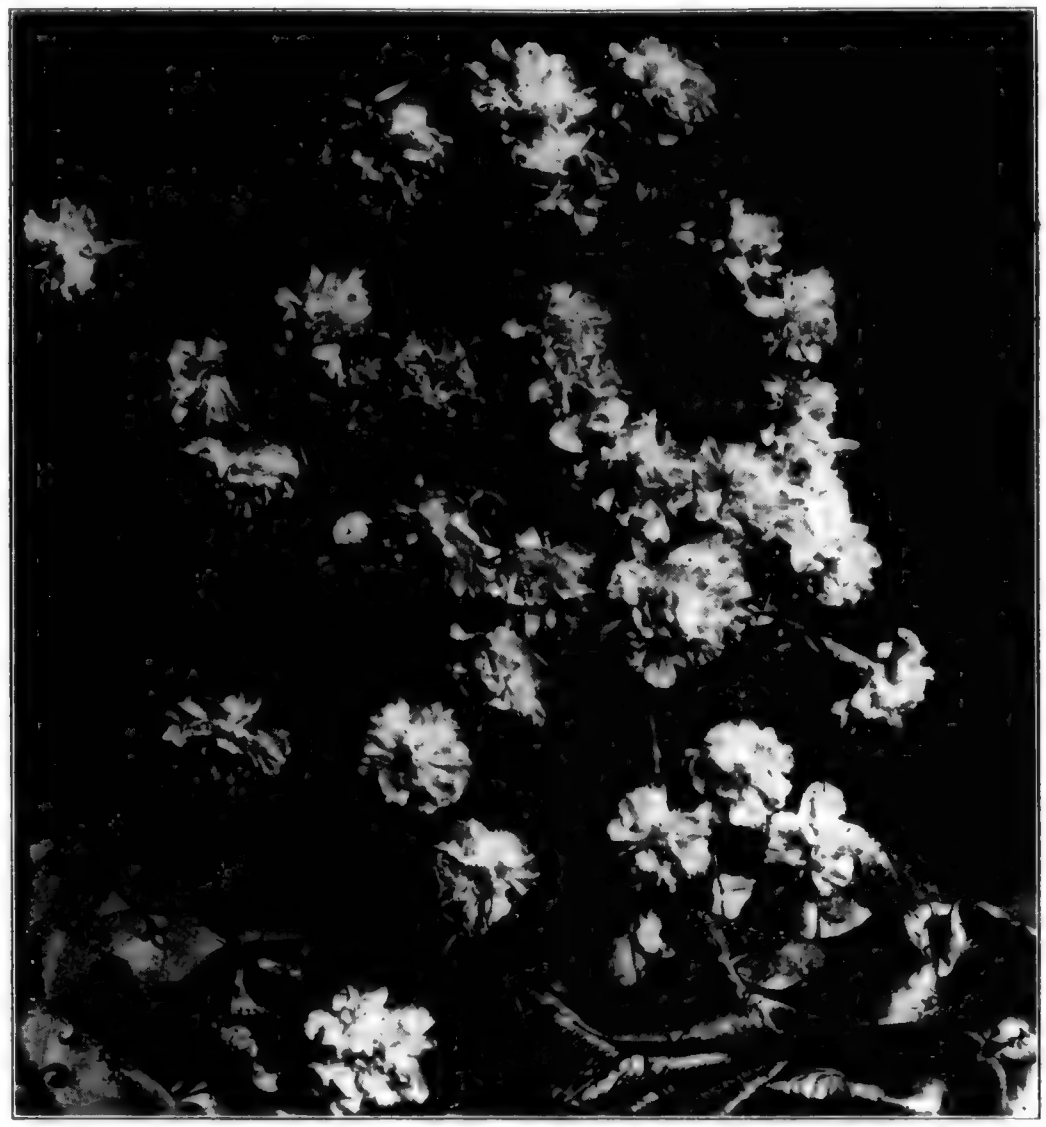
All the stock now flowering with the Thompson Carnation Co. was planted on the benches about the middle of June. This year half the plants will spend the summer in the field.

CARNATION SHOW AT CHICAGO.

Exhibits of Splendid Quality.

The high quality of the exhibits was the notable feature of the carnation show held at the Art Institute, Chicago, January 14, under the joint auspices of the Horticultural Society of Chicago and the Chicago Florists' Club. This was only the second of the series of monthly exhibitions planned by the Horticultural Society and, so far as number of exhibits goes, it not only was a long step in advance of the first of the series but lacked only in the essential element of publicity outside the trade. There was a good attendance of local florists, but not many of the general public knew of the show, and it did little to help the usual daily attendance at the Art Institute. Still, those present found the room containing the flowers the most attractive one in the big building that afternoon.



The showing of novelties was notable. The exhibit from greatest distance was that of Albert Roper, Tewksbury, Mass., who sent his variegated, Bay State, and created a favorable impression. The Wanoka Greenhouses, Barneveld, N. Y., were represented by two of their new ones, Wanoka, crimson, and Apple Blossom, pink and white; flowers of moderate size, but some way giving the impression of floriferousness. From closer at home, F. Dorner & Sons Co. had a fine vase of Pink Delight, shell pink, not a large flower, but one that seems to take the growers' eyes. They also had several unnamed seedlings of promise.

Of the home growers, Hunt Bros., of Evanston, sprung a new one in Mary Tolman, a salmon pink that everybody thought looked good. Highland Park Greenhouses showed Lucille for the first time this season, a large flower on the Prosperity order. The Chicago Carnation Co. showed a striking novelty as No. 55, bright pink but white at the edge of the petals. They also had a good vase of Sarah Hill and a splendid one of White Enchantress. Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association showed Defiance and Greenwood, besides several seedlings under number. Greenwood is a salmon pink that scored eighty-eight points and on the exhibition table looks to be the best thing Mr. Rudd has yet turned out.

Last, but by no means least of the new sorts, were the two reds, O. P. Bassett and W. H. Taft. The Bassett had the most conspicuous corner in the exhibit and was a center of attraction, both for growers and public. Bassett & Washburn also showed two plants of Formosa longiflorums.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. had the largest exhibit of all, including fine vases of eight standard varieties.

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, sent a vase of White Killarney rose, which almost all the growers are adding to their lists this year, and Peter Reinberg was represented by 100 long Beauties that got as much attention from the ladies as a whole table of carnations.

Carnation James Whitcomb Riley.

The Judge's Report.

C. W. Johnson, of Rockford, acted as judge. In his report he gave the newer varieties the following scores:

O. P. Bassett, red, exhibited by Bassett & Washburn, 86 points; Bay State, variegated, by Albert Roper, Tewksbury, Mass., 85; Lucille, variegated, by Highland Park Greenhouses, 81; Sarah Hill, white, by Chicago Carnation Co., 83; No. 55, pink and white, by Chicago Carnation Co., 79; Wm. H. Taft, red, by Scheiden & Schoos, 75; Wanoka, crimson, by Wanoka Greenhouses, Barneveld, N. Y., 81; Apple Blossom, variegated, by Wanoka Greenhouses, 83; Mary Tolman, salmon, by Hunt Bros., Evanston, 82; Pink Delight, shell pink, by F. Dorner & Sons Co., La Fayette, Ind., 84; No. 175-06, red, by F. Dorner & Sons Co., 85; No. 68-06, white, by F. Dorner & Sons Co., 81; No. 6204A, flesh pink, by Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, 81; Greenwood, salmon, by Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, 88; No. 11004C, crimson, by Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, 80.

Of the exhibits not scored Judge Johnson said in his report:

"White Enchantress, Chicago Carnation Co., a fine vase of blooms as regards color, stem and size, but some of the flowers are a little weak and lack in substance.

"Defiance, Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, extra fine color, calyx and stem; flowers a little under size.

"Vase of assorted yellows, F. Dorner & Sons Co.; some good deep yellows in color among them, but lack a little in size; fair stem.

"Vase of seedlings, Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association; some good pinks, whites and scarlets; average size of flowers good, petalage a little soft.

"Poehlmann Bros. Co., Victory, Enchantress, White Lawson, Beacon, Mrs. Lawson, Winsor, White Perfection, Winona; color, extra good; size, medium; stem, good; substance, extra good; calyxes, all good; fragrance, good; worthy of bronze medal.

"Two Formosa lilies, by Bassett & Washburn; size and number of flowers to each plant extra good; stem particularly good; highly commended on all points.

"White Killarney rose, F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.; fine color; substance excellent; stem and foliage particularly vigorous and clean; highly commended.

"Peter Reinberg, 100 American Beauties; flowers of fine color, size and petalage; stem and foliage good; highly commended."

Nick Miller was in charge as manager and was assisted by Henry C. Dunn, who came all the way from Tewksbury, Mass., with Roper's exhibit of Bay State, and who turned in and worked with a will.

WILL VISIT GROWERS.

Among the arrangements for the entertainment of visitors at the Indianapolis carnation convention is a trip to Richmond by way of Cumberland and New Castle. The stop at Cumberland is to be made for the purpose of visiting the greenhouses of Bertermann Bros. Co. The firm has arranged to supply tickets to Cumberland to all who call for them at their store on Massachusetts avenue. One of the illustrations in this issue is an arrangement by Irwin Bertermann, using the firm's new yellow carnation, James Whitcomb Riley.

Ferns

ADIANTUM FARLEYENSE.

The present time, while ample bottom heat is at command, is suitable for increasing the stock of that ever popular fern, Adiantum Farleyense. This is less grown than its merits deserve. It is usually looked upon as a fussy, hard-to-grow plant, and, of course, there is considerable truth in these statements. It is useless to attempt growing it unless the grower has a suitable house, where it can receive some special care. Such a house should not go below 62 to 65 degrees at night in winter. On many places there are little span houses which, if sufficiently piped, would grow Farleyense finely.

Now is the time to divide the old crowns. Plant them in sharp sand in a propagating case. Some prefer moss mixed with the sand, but we think clear sand is preferable. There must be good drainage below the sand. Shade the glass well. Keep it moderately close and moist, and with a steady bottom heat of 75 to 80 degrees it is surprising how quickly the crowns will root and grow. In lifting, some sand will adhere to the little roots. Put the crowns in 2-inch pots of leaf-mold and sand. Keep close and warm until established. The next shift should be into 3½-inch pots. At this time use equal parts of loam and leaf-mold. For later pottings, some dry cow manure, turfy loam, fine charcoal and sharp sand make an ideal compost.

While making growth, a close, moist house is desirable and the glass should be well shaded. Support the fronds by copper or wire stakes a foot long. These sould have an eye partly open at the top to rest the frond stalks on. Never wet the foliage. Fumigate lightly. Feed with liquid manure when the pots are full of roots and let the temperature be drier and somewhat cooler to ripen up the fronds well. Also, reduce the amount of shading on the glass.

BEST CULTURE FOR SMILAX.

How many crops of smilax can be cut off a bed in a season? Would there be any advantage in bottom heat and, if so, in what way should it be arranged? What temperature should smilax have? How low can the temperature go without any injury? What variety is best for the trade? How soon should it be planted to give the earliest results? When should seed be sown? What distance apart should it be planted, if given good attention in training? Smilax, I suppose, wants a good, rich soil.

L. K.

Smilax, for an early crop, should be sown in January or February. Select some well drained flats and fill them with about two and one-half inches of soil. After having soaked the seed in lukewarm water for about thirty-six hours, spread it in the flats carefully, avoiding sowing too thickly, as this is apt to help cause damping off later. Cover the seeds with about one-fourth inch of light soil and water thoroughly. Remove the flats to a warm house, keeping them covered till the seedlings appear above the ground, at which time they must be brought to the full light.

After the seedlings are about two inches in height they must be transplanted, either into other flats or into small pots. We prefer to plant them in flats, setting them about 2x2 inches, and later potting up into 3-inch pots. After they are established in the pots, transfer them to the permanent bench or solid bed. Our preference is a solid bed, as bottom heat is not necessary.

Smilax should have a rather light soil, with a little well rotted cow manure added.

The distance to plant is about 6x8 inches. The temperature, for best results, should be not below 60 degrees at night, allowing it to rise to 70 or 75 degrees in the daytime. It can, however, be run at a temperature of 50 degrees at night, or even lower, without injury. But at this low mark it grows slowly and the strings will be rather short and hard.

Under careful treatment you can expect to cut about three crops in a season. To our knowledge, there is but one variety of smilax used in growing for the trade. Albert F. Amling.

MOVING PLUMOSUS PLANTS.

I have a bench of two-year-old Asparagus plumosus nanus, which I must take down in the coming spring. How shall I treat the plants in spring and summer, as I want to bench them again and grow them to good, long strings before next Christmas? C. H. W.

The easiest method to follow with the asparagus would be to heel them in temporarily on another bench, during the alteration of the bench on which they are growing. All the long growths on the plants should be cut back to within a foot of the ground before the plants are lifted.

A solid bed with a depth of fifteen to eighteen inches of good soil is much better for asparagus culture than a bench, and especially where "good, long strings" are the object in view. Bench culture answers well for the production of sprays of asparagus, but is not so satisfactory in growing long strings.

W. H. T.

CULTURE FOR PLUMOSUS.

Please tell me the proper day and night temperature for Asparagus plumosus. What is the effect of horse, cow and chicken manure on this crop, and which of these manures is the best? How much water does plumosus require, both in winter and in summer? V. F. P.

A night temperature of 60 degrees will answer well for Asparagus plumosus, and in bright weather the day temperature may run up to 75 degrees with air on. Cow manure, or a mixture of cow and horse manure, gives good results, and may be used quite liberally in the preparation of the beds, and in the form of mulching on the surface of the beds after the plants are well established. A liberal supply of water is required by well-rooted plants, provided that the beds are well drained, but one cannot give positive directions for watering without knowing the condition of the soil and plants.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Lilies.

From the number of inquiries being received, quite a few growers are getting anxious about their lilies and wondering if they will be in season. From the time this will appear in print until Easter is just eleven weeks. To be sure of their being in season it should be possible to see the buds with the advent of Lent (March 3 this year). This allows us five additional weeks for growing the plants before the buds are due to have the flowers on time. If the shoots are now eight to twelve inches high, they must not be subjected to a higher night temperature than 45 to 50 degrees at night. If they are six inches high, they will come along all right if allowed a minimum of 50 to 55 degrees. If, on the other hand, they are still later and merely coming through the soil, do not let the night temperature fall below 55 degrees. It is unwise to try any forcing tactics now. Wait until the pots are well filled with roots, when 10 degrees more heat can be safely applied. Once you can see the buds, a brisk heat can be given any of the laggards with perfect safety.

Pick out and consign to the rubbish heap all diseased plants, which unfortunately are still so abundant in many places as to almost discourage growers. A fumigation once a week will keep aphis in check.

Where longiflorums are wanted for Memorial day trade, the bulbs can now be potted at any time. They will lose vitality if kept longer in the cases and can easily be held back for the last week in May.

Spiraeas.

The early part of February is sufficiently early to start spiræas wanted for Easter, but a few pots are useful at any time with retail florists, the sprays being excellent in design work. The old variety, S. Japonica, will come in season in two weeks less time than the newer and improved varieties, such as Gladstone, astilboides and grandiflora. The three last named sorts are such great improvements over S. Japonica that the latter is really hardly worthy of any extended culture, although it has acceptably filled the bill for a long period of years. Be sure all the spiræa balls are well soaked before being potted.

Easter plants can be started in any ordinary greenhouse, but where you want some early, a night heat of 65 degrees and plenty of moisture are requisites. The new pink spiræa, Queen Alexandra, is the most beautiful of the family. Its price, unfortunately, remains rather high for commercial growers. To have it well flowered for Easter, the plants of this grand novelty should now be placed in a house kept at 50 degrees at night.

Gloxinias.

It is not too early to start a small batch of gloxinias for early flowering. These will flower in season for Memorial day, at which time they will be found acceptable. If you have not grown your own tubers, secure a good strain from one of the many dealers advertising in the REVIEW. They are offered at low rates. Start the tubers in flats of sand, potting them up when the growths have started nicely. After watering well once, wait until signs of growth appear before damping again. Continued wetting will sometimes cause the tubers to decay. When potting, use a compost of fibrous loam, dry cow or sheep manure, broken charcoal and sharp sand. In starting gloxinias a minimum temperature of 60 degrees is necessary.

Fancy Caladiums.

Caladiums are not so much grown commercially as their beauty and extreme usefulness would seem to warrant. For summer decorations they are invaluable, being superior to flowering plants, which latter speedily drop to pieces during torrid weather. They are also useful in tropical bedding, as well as for use on sheltered piazzas in boxes or vases.

The roots, which have been wintering in a warm, dry shed, can now be shaken out and laid on a bed of moss in a propagating case, or on a bench where they can get a brisk bottom heat. Scatter a little sand or broken moss over the tubers and water sparingly until growths start. Pot up as roots and growths appear and keep in a warm, moist heat. Of course these caladiums may be started two months hence and be in season for bedding-out purposes, but those placed in heat now will be fine, well furnished plants by early summer, at which time they will sell better than later in the season.

Marguerites.

Marguerites intended for Easter flowering should be placed in their flowering pots without delay and will come along nicely in a night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees. No more pinching must be done or the plants will be a little too late. Marguerites require lots of water and will be benefited by frequent waterings of liquid manure when well rooted in the pots.

House of Chrysanthemum Belfast.

Memorial day stock should be shifted along before the balls become matted. To secure a fine quality of flowers at that date, plant out some of your stock in a shallow bench. These will not bloom so well for Easter as if kept in pots, but for May and June flowering they are to be preferred.

Put in a good batch of cuttings now. They can be carried in pots during the summer and will prove useful for early winter flowering when mums are on the wane.

For the leaf-miner, which attacks marguerites, spray or dip the plants in nicotine extract, taking care to wet all the foliage thoroughly. Use the nicotine double the strength required for aphis.

Propagation.

Now that the steam or hot water pipes are constantly warm is the time to keep the propagating benches well filled with cuttings. It is much easier rooting the majority of plants now than later in the season, when there is more solar and less bottom heat. Coleus, alternantheras, heliotropes, crotons, dracænas, pandanus, marantas, achyranthes, strobilanthes, acalyphas, hibiscus and many others require a warm propagating bench, and if shaded from the sun's rays and well watered, will root surprisingly fast. Verbenas should be rooted in a cooler house, where also carnations, chrysanthemums and plants needing cooler culture will root better. Now is the time to get in cuttings of any good mums you intend to grow more largely another year. Pot these off when rooted and later transfer to a bench or flats, where they will give you a big crop of fine, succulent cuttings for May and June, which is as early as the average florist needs to take his cuttings. Remember that if you let your propagating bench become dry, many of your cuttings will be lost and even those which do root are hardened and injured. Plenty of moisture should always be given until the cuttings are rooted, afterwards a lessened supply.

Pots and Flats.

At this season there is more time than during any other part of the year for overhauling the pot supply. Take advantage of any spare hours to wash or at least rub out the insides of the pots and stack them on shelves, each size by itself. It is, of course, most important that the insides of the pots are clean, as plants placed in dirty pots can never be turned out with clean balls. We are still waiting for a pot which will not become green and slimy, also for some preparation which will prevent this material from growing on the pots, without harming the plants.

Now is also the time to prepare a goodly supply of flats for the sowing of seeds and for transplanting bedding stock, carnations, mums and other plants into. A convenient size for these flats is from twenty-four to thirty inches long, nine to twelve inches wide and anywhere from three to four inches deep. Half-inch stock is the best to use, except across the two ends, where pieces three-quarters of an inch thick are to be preferred.

A CHRISTMAS CHRYSANTHEMUM

In the last few years great progress has been made in lengthening the chrysanthemum season in point of earliness, but Willis E. Hamilton, of Belfast, Me., says he has found it fully as desirable to lengthen the season at the other end. In other words, it is as much worth while to have chrysanthemums after the recognized season as it is to have them while they must compete with asters and other summer flowers.

Mr. Hamilton lengthens his season to Christmas and later with a variety of his own raising, called Belfast, in honor of his home town. This variety originated with him a number of years ago and was exhibited February 10, 1908, before the New York Florists' Club under the name of Radiant. The accompanying illustration shows his house of it, photographed December 12, 1908. He cut the entire house out clean for his Christmas trade. Last year he cut his last blooms April 11, which gave him chrysanthemums for Easter.

Belfast is light pink in color, the blooms running of large size and carried on strong stems that will hold the flowers up in salable shape for a long time after the cutting. Mr. Hamilton says he has been able to bring it into flower at any time from November 15 onward to April, but that it has paid him best to bring it in especially for Christmas.

STRAWBERRIES IN GREENHOUSES.

For Use as Ornamental Plants.

It is not generally known, but is nevertheless a fact, that strawberries are an easy plant to force in winter, and, although not grown commercially on account of the indoor crop not being profitable, they might well be grown to sell as window decorators or pot plants, much as the ornamental peppers are now so much used. There would be only a limited demand, but I have often thought it strange that some of the clever, enterprising growers of pot plants for the big stores did not risk a bench of strawberries.

The process of forcing is simple. Young runners are rooted from old plants in the field in the summer and potted into small pots, or 2½-inch or 3-inch pot-grown plants can be purchased of many dealers in August. If these plants are fine, healthy and well rooted, they can be potted upon arrival into 5-inch or 6-inch pots and plunged into some good drainage material, such as sand, ashes or shavings, in the cold-frames. Ashes really make the best drainage. The pots should not touch, and this gives a better chance to pack the ashes around each pot up level with the top, to keep them from drying out by the winds too much. They require careful attention for a while, to keep them growing well, and the earlier in August the plants are purchased the better they will be established before frost stops their growth. After freezing weather sets in they may be protected with straw or leaves, so as to be able to get at them when wanted.

Housing the Plants.

They should be brought in like bulbs or dormant ramblers, and kept in a house little above freezing at first, say 35 to 40 degrees at night and up to 50 degrees in the daytime. After two or three weeks the temperature can be raised about 5 degrees, and at the end of five weeks they will be blooming and may then be run 5 degrees higher, or 50 to 60 degrees, and so on until the crop is ripened, making gradual advances in the temperature like advancing spring outside. But it must be kept in mind that strawberries are a cool spring fruit and must not be run too hot. Never let the day temperature get more than 15 degrees higher than the night temperature; 10 degrees variation is better.

It is well to stake up the clusters of blooms before berries get heavy.

The red spider is fond of strawberry leaves and must be watched carefully. Keep the walks and under the benches moist, and if this pest appears, turn each leaf by hand and spray with a fine spray, using some of the liquid preparations. The plants will be worthless if any insects cripple the foliage.

Ordinary, good, fibrous rose or carnation compost makes good soil for strawberries. Varieties having medium sized, well shaped fruit, and known to be very prolific, are usually better for forcing than novelties, extra large or very early sorts.

The accompanying illustrations show two views of the establishment of Joseph Heinl & Sons, Jacksonville, Ill. In the lower picture the old range, which Joseph Heinl built up through years of close attention to business, is shown, while at the left in the picture one-half of the new range, built since the sons were admitted to partnership, is shown.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A great part of the last week was sunless. This had the effect of considerably reducing cut flower receipts. This did not improve business, as stores do not get customers during dark, stormy weather. Roses are of fine quality and not overabundant. They are clearing out well, the slowest sellers being the one-time favorites, Bride and Bridesmaid. We expect to see few of either of these varieties grown another season. Killarney and its white sport are likely to almost entirely displace them. Carnations are a little less abundant and selling better at last week's prices. Violets remain about the same. The supply is now ample for all requirements.

Dutch bulbous stock is more abundant and of good quality. In addition to Golden Spur, other narcissi seen are Emperor, Henry Irving, poeticus ornatus and Campernelle. There is a good supply of callas, lilies, sweet peas and other seasonable flowers. No change in adiantum, smilax and asparagus.

Club Meeting.

Ladies' night, as usual, attracted a big gathering to the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, about 350 ladies and gentlemen being present. The newly elected officers were installed and made short addresses. President Downs, who was warmly applauded on taking the chair, in course of his remarks reviewed the last few years of the club's existence and urged the continued use of its strength and influence as an incentive to members to keep up their interest and work for still better results. With the large membership they should be able to work for matters of interest to the members outside of the general work of the club, and show to those who do not belong that they cannot afford to stay outside the ranks. In the way of speakers and subjects to be discussed, he expected to keep to and surpass previous years, and thought the policy of outlining a program of subjects a year in advance worthy of adoption. The annual banquet, picnic and other matters were referred to, and a little more entertainment of a lighter vein urged. The value of the exhibition table was commented upon, also the fairness, promptness and ability shown by his predecessor, who left the chair with a big membership and the good will of all. He urged all to work together for the club's welfare and closed by quoting these lines:

Do what you can, being what you are;
Shine like a glow-worm if you can't like a star.
Work like a pulley if you can't like a crane;
Be a wheel greaser if you can't drive a train.

Vice-president Duncan promised to do his level best to help maintain the club's best traditions. Secretary Craig, in the course of his remarks, favored the audience with a few statistics. The largest attendance in 1908 was at the May meeting, when 112 were present; 235 attended on carnation night, and 325 on ladies' night. The average for all meetings was 170. Forty-six new members were admitted. January was the banner month for receipts, February and December following. The receipts during 1908 were nearly $100 larger than in 1907.

During the year the club awarded five reports of superior merit for exhibits, nine reports of merit, thirty honorable mentions and fifty-five votes of thanks. During the year the secretary mailed 4,774 circulars to members, 1,525 postals and 929 other pieces of mail. He anticipated a prosperous year in 1909 and assured the members that no effort would be spared to make the club helpful to as many as possible.

The absence of the worthy treasurer, Edward Hatch, at Miami, Fla., was much regretted, his humorous and genial remarks always having been a feature of previous inaugural nights. The assistant treasurer, Peter M. Miller, reported receipts of $809.50 during the year and a good balance on hand.

Thirteen new members were elected. A committee was appointed to consider maintaining a free hospital bed for members.

A new committee on exhibits was appointed as follows: Eber Holmes, chairman; G. M. Anderson, Wilfrid Wheeler, M. A. Patten, Chas. Holbrow, R. T. McGorum, K. Finlayson, J. F. Flood.

The committee on entertainment is: J. P. A. Guerineau, chairman; G. W. Butterworth, W. D. Nickerson, P. J. Turley, C. Linsert, J. E. Barry, F. Murray.

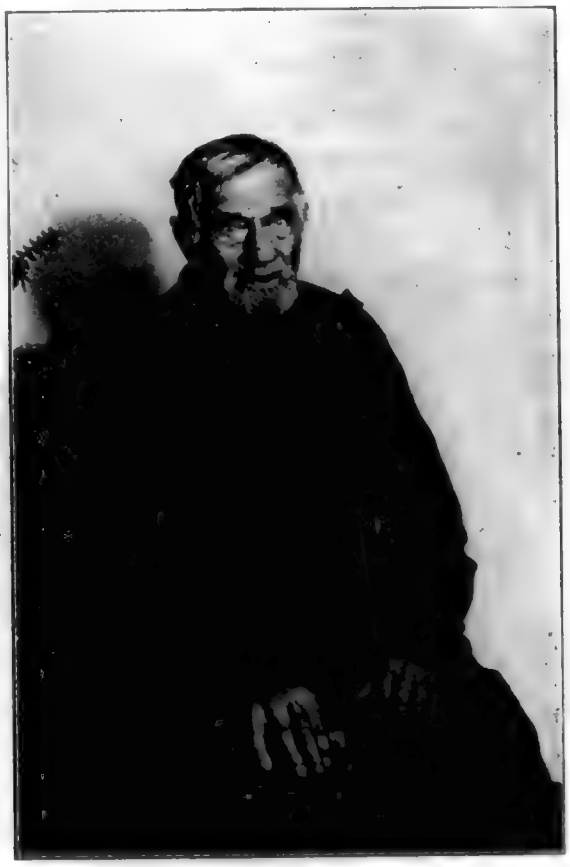
M. A. Patten spoke for the carnation convention. About a dozen will attend from here, with several exhibits, among them Bay State.

On the exhibition tables were a specially fine lot of violets, including Kaiser Wilhelm, from Wm. Sim; Campbell, from H. F. Woods; Princess of Wales, from Gerhard Bleicken, and Baronne Rothschild, from F. W. Fletcher. Albert Roper showed Bay State and a scarlet seedling carnation. Henry Schrade, of Saratoga Springs, had a yellow seedling carnation, and Lewis Small a crimson. Thomas Coles brought Primula Kewensis and the J. F. Flood Co. showed mushrooms.

Refreshments were served and the entertainment program was thoroughly enjoyed.

Carnations will receive special attention February 16.

Exhibition.



The midwinter flower show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, January 16, brought out some good exhibits. A number of the primulas were unfortunately frozen, the day being the coldest of the winter. For six Primula Kewensis, Mrs. F. Ayer, George Page gardener, was first; Mrs. J. M. Sears, W. C. Ritchie gardener, second; Mrs. J. L. Gardner, William Thatcher gardener, third. William Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, led for six Primula Sinensis; E. J. Mitton, J. Lawson gardener, second; Mrs. J. M. Sears third. For six Primula stellata, William Whitman led, followed by Mrs. J. L. Gardner. For six Primula obconica varieties, Mrs. Gardner won, followed by Mrs. J. M. Sears and Mrs. F. Ayer. Mrs. Sears had the only six plants of Lorraine begonia, receiving second prize, and was first for six cyclamens, Mrs. A. W. Blake, J. L. Smith gardener, being second.

For fifty blooms of any carnation not disseminated, M. A. Patten won the silver medal with a fine vase of his new crimson, Sara Nicholson. For four vases distinct, C. S. Strout, Biddeford, Me., was an excellent first with splendid vases of White Perfection, Victory, Enchantress and Afterglow; M. A. Patten second, with Beacon, Melody, Winsor and Afterglow; S. J. Goddard third, with Winsor, Fenn, Enchantress and Victory. Miss E. J. Clark, Pomfret, Conn., John Ash gardener, had splendid bunches of Princess of Wales violets. H. F. Woods received honorable mention for his new single violet, Comet. M. A. Patten received a similar award for his new rose-pink carnation, No. 505.

S. J. Goddard had a grand vase of Purity freesia, the best we have seen staged in Boston. Miss J. M. Sears showed Clerodendron fallax, camellias and Celsia Arcturus, and received a first-class certificate for a fine dark red amaryllis, eighteen months from seed. C. S. Strout had an excellent vase of Winsor carnation which received a gratuity.

Various Notes.

Prof. E. Dwight Sanderson, of Durham, N. H., lectured before a large audience on "Injurious Insects and How to Control Them," at Horticultural hall, January 16. Numerous questions were asked and the meeting proved interesting.

Carel Mulder.

The committee on nominations for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society has organized and elected T. J. Grey secretary.

J. Fred Dawson, of the firm of Olmsted Bros., is back from a lengthened stay in Seattle. He considers the site for the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition as an ideal one and expects a magnificent floral display in the grounds, the laying out of which he superintended.

E. Allen Peirce's household had a visit from the stork last week. This makes his fifth, all doing well.

Wheeler & Co., of Waban, are handling an extra fine lot of Cattleya Trianæ at present. This firm handles orchids exclusively.

Edward MacMulkin will talk before the floricultural classes at the Massachusetts Agricultural College on retail marketing of plants and flowers.

Philip Carbone is in Europe on his annual trip.

Joseph Krupa, for some years in Boston and vicinity, is now superintendent for the N. W. Harris estate, Lake Geneva, Wis. W. N. CRAIG.

James F. Quinn and David J. Quinn, trading as J. F. & D. J. Quinn, Brookline, have filed a joint petition in bankruptcy. The indebtedness of the firm is $9,247, distributed among about 140 creditors, the principal being J. A. Budlong, Son & Co., 303 Congress street, $817. There are no assets shown. Neither petitioner has individual indebtedness.

OBITUARY.

James McBride.

The funeral services of James McBride, a veteran florist of South Weymouth, Mass., were held January 12, in the Church of St. Francis Xavier, and the body was interred in the St. Francis Xavier cemetery. The floral remembrances were many, with special pieces from the South Weymouth grange, Patrons of Husbandry; Joseph Breck & Sons, of Boston, and the state hospital at Tewksbury.

Carel Mulder.

Carel Mulder, one of the old-time florists of Chicago, died January 15, at the home of his son, John C. Mulder, the Auburn Park florist, of 7923 Normal avenue, from old age, complicated by an attack of Bright's disease. Mr. Mulder was 86 years of age, and was born in Alphen-on-the-Rhine, Holland, where he served a long and rigorous apprenticeship in all branches of floriculture. He conducted a nursery and florist's business at Groningen, Holland, before coming to this country. He came to Chicago in 1866 and in 1867 built a greenhouse and opened business at 868 West Lake street, where he continued with a successful and growing trade till 1886, when he sold out and went to Europe for a visit of several months. On his return he made his home with his son, John C. Mulder, who learned the business under his father, and has operated greenhouses on Normal avenue since the time when Auburn Park was a swamp. Mr. Mulder was a thorough plantsman, schooled in every branch of the business, from his thorough old-country training, and was held in high esteem personally by all who knew him. He leaves six children.

Claude W. Espy.

Claude W. Espy, of Brookville, Pa., died January 9, after an illness of only three days with the grippe. Mr. Espy was 48 years of age. He had been sexton of the Brookville cemetery for many years. He was a tireless worker, and in addition to his labors at the cemetery he found time to establish himself in business as a florist on a humble scale some ten years ago, and had built up the business to handsome proportions, until it had become one of the established institutions of the town. The deceased is survived by his wife and four children.

Mary Raeder.

Miss Mary Raeder, of the firm of Raeder & Co., Hyde Park, Mass., died January 13 of pneumonia, after a brief illness. The deceased, whose specialty was single violets, was well known at the stores and markets in Boston and attended the Park Street market January 9, apparently in her usual health. She was 36 years of age.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19 to 22, 1909.

Results bring advertising.
The REVIEW brings results.

A BRITISH contemporary refers to those who do not assist progress by affiliation with the trade societies by the apt term, "mollusks."

LADIES' S. A. F.

A meeting of all members of the Ladies' S. A. F. attending the carnation convention at Indianapolis is called for Wednesday, January 27, at 10 a. m., at the exhibition hall.

MRS. CHARLES H. MAYNARD, Sec'y.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Chairman W. F. Kasting directs me to call a meeting of the committee of fifty to take place at Indianapolis, January 28, at 10 a. m.

The executive committee will meet the same day at 2 p. m.

The business of the committee will be wound up finally.

J. H. BURDETT, Sec'y.

NO ICE ALLOWANCE.

Benjamin Hammond, Fishkill, N. Y., chairman of the S. A. F. legislative committee, has been advised by the American Express Co., to which application was made, that no allowance will be made covering the weight of ice used in cut flower shipments, as is done on certain commodities. This matter was brought up some time ago by Edward Reid, of Philadelphia, who proposed appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Mr. Hammond says:

"If these matters are carried before the Commission, there must be a clear statement of the grievance that will appeal to the judicial sense of a committee. Mr. Rudd, secretary of the S. A. F., advises me that $100 is placed at the command of the legislative committee. The conditions which exist in regard to the ice concession are such that if we go before the Interstate Commerce Commission, it will be necessary to have something more than has yet been claimed by the growers and shippers. This report is made for general information and if the people who use ice will state the case, as to quantity, weight and distance of shipments, and times of shipment, it is the data required."

GETTING RETURNS.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time:

Kindly continue my advertisement of gladioli in the Review. I am getting returns from all parts of the United States—east, west, north and south—and even from Japan.

E. E. STEWART.
Rives Junction, Mich., Jan. 18, 1909.

HOTELS AT INDIANAPOLIS.

The reception committee recommends the following hotels to members of the American Carnation Society during their meeting in Indianapolis January 27 and 28:

New Denison—American plan, $2.50 up; European plan, $1 up.
Claypool Hotel—American plan, $2.50 up; European plan, $2 up.
Hotel English—American plan, $2 up; European plan, $1 up.
Grand Hotel—American plan, $2.50 up.
Linden Hotel—European plan, 75 cents up.
Imperial Hotel—European plan, 75 cents up.
Loraine Hotel—European plan, 50 cents up.

The New Denison Hotel will be headquarters for this meeting. It is conveniently located, so that both meeting and exhibition hall and banquet hall can be easily reached from it.

The reception committee wishes to announce that it will meet all trains at the Union Station and escort all visiting delegations to whichever hotel they may designate; so look for them; they will be there.

FRED R. HUKRIEDE,
Chairman.

GLADIOLI A SECOND YEAR.

Are gladiolus bulbs of any value for forcing after having been forced the season previous? R. C. E.

I would not advise you to try any of the gladioli a second year for forcing. They will make even larger bulbs in the flats or benches than purchased ones, but after giving them one trial, I was convinced that they were practically worthless for use a second season.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Since last report there has been a steady shortening in supplies and considerable increase in demand. Local business is not specially active, the social festivities of the wealthy having ceased for the moment, but there has been a large increase in the call for funeral work, which has given a special impetus to the demand for white flowers and for short roses. Crops evidently are light everywhere in the Chicago shipping territory, for the shipping orders have increased materially; the orders do not average large, but they are numerous.

Prices have advanced all along the line. The single exception is Harrisii lilies. While other stock was low, lilies were steadily going up, because of light supply, but just when other stock turns scarce a new crop of lilies is coming in; also, when lilies get above $2 per dozen retailers try to use something else.

It is the general report that prices are lower than they were a year ago, even with the advance which has taken place in the last week, but roses are an exception; they are bringing first-class returns, fully up to those of other seasons. Beauties are probably in better supply than any other rose. In spite of dark weather, several houses are cutting heavily of long-stemmed stock. If we should get a few days of bright skies, there would be exceedingly heavy receipts of Beauties. Killarney and Richmond are fairly plentiful. It is Maid and Bride that are shortest. The dark weather has had some effect on the color and substance of roses, but still, quality is excellent, Killarney particularly good. Orders received early in the day are being filled, but Monday, January 18, there was a flood of telegrams along about 5 o'clock that found the market practically bare of stock and no time to pull anything more in from the greenhouses.

Carnations have not advanced in price in quite the same proportion as roses, but the supply is down and values average higher than they have been at any time since Christmas. Violets have recovered somewhat from the set-back they received during the severely cold weather. Last week sales were made at the buyer's price, providing he could use a quantity, but this week the wholesaler has a voice in the matter.

There has been special call for jonquils, and yellow tulips have sold well. The other colors of tulips are not in special demand, but the white goes for funeral work. Sweet peas are selling better, especially the long-stemmed stock. Stevia has shortened up. Considerable mignonette is seen, but it is slow sale. The green goods market remains unchanged.

Various Notes.

If you are going to the carnation convention at Indianapolis, call up F. F. Benthey, Central 1398, and reserve your berth. He will have the chart of the special car up to Saturday, January 23. After that it will be at the Pennsylvania city ticket office. It is expected that the car will be full when it goes out at midnight, Tuesday, January 26, but, as usual, few have yet spoken for berths. Nic Zweifel, of Milwaukee, has written that he will be with the party.

John Zech has been paying visits to the growers and predicts that, unless the weather is unusually favorable, it will be a month before there is a good crop of roses again.

C. W. McKellar is receiving gardenias from the east. He says there is a fair demand for cattleyas.

Henry C. Dunn, with Albert Roper, Tewksbury, Mass., is in town talking up the Bay State carnation to the growers.

The A. L. Randall Co. has increased its office space in both the cut flower and supply departments.

Bassett & Washburn state that they have now made deliveries of 125,000 cuttings of the O. P. Bassett carnation.

A. L. Randall was ill and absent from the store for a couple of days last week.

Visitors to George Reinberg's greenhouses say that while his cut at present is light, the stock looks well, especially the Brides.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has sixty cases of galax in the Monon freight house, awaiting a settlement of a disputed freight bill, having refused to accept the goods until the rate is made right.

Stollery Bros. report that retail trade is just now a little light, but that there has been quite an increase in the call for funeral work.

The morning after the Guardian Angel greenhouses were burned twenty men were put at work making repairs. Lettuce and radishes will be grown until time for planting next year's cut flower crops.

The funeral of Robert Johnstone was held at Nunda, Ill., January 16. A. L. Vaughan, of Vaughan & Sperry, was one of those who attended.

Lubliner & Trinz have enlarged their store on Randolph street.

E. E. Pieser and G. H. Pieser, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., were called upon last week to bury the third member of their family within six months, Isaac Mitchell, a brother-in-law.

Percy Jones says the Sarah Hill carnation is an excellent keeper, although many think the blooms have a sleepy appearance.

E. F. Winterson sent a fine spray of Defiance carnations to the funeral of C. Mulder, January 19. Mr. Winterson in his youthful days peddled plants for Mr. Mulder.

N. J. Wietor says the coal man has been having his share of prosperity this month, but freight on the Pocahontas that most of the big growers use is almost twice as much as the cost of the coal at the mines.

W. O. Johnston, of the Foley Mfg. Co., has just returned to the city, after a two weeks' trip to his former home in Ontario, Canada.

Leonard Kill says last week was one of the best Peter Reinberg has had this season, because they have a pretty fair crop of roses on, especially Beauties.

E. Fransen notes that Scheiden & Schoos have had a special call for unrooted cuttings of Enchantress.

says the prospect is for a few weeks of excellent business for the rose growers.

At E. H. Hunt's all hands are putting in as much time as possible on the annual inventory. Business on To-bak-ine is reported as having taken a spurt of late.

Philip Schupp, at J. A. Budlong's, reports the refusal of a C. O. D. sent to a party at Shreveport, La. It was turned over to J. W. Begbie, of that town, who writes, under date of January 16, that he has taken up nearly twenty such shipments to the same concern in the last few weeks, ordered under different names.

Robert Schenk, well known in this city, has closed his store at Columbus, O., and writes friends here that he has dropped enough money so that he is ready to go back to work for somebody else.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is having especially good results with carnations this season, much better than in the last couple of years.

Kruchten & Co. say the call for funeral work has sent short roses up a good deal more than longer stock.

A deed was filed for record January 19, by which the property now occupied by J. F. Kidwell & Bro., at Thirty-fifth street and Wentworth avenue, was transferred to the proprietors of the adjoining ball park. The Kidwell lease still has some two years to run. The transaction has some additional interest because it is only the second time this property has changed hands since the government gave title to it in 1834.

Christina Baigholz, mother of F. C. Baigholz, the North Clark street florist, died January 16. The funeral was held Tuesday. She was 68 years of age.

E. C. Amling notes a special call for yellow flowers this week. Tulips are about all of this color that are available. The few jonquils arriving are not enough to cut any figure.

Among recent visitors were Ed. Kalisch, of Kalisch Bros. Floral Co., St. Louis; Mrs. Frances Spickerman, Sandwich, Ill.; William La Hayn, Chesterton, Ind.; Thomas Keeshan, Junction City, Kan.; W. G. Matthews, Dayton, O.; Geo. H. Bancroft, Cedar Falls, Ia.

INDIANAPOLIS.

State Florists' Society.

The annual meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Society was held at the Commercial Club January 12. President Stuart was in the chair and all other officers were present, with a good attendance of members. The election of officers for the ensuing year was the chief business of the day and that was soon over, as all were reëlected unanimously.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer showed the society to be in a good condition, both as to members and finances.

Different subjects came up for discussion, but the chief topic was the convention, and a most excellent spirit of cooperation was manifested, which speaks well for the success of the convention and the society itself. When all are pulling one way, something is bound to happen, and we have a membership that is going to do it.

The following members staged flowers:

B. F. Hensley, Knightstown, Enchantress, White Enchantress and Lawson-Enchantress carnations, and Liberty and Killarney roses, for all of which he received honorable mention.

V. D. Grave, Richmond, vase of Mayday, a pleasing shade of pink.

Charles Knopf, Richmond, Admiration, scoring 85 points and receiving a certificate of merit. This is an attractive flower of the Rose-pink Enchantress color. He also had vases of Mrs. Charles Knopf and Ruby, both of which attracted much attention.

Stuart & Haugh, of Anderson, had some vases of standard varieties and one of seedlings.

Baur & Smith had Shasta, their white seedling, scoring 85 points and receiving a certificate of merit.

The judges were Messrs. Dorner, Junge and Barick.

After the business session was ended, all sat down to supper and a pleasant social time was spent, speech-making ending the evening.

The out-of-town members present were: Fred Lemon, Charles Knopf and V. D. Grave, of Richmond; Fred Dorner, Lafayette: President Stuart and J. A. E. Haugh, of Anderson; M. A. Barick, Seymour; B. F. Hensley, Knightstown; A. Barnaby, Columbus, and Bert Stanley, Mooresville.

Just a word to those carnation people who have not made up their minds about coming to the convention. Make it up at once, as this convention will be "It" and it cannot be spelled big enough or printed black enough to make you appreciate what the word "It" means in this case. All other conventions for years to come will date from this one—it does not matter where they are held, whether in Chicago or any other hot place. This one at Indianapolis, in 1909, is the cake, bakery, baker and all. And remember, above all else, that we are looking for you.

I want to say that

Eaton, O., Jan. 16, 1909.

Various Notes.

Business conditions were on the quiet order last week. We had the first touch of real winter we have had this season. There is more snow on the ground than has been seen here for the last three years.

The exhibition and reception committees got mixed in Secretary Herr's premium list. A. F. J. Baur is chairman of the first named and Fred Hukriede presides over the latter, and they have made arrangements to meet all trains arriving on Wednesday, so as to help all visitors find themselves. Those who meet the trains will have on their badges and ribbons, so you can identify them, but as they are not mind readers, please make yourselves known, so that none may be overlooked, as they will be there to direct and help you all they can.

The city florists hope to have a good attendance at the entertainment given by them to the visitors. The bowling alleys at the German house have been secured, so everything will take place under one roof, commencing at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday. If you cannot hit a pin, there will be other things you can hit. S.

MONTREAL, QUE.—The store of White & Co., at 522 James street, was damaged by fire January 7, to the amount of several hundred dollars.

DAYTON, O.—Edna T. Matthews announces that after one year of troubles with express, freight and mail mix-ups, she wishes that her firm hereafter be addressed as the Cottage Gardens.

NATICK, MASS.—By permission of the Waban Rose Conservatories, a part of their land on East Central street will be flooded, so as to provide a suitable skating ground for the young people of the town.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market for cut flowers, in wholesale circles, is fairly good. There was plenty of stock all last week, except roses. These seemed to be off-crop. There is also a good shipping trade reported.

In reporting the retail trade, I must say that it is not so good as was expected. Outside of funeral work there is little doing and, if stock was anything like plentiful, there would be a glut in the wholesale market. There are a number of social events for this week, which should brighten up the retail trade a bit. Extra long Beauties are scarce in this market, as well as all other roses. Carnations are plentiful, with a good demand for all the light colors. Violets are again up to 75 cents per hundred and there are plenty of them for all.

Bulbous stock in all lines is overplentiful and quite a lot of Romans and Paper Whites were dumped last week. There is plenty of valley and some good sweet peas. All green goods are plentiful.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club took place January 14, in the Bowman building. When President Young called for order there were twenty-two members present, and several visitors.

J. F. Ammann, J. J. Beneke and George H. Angermueller were appointed a committee on resolutions on the death of Carew Sanders, which were read and adopted.

The committee on the smoker was given full power to act and announced the date of the smoker as February 11. Julius Schafer, manager for Grimm & Gorley, was elected to membership in the club.

On motion it was decided to hold the club's annual carnation meeting next month. All growers who have new varieties will be invited to send exhibits, the club agreeing to pay all express charges. The trustees were instructed to look for a new meeting hall.

For the good of the club, a general review of the Christmas business was taken, which brought out the facts that it was twenty-five per cent better than the year previous, and the plant trade was even better. The question box brought out good discussion.

Various Notes.

Robert J. Windler has issued a neat copyrighted book on flowers. He has a well kept place at 2300 South Grand avenue, and reports a good business in all lines since the holidays.

Dr. R. Francis, president of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Co., has been chosen one of the vice-presidents of the American Forestry Association.

James Lahey, a landscape gardener well known among the local trade, ended his own life by swallowing poison Friday, January 15. His wife disappeared a few days before and this is thought to be the cause of his act.

Louisa M. Halstead, daughter of A. S. Halstead, of Belleville, and John Wesley Cornell, of Detroit, were married Sunday, January 10. The happy couple left for Detroit the same night, where they will make their home.

Those from out of town who attended the club meeting Thursday afternoon were: Henry Johann, Collinsville; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville; E. W. Guy and Henry Emunds, Belleville; Edwin Denker, St. Charles; John Connon, Webster Grove; W. J. Pilcher, Kirkwood; Frank Weber and John Steidle, Central.

The St. Clair Floral Co., of Belleville, furnished the decorations for the big joint installation of officers of the Knights of Pythias of Belleville and nearby towns.

Henry Kahrs, who bought out the John Burke store, reports that he had a big week's business. The place has been altered and makes a much better appearance than the old one.

W. C. Young, of the C. Young & Sons Co., reports that the firm has sold sixty feet of ground on Kingsbury boulevard for $150 per foot and will keep on selling the place in lots and eventually move the plant out west, past the city limits. W. C. Young, Jr., has given up his position in the wholesale grocery business and will enter the employ of C. Young & Sons Co. at the greenhouses.

Quite a few of our local as well as suburban florists will visit Indianapolis next week and attend the meeting of the American Carnation Society.

Monday night, January 11, the great snowstorm kept many of the florist bowlers at home, especially the older ones, but the cold night had no terrors for the younger class and quite a few braved the weather.

Visitors: F. F. Lembke, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; Julius Dillhof, of Schloss Bros., New York.

MADISON, N. J.

The thirteenth smoker of the Morris county family was held January 13 and the hoodoo failed to work, for it was voted the best ever.

The newly elected president, H. B. Vyse, of Morristown, took his seat, and in a few well chosen words welcomed the visitors present. Reports from the secretary and treasurer were read, showing the club to be in excellent condition as to membership, with over $600 in the treasury.

Then the club settled down to an evening's enjoyment, and cigars, coffee and sandwiches, and Totty's famous brew of punch helped them celebrate. Splendid talent had been engaged in New York, and when these departed on the last train at 11:30 the members themselves took a hand and kept the ball rolling for awhile.

A splendid vase of Bay State carnations was on hand from A. Roper, of Tewksbury, Mass.

The smokers of this club have more than a local reputation, and the numerous visitors included prominent growers from Rowayton, Conn., Red Bank, Orange, New York and different sections of Long Island, several of them, notably the Rickards brothers, insisting on helping out the entertainment with songs of their own. Over 150 members and friends partook of the hospitality of the club, and, by the looks of things, another year provision must be made for a larger number. VIDI.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

R. T. Donnell has been making a test of sterilizing the soil in his greenhouses, using formaldehyde, and after six weeks' experience is well satisfied with the results. Recent issues of the REVIEW contained descriptions of the formaldehyde method, written by B. H. Thorne, of Wooster, O., and it is interesting to note that Mr. Donnell is well enough pleased with the results he is obtaining so that he intends sterilizing all the soil in his place. He has 52,000 feet of glass and estimates that it will cost $2,500 to sterilize all the soil by this method.

A. C. Brown is one of those who believes in grasping opportunity by the forelock. He is offering his new carnation, Governor Deneen, for distribution this season. The announcement comes just at the height of the political struggle centering about Governor Deneen and at the time when the governor's name is seen in conspicuous head-lines in every newspaper in the state and when he and his friends are the subject of discussion wherever politicians meet. Carnation Governor Deneen is royal purple.

BEARDSTOWN, ILL.—Frank Bros. say their holiday trade was good. but not better than last year.

WAUWATOSA, WIS.—Claude Tyler, of the C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, is the proud father of a 14-pound boy.

LOUISIANA, MO.—Thomas A. Culp, formerly of Hannibal, Mo., is now with M. S. Foreman. in this city.

MADISON, N. J.

The thirteenth smoker of the Morris county family was held January 13 and the hoodoo failed to work, for it was voted the best ever.

The newly elected president, H. B. Vyse, of Morristown, took his seat, and in a few well chosen words welcomed the visitors present. Reports from the secretary and treasurer were read, showing the club to be in excellent condition as to membership, with over $600 in the treasury.

Then the club settled down to an evening's enjoyment, and cigars, coffee and sandwiches, and Totty's famous brew of punch helped them celebrate. Splendid talent had been engaged in New York, and when these departed on the last train at 11:30 the members themselves took a hand and kept the ball rolling for awhile.

A splendid vase of Bay State carnations was on hand from A. Roper, of Tewksbury, Mass.

The smokers of this club have more than a local reputation, and the numerous visitors included prominent growers from Rowayton, Conn., Red Bank, Orange, New York and different sections of Long Island, several of them, notably the Rickards brothers, insisting on helping out the entertainment with songs of their own. Over 150 members and friends partook of the hospitality of the club, and, by the looks of things, another year provision must be made for a larger number. VIDI.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

R. T. Donnell has been making a test of sterilizing the soil in his greenhouses, using formaldehyde, and after six weeks' experience is well satisfied with the results. Recent issues of the REVIEW contained descriptions of the formaldehyde method, written by B. H. Thorne, of Wooster, O., and it is interesting to note that Mr. Donnell is well enough pleased with the results he is obtaining so that he intends sterilizing all the soil in his place. He has 52,000 feet of glass and estimates that it will cost $2,500 to sterilize all the soil by this method.

A. C. Brown is one of those who believes in grasping opportunity by the forelock. He is offering his new carnation, Governor Deneen, for distribution this season. The announcement comes just at the height of the political struggle centering about Governor Deneen and at the time when the governor's name is seen in conspicuous head-lines in every newspaper in the state and when he and his friends are the subject of discussion wherever politicians meet. Carnation Governor Deneen is royal purple.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The cold, stormy weather, with its absence of sunshine, during the later days of last week shortened production materially. Many of the growers were rather off crop, owing to the heavy cut during the holidays. The unfavorable conditions made this shortness of crop more apparent. Sunshine has improved conditions this week, but flowers of many kinds are still difficult to obtain, and prices are advancing. But prices are materially lower today than during the highwater season of January, 1907. It seems wellnigh impossible to get them back to that level, no matter how scarce flowers may be.

Roses are in brisk demand. All really choice stock is quickly marketed, unless the price be too high. The cheaper grades sell even better than the fancy, but prices on these grades are only moderate. Carnations have stiffened perceptibly in the select and fancy classes, and white, which has been dead stock in the ordinary grades for many weeks, is now selling fairly well. Cattleyas are rather abundant. The supply seems sufficient to slightly bear the whole orchid market. Gardenias have shortened somewhat, with supply and demand about equal. Valley is in excellent supply and selling fairly well. Violets are not selling well, though the supply is large and the flowers of fine quality. Easter lilies are in demand. Paper Whites and Romans are selling somewhat irregularly. None are wasted, but at times they accumulate and have to be sold cheaply. Sweet peas have declined. The fancy stock is selling well at reduced prices, but the medium and poorer grades, with shorter stems, are in slight demand. Lavender sweet peas sell best of all. More pink is sold and grown than white. Greens have been selling poorly, barring plumosus asparagus in bunches. A notable addition to the market is the arrival in quantity of pink, white and yellow tulips. Freesia is also more plentiful, and white lilac fairly abundant. Mignonette of good quality can be had, but daffodils, while plentiful in some houses, are hard to obtain in the open market. There are a few nice Campernelles. Pansies are in fair supply. The shipping demand is about normal.

Arthur A. Niessen, secretary and treasurer of the Leo Niessen Co., was married early this month to Miss Phillips, of Baltimore. Health, wealth, and happiness!

August Doemling, of Lansdowne, Pa., will erect two new houses, 21x200 feet each, for roses the coming season. They will be built of Lord & Burnham material, the order being placed with D. T. Connor. E. Raimbeault, Buena, N. J., is sending fine lilac to John W. McIntyre.

Robert Kift reports some large funeral orders January 18. It is interesting to note that red roses and violets (not in combination) were extensively used.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

With the advent of genuine winter weather January 16 the market gives encouraging signs of hardening, and values are more generally satisfactory. There is not an overabundance of stock and business is said to be improving. Prices of all but a few kinds of cut flowers compare favorably with the quotations of a year ago at this date. Roses are in good demand, owing to the many social functions, balls, weddings and operas being in full swing, some of the events of national importance. A slight advance from last week's average was recorded Monday. Killarney, of the newer varieties, still holds the center of the stage. Beauties are in constant demand and there must be a great number arriving to hold the price so reasonable for this season. Some of the big weddings of the last two weeks have used them in thousand lots. This cold snap, which we should like to see run on until the middle of March without cessation, should give immediate tone to the market. We haven't had a full day of winter temperature this season until now.

Carnations dropped last week with quite a thud. Shoals of fine stock at times were cleaned up at $10 a thousand. Cruel knifing by the surgeons, but it was the only way to keep the patient (grower) alive. Soon he will sit up and take notice again. The best of the carnation novelties can be counted on to average 4 cents always in the winter unless an earthquake hits the market.

Plenty of orchids now available, and at lower prices, even with the remarkable demand from other cities. Grand plants in pots, beautifully decorated with ribbons, grace many of the retail windows. These sell rapidly. Gardenias, too, are abundant and prices near the ordinary pocketbook.

Sweet peas are plentiful and improving in quality. Lilies, valley, narcissi and hyacinths sell at starvation prices compared with other years.

Violets went back again to 50 cents top during last week and the street men were offering them at 25 cents a bunch on every corner.

The Tarrytown Dinner.

The annual dinner of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, January 13, was a great success. A few New Yorkers enjoyed the club's hospitality. The majority of diners-out from the city, however, were at Madison taking in the smoker there. The Tarrytown dinner itself was in advance of all previous banquets in its ten years' record. The table and wall decorations in ferns, Winsor and White Killarney, were by the F. R. Pierson Co. A snow storm raged up on those far-famed hills and kept the attendance down to fifty. Abel Weeks, the president, welcomed the visitors and turned the duties of toastmaster over to A. H. Brown, a past master in the art. The best people of Tarrytown attend these banquets. The principal speakers were Surrogate Millard, Counselor Griffin, Professor Case, of the high school; Robert Patterson; John F. Dinkel; Messrs. Lee, of White Plains; Dell, of Mt. Pleasant; Wilson, of Short Hills; F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, and Editor Raymond, of that city.

Various Notes.

It looks as if about a baker's dozen will visit the Indianapolis carnation convention from New York, but they will be the top-notchers of that department of the trade and will likely travel in a jolly company.

The dinner committee of the New York Florists' Club will meet this week at the office of Chairman Elliott to perfect plans for the enjoyment of a big crowd at this popular yearly celebration. The inclusion of the ladies in the attendance and the popular price at which the dinner will be provided should bring every member of the club, with his wife or sweetheart, to the delightful reunion. There is no reason why it shouldn't be equal to the outing, in attendance and popularity. The date will be early in February, possibly on Lincoln's birthday.

The dinner of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association takes place next Thursday, January 28, at the Hotel St. Denis, at 6:30 p. m. Chairman Miller says it will be in line with the two successful outings of the society. Fred Atkins will preside at the "feast of reason."

The Rickards brothers sang at the annual dinner of the Horticultural Society, at Red Bank, January 20.

Madison Square Garden is crowded this week with the second big auto show of the year; 15,000 were in attendance on the opening night. The booths, offices and many of the machines show evidence of the florists' art.

Harry Bunyard, of Arthur T. Boddington's, is on his western trip and is missing all the good things in the dinner line that he loves to have "warm the cockles of his heart." Mr. Boddington reports as recent visitors to New York: D. W. Waite, gardener to Samuel Untermyer, of Greystone; Jas. Duckham, of Oyster Bay, N. Y., and his brother, Wm. Duckham, of Madison, N. J.; Jas. Dowlin, of Seabright, N. J.; Messrs. Burgevin, of Kingston, N. Y.; Scott, from Danville; Farenwald, Fuerstenburg and Giger, from Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. August Hepp celebrated the golden anniversary of their wedding January 17, at their home on One-Hundred-Seventy-Sixth street. They have lived in New York over sixty years. Mr. Hepp is a landscape architect and his plans for the original Central park were incorporated in those accepted by the city.

B. Rosens has added a chiffon ribbon department to his supply house and says the demand for wild smilax this year is constant and unlimited.

John Miesem, of Elmhurst, L. I., caught a lily thief last week with the goods on him, some fifty of them, and the thief is held for special sessions.

Miss Granig, formerly with A. Warendorff, is now floral artist with Mrs. Warendorff, Sr., at the uptown store of the firm, in the Hotel Ansonia.

G. Myer, on Madison avenue, has been busy with many engagement dinners lately, in which new designs in artistic ribbon and floral decoration added to his reputation for originality. At the Gould function he had a unique vase of ten dozen American Beauties, 300 gardenias, lilac, Sunrise and Bon Silene roses that was greatly admired.

Hanft Bros., on Madison avenue, report a carte blanche order for a wedding and reception last week that utilized many thousands of white roses and valley, the largest affair of the kind this house has ever known.

Wadley & Smythe had the Hazard reception last week, at Providence, and gave that city a decoration which local reporters declare has never been approached in that capital city.

It is said there will be two flower shops opened this year in the magic zone on Fifth avenue, between Thirty-fourth street and Fifty-ninth street, that will excel anything in this country.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

Wertheimer Bros. have sent out to their customers an exceedingly neat diary and pocket account book.

Reports are in circulation in real estate circles that the reorganized Fleischman flower business is to be carried on by a new company on a greatly extended scale, with ample capital, and will be in the market for a number of stores in high-class locations, and especially on prominent corners. The florist end of the Fleischman business has always been successful, its present financial difficulties being due to other ventures, with which the new company will not be concerned. The new company was organized this week under the name of the New York Fleischman Stores. Its incorporators are Ferdinand Fleischman, Jacob Ausbacher and Stella Offenbach. The capital stock is $25,000, a merely nominal figure, which is to be increased later on.

It is reported that the new Fleischman organization has already leased several large stores, among them that of Walter J. Salomon, at Fifth avenue and Forty-second street. It also has secured the exclusive privilege of selling flowers in the Terminal buildings, 30 and 50 Church street.

BEVERLY FARMS, MASS.—George F. Wood, of the Wayside Greenhouse, set up his usual stand in Salem at Christmas, for the sale of evergreen decorations, and did an excellent business.

GRASSHOPPERS.

I am intending to grow a field of asters this season and wish to know how to prevent grasshoppers (if they can be prevented) from ruining the crop. Last year they literally destroyed everything, ate up my gladioli bodily, and everything in sight. I sprayed with tobacco solutions and Paris green without effect, but pernaps did not take them in hand soon enough. If you can give any suggestions they will be appreciated. H. C. S.

Grasshoppers are difficult to control. Even if we use poisonous substances or nicotine solutions on the foliage, it seems to have no effect. There are such countless hordes of them that the killing of a few thousands, even daily, makes no impression. The trouble is always most acute when grass land is in close proximity to the flower crops. The grass makes a natural food and home for them and, if it is possible to keep the asters some distance away from land laid down to permanent pasture, it will cause a marked diminution in the numbers of the pests.

Possibly there are other readers of the Review who can tell us some practical way of controlling grasshoppers. Such information would be thankfully received by many readers. C. W.

I take this opportunity to wish the Review not one, but many years of continued success and prosperity. Each copy is worth the dollar.—William Till, Magnolia, Mass.

BEGONIAS.

Begonias make a fine show when well grown and are good sellers with all florists doing a general retail greenhouse trade. They have bright, clean foliage that is seldom attacked by insects or fungous diseases.

Begonias are easy of culture and thrive best in a rich, warm soil with good drainage. They enjoy light and heat, but not direct sunshine, except in the dark days in winter. As the leaves are large and face the light, they may be grown on a shelf or bracket. There are many species and garden hybrids in cultivation, but a few of the leading sorts are:

Rubra is a favorite everywhere, and is still one of the best. Its strong growth and the freedom with which it produces large, waxy, coral red flowers have won the esteem of everyone who cultivates the begonia. President Carnot is much like rubra. Otto Hacker is a fine decorative plant, with immense leaves and large clusters of pendent flowers.

Among those with spotted leaves, diadema robusta and argenteo-guttata show a silvery white variegation that is quite pleasing. Metallica is a somewhat shrubby variety, with hairy stems and leaves and a metallic luster, though the flowers are not so pretty as on other sorts, but as an upright foliage plant is worthy of a place. Manicata aurea has beautifully blotched leaves, making it a very ornamental plant. Feastii has a thick, creeping stem, closely covered with large leaves that are olive-green above and red beneath. It is the best begonia for a hanging basket. It is robust in growth and a beautiful plant at all times, even when not in bloom. Sandersoni is a neat plant, with scarlet flowers.

Weltoniensis is a useful variety. It is semi-tuberous and partly deciduous. The leaf-stalk and branches are dark crimson and make a fine contrast with the leaves and pink flowers. Vernon is the best bedding variety and is also useful in vases and window boxes. I. H. S.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
Pres. Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

BUSH Lima varieties of beans are reported very scarce.

VISITED CHICAGO: John Bodger, Jr., of John Bodger & Son, Santa Paula, Cal.

MAIL trade is reported to be coming in strongly and meeting expectations fully.

REPORTS from Holland speak of severe cold, with little, if any, snow on the bulb fields.

MANY of the seed growers are making arrangements for a good display of canners' seeds at the coming annual convention of canners at Louisville, February 1 to 6.

THE Wooster Nursery Co., Wooster, O., recently took over the seed business of E. C. Green & Son, of Medina, Stephen M. Green becoming manager of the seed and greenhouse departments of the company.

THE prices for peas are higher on the average than they have been for a long time and the orders that are being booked for next year's business indicate that high prices are expected to prevail for some time to come.

THE canners are preparing for a rousing convention at Louisville, February 1 to 6. Many seedsmen will be in attendance, but to secure admission they will have to wear the membership badge of the Machinery and Supply Association.

SOME of the California growers on their way home from the east are not as optimistic as when going the other way. They report that they do not meet the old-fashioned reception. This they lay to the fact that the old timers are dropping out and the newer workers do not know them so well or follow the old methods.

THE onion set growers in the Chicago district are preparing to increase their plantings. There seems to be no limit to the possibilities for riches in this line, in the minds of some who have hit it right during the last year or two. Some of the older growers still remember, however, the time when they used onion sets as a fertilizer.

THE stock of the Ebbert Seed Co., Rocky Ford, Colo., which had been taken over by the receiver of the defunct State bank on account of paper which the bank held of the company, was put up at public auction January 11 and sold to the highest bidder. It was finally bought in by W. B. Mandeville, cashier of the Rocky Ford National Bank, for $800.

COMPLAINT seems to be general against the appearance of the samples of beans harvested during 1908. It is unfortunate when a crop is short in quantity as well as poor in quality. The fact that beans of the 1907 crop are available for this year's delivery in some cases helps out, and there is a feeling that carried-over beans will be likely to give better satisfaction than the new crop article.

SEED NOTES FROM EUROPE.

Reports of the short crops of aster seeds still come to hand from all sources and prices are likely to experience a decided advance. I notice even the Italian-grown seed, which is generally quoted at a low price, is already advanced several shillings per pound, being around 30 shillings per pound for leading sorts, as against 15 shillings last year; and other sources are also very varied in their quotations, but the tendency is now pretty well fixed to steadily advance in price.

The demand for aster seed of late years no doubt has been considerably on the increase and, with short crops, the supply of first-class quality has not been up to the demand for some years past; and I cannot find that any particular increase in the acreage of asters grown for seed has taken place in Europe excepting keeps a dear school, but fools will learn in no other, and scarce in that.

Five or ten dollars a thousand more for lily bulbs is a difference of only from one-half to one cent a bulb. If only one bulb in ten produce one more flower, it pays.

Still some haggle over price, trusting to luck instead of common sense for quality.

A shrewd buyer of bulbs buys from a reliable source, pays for quality and insists on getting it.

We will appreciate your inquiry for prices on reliable bulbs.

perhaps in Italy, in which district I believe the cultivation for seed has more than doubled in the last few years.

The cabbage seed and, I believe, all brassica seed, are fully justifying previous reports of shortage in crop and, so far as my reports go, the supply will be a long way below the demand. Current prices show a considerable advance. The only growers who have the trade well in hand seem to be the Danish firms, and some prices I have just to hand are showing the trend of trade. For Danish Ballhead 3 shillings per pound is being asked and obtained; for Danish Summer Ballhead, 3 shillings 6 pence to 4 shillings 6 pence; for Danish Roundhead, 3 shillings to 4 shillings, and for Flat Swedish 4 shillings to 5 shillings. This is a considerable advance on quotations I had at this date last year and I am informed a further advance is likely to be made in the near future.

Cauliflower for contract growths delivery autumn 1909 has also advanced, particularly Veitch's Autumn Giant, which has advanced from 2 shillings to 3 shillings 6 pence per pound, and Early Snowball, which in some cases is quoted as high as 28 shillings per pound.

The radish seed trade appears to be fairly well in hand again and practically all continental growers are offering a full list this season. Prices, however, are generally high and likely to go still higher. French growers have had this trade largely in their own hands for some years, but this season English growers and also other countries have a good stock to offer. The English growers, I understand, procure their stock seed from France every year, which appears to give much more satisfactory results than if home-grown seed is used year after year, or even one year, and by this means and careful cultivation the English grower is able to compete with any continental growers, at least as far as quality of strain is concerned, but I do not think the crop is in any season as heavy as more southern cultivations and therefore even if growers here quote their seed at the same price as their competitors (which I understand they are doing) their profits will be materially less.

SEED WAREHOUSE COLLAPSES.

Another seed warehouse collapsed January 11, the third to give down in the present season. This was that of the Amzi Godden Seed Co., Birmingham, Ala. It is a single-story building. The floor fell from its height of four feet to the ground and the side walls were warped and shaken. Ten men were at work in the building at the time, but no one was hurt. No damage was done the stock, although the accident caused some delay, as the stock had to be removed. President McVay put a gang of men at work immediately to make repairs.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending January 9 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto	13	$ 190	Millet	2806	$ 8544
Anise	156	2117	Mustard	100	1073

Castor	4158	13582	Rape	8	30
Cummin	293	5376	Other	...	10025
Lycopodium.	10	759

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $10,382.

VINE SEEDS.

A correspondent at Lakin, Kan., who signs himself J. W. L., tells the Rural New Yorker how vine seeds are grown, as follows:

"One of the reasons why seeds cannot be guaranteed is that very few are willing to pay the price. We grow large quantities of vine seed here, both for the wholesale dealers and the government, getting from 10 to 20 cents per pound.

HENRY A. DREER, Philadelphia, Pa.

In order to start this seed out with guaranty as to variety we would have to have five or six times present prices, as scarcely more than twenty per cent of the fruit is of perfect type. The crop to pay must yield from 200 to 300 pounds per acre. In order to get this we are compelled to plant closely, and cut everything that will give sound seed.

"Our stock seed is always the best, yet even in our best fields some sports and hybrids may be found. Bees and other insects are continually working over the fields, and when we consider that in many new varieties the type is not well fixed it is a wonder the results are as good as they are. Then there is the chance of stray seeds in the washing and drying machines, and when the seed is delivered the dealer simply has the grower's word for it. Of course the seed has to grade to certain standards as to color, weight, vitality, etc. Taking it altogether, I think the planter gets about all he pays for; at least we think our part of the dollar is small enough."

MONTREAL MELON INDUSTRY.

Prof. W. Stuart, of the Vermont Experiment Station, states that for years a few Canadian muskmelon growers have enjoyed a fine market in the United States for their product. These growers, through carefully selected stock and skillful cultural methods, are able to produce a melon of unusual excellence over a season extending from the middle of July to frost. These melons command fancy prices ($8 to $15 per dozen wholesale, it is stated), and even at such prices the Canadian growers are not able to supply the American demand.

It is quite generally believed that the Montreal muskmelons can be grown successfully only on a certain limited area on the island of Montreal. While the conditions of soil and climate may be especially favorable there, it seems reasonable to think that much of the success of the Canadian growers is due to their willingness to take infinite pains at every stage of this crop and that American farmers in the states bordering on Canada can perhaps be equally successful if they are willing to be equally painstaking. It is recognized, however, that the crop is an expensive and precarious one to grow, owing to frequent recurrence of unfavorable seasons and to the extreme care required to grow it successfully.

Professor Stuart states that the cultural methods employed by Montreal growers are essentially as follows:

The seed is sown in the greenhouse or hotbed from late February to early April; later they are potted up into 3-inch or 4-inch pots, and when in danger of suffering for lack of root space and plant food and the weather is favorable they are removed to sash-covered frames, there to remain until they are almost fully grown. These hotbeds are well constructed, well exposed to the sun, and also protected from cold winds. The frames are often covered with two sets of sash, mats and board shutters. With such protection, if horse manure is used to generate a sufficient bottom heat and the exposed portions of the frame are banked therewith, the plants may be grown almost as well as in a greenhouse. These frames are movable sections approximately 6x12, strong and tight, with tie rails for the sash to slide upon.

The soil over which these sections are set is ridged up in beds twelve to sixteen feet wide, with a 1-foot center elevation. A trench is dug two feet wide, fifteen to eighteen inches deep, and filled almost level with well fermenting manure, and a portion of the surface soil thrown over

Forcing Gladiolus

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladioli are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose:

it, slightly more being drawn in where the plants are to be set. The frames are then set in place and covered with sash, which in turn are further reinforced with mats and wooden shutters, or hay or straw with or without the shutters. A space four to six feet wide is allowed between the ends of each section. When the soil over the manure is well warmed up, the warmest portion of some favorable day is selected for planting. Great care is exercised in transferring the plants from the hotbeds to guard against setbacks from sudden changes of temperature or soil conditions. The coddling process does not cease now. It is simply spread over a greater area and the plants require even closer care than before, for greater attention must be paid to watering, syringing, and ventilation, success at this stage being very largely dependent thereon.

As the fruit attains size, it is usually lifted from the soil by a shingle or flat stone, to avoid loss from cracking, rot, etc. Uniform shape, color, netting, and ripening is secured by turning the fruit every few days. When the runners fairly occupy the inclosed area the frames are raised a few inches. As the season advances more and more air is admitted until, finally, when the melons are almost full grown, the sash and then the frames themselves are entirely removed.

As each fruit sets its shoot is pinched off one or two joints beyond it. A crop of fifteen to twenty melons is considered sufficient from each 6x12 frame. Three or four hills are planted and usually two plants are set per hill.

The melons vary greatly in size. Their average weight ranges from eight to fifteen pounds, and a dozen averages from 120 to 130 pounds. In exceptional cases some have been shipped weighing 240 pounds per dozen package. The larger melons are apt to be poorer in quality than those weighing eight to fifteen pounds.

Two distinct types exist, a roundish oblate, and an oblong, the first slightly deeper ribbed than the latter. These do not seem to be separated by the growers. It is not at all certain that either type is fixed.

A large wicker basket (clothes basket) is commonly employed in shipping to distant markets. They hold a dozen melons, packed in short, fine-stemmed hay, and are shipped without cover, no attempt being made to fasten the melons in place, the express company being held responsible for safe delivery.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club was held January 11, with a fair attendance considering the inclemency of the weather. The program committee presented Ralph P. Willis, who was for many years our leading local plumber, but now represents Evans, Almiral & Co., engineers and contractors, of Chicago. Mr. Willis gave an interesting talk on the subject of heating systems, in which all florists are naturally interested. Several of the members present explained the perplexing problems arising from various features of their present systems and the fact was made manifest that probably no two local ranges of houses are heated on just the same plan, and each individual florist seemed to have some idea of his own, differing from the experience of every other florist, from which it is evident that no one plan has yet proved its superiority over all others and that the ideal method has not yet been definitely and generally adopted. Many questions were promptly and very intelligently answered by Mr. Willis, who is thoroughly conversant with his business and evinced a considerable amount of ability in the aptness of his illustrations.

Various Notes.

The mail order florists have mailed a large portion of their spring catalogues and returns in the shape of orders are already coming in and every succeeding day will show an increase in the amount of mail received until the height of the spring planting season has been reached. All indications point to a heavy business and if expectations are realized, the supply of plants in some lines will hardly be sufficient to cover the demand.

John M. Good, Frank E. Good and Opha Jackson recently returned from West Baden, Ind., where a short stay was found beneficial to the health of each. Ge Dale.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Business remains only fair, with no show for improvement. Extremely cold weather prevails in Buffalo, with little sunshine. Stock is none too plentiful in the rose and carnation line. Other stock is plentiful. Bulb stock is coming in much stronger, but tulips are short-stemmed. Single daffodils are scarce and bring a good price. Peas are in big demand, with quality none too good.

Various Notes.

W. J. Palmer & Son are cutting some fine stock of Rhea Reid at the Lancaster greenhouses.

S. A. Anderson made his window attractive last week with the early rhododendron, Christmas Cheer. This makes a fine plant for early showing and forces very early after arrival, but the trouble lies in getting the shippers to send early enough for Christmas.

Dutch bulb agents made their appearance once more.

Mr. Smith, of the Boas Box Co., also called last week.

W. H. Grever, distributor of the Ever Ready pot cover, reports a heavy sale of his cover for Christmas, and is now busy preparing for his Easter business.

Mr. Kasting was prominent in society circles last week, having charge of the floor at the Elks' ball. R. A. S.

Petersburg, Va.—A. W. W. Bryan has just completed another house, 30x50, and an addition, 10x30, at his boiler shed.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The principal stock in trade in this city for a week has been weather, all kinds of it, winding up with the biggest snowfall of the year and promise of more. Most of the week has been such that it has been much more pleasant inside than out, and trade has suffered accordingly. Stock of all kinds, except lilies, has shortened up, but there is enough every day to take care of the business and the wholesalers had an easy week, everything cleaning up which came in, with no advance in prices. The shopmen and market people have had a kick coming all the week—nothing doing in society; not much funeral work and less counter trade, and so, if they were a little dumpy, we will excuse them, for they certainly should be busy during January if ever they are.

The variety of flowers is all that could be asked at this season, embracing the following: Beauties, lilac, orchids, freesia, valley, violets, Trumpets and Paper White narcissi, white and yellow tulips, daisies, primula, roses of all varieties and carnations.

Various Notes.

The receiver for the David Geddis place, in Homestead, had the sale advertised for January 20.

A number of the leading decorators accidentally met in one of the wholesale houses this week and, having plenty of time, spent a couple of hours discussing and trying to devise some way to get the price of plant decorations on a paying basis. All admit that there is no trouble about the cut flower end, as all buy their flowers so as to be able to sell at a profit, but plant decorations are usually put in at a loss. Our people are pretty generally friendly to one another; still, the competition for business is strong enough to cause them to get jobs at a loss rather than let someone else get the work. It seems impossible to make a schedule of prices to which all can subscribe, and to form a trust is out of the question. What is the answer? An article on this from some reader in another city would be interesting reading.

T. P. Langhans, committee on transportation to the carnation convention, has sent out circulars advertising the following rates: The Pittsburg & Lake Erie offers a rate of $7 each way, but no through coach is offered unless a party of eighteen is made up; the train leaves Pittsburg at 8:15 p. m., city time, arriving at Indianapolis at 7:35 a. m. The Pennsylvania rate is $8 each way; the through train leaves Pittsburg at 9:55 p. m., arriving at Indianapolis at 6:55 a. m. Sleeping car rate, $2.50 one way. The party rate is not worth considering, as it is only a saving of $1 and the party must all travel on one ticket, which probably would not be satisfactory. While a number are considering the trip, it is impossible to say at this time how many will go.

Mr. Orth, Sr., father of J. H. Orth, while on his way to the greenhouses last Thursday, was a victim of a trolley accident, the car turning completely over. While the injury is not necessarily dangerous, his advanced age increases the seriousness of the shock.

Uncle John Wyland has been indisposed lately, but hopes to be able to attend the convention.

Chas. Eissner is also on the sick list.

HOO-HOO.

BALTIMORE

The Market.

Last week was quite dull, the weather wet or cloudy, with heavy fogs, and unseasonably warm the first part of the week, but on Saturday, January 16, we were visited by a severe snow storm. The temperature dropped to 20 degrees. This weather is telling on roses and carnations, the stock coming in soft and off color. It is a tribute to the good work of many growers that stock is as good as it is. Some fine Killarney, Bridesmaid and Liberty roses are seen in the stores. Carnations are coming in fairly well, mostly white and pink, with an occasional lot of red, which is always in demand. Cattleyas may be seen in most of the large stores, which is evidence that the orchid is coming within the reach of more people as the trade expands.

Blooming plants that failed to make the Christmas holidays are now to be had in quantities. Azaleas and cyclamens are the leaders and some choice stock is seen at the Baltimore Florists' Exchange.

Various Notes.

Henry Eberhardt, of Catonsville, is seriously ill. He is one of the oldest charter members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club.

Professor Blodgett, of College Park, gave a talk on "Botany and the Origin of Plant Life," at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, Monday, January 11.

The Baltimore Florists' Exchange has re-elected the following board of directors: Edwin A. Seidewitz, president; F. C. Bauer, vice-president; J. M. Rider, secretary; William G. Lehr, treasurer; I. H. Moss and Philip B. Welsh.

A number of the large growers here are complaining about the way My Maryland rose is doing. It seems as though it has taken a rest, as there is not a flower to be seen on some of the benches. It started out with a heavy crop and did nicely until about six weeks ago, and since then it is at a standstill. It was the intention of almost every rose grower to plant a good share of his space to this promising rose and its behavior is being watched with interest. O.

WASHINGTON.

State of Trade.

Continued cloudy weather, sleet, snow and rain, have shortened up the cut, especially on roses. There are quite a few Harrisii lines coming in, mostly short-stemmed. Orchids are plentiful and all the stores are stocked up with cattleyas and cypripediums. White lilac is fine, and plenty of it.

Funeral work has been heavy with all the stores this week.

Various Notes.

David Bisset, of Garrett Park, has a fine crop of single violets which find ready sale.

George Cooke has not handled any double violets since Christmas. He is handling singles altogether. They are more in demand than ever.

J. H. Small & Sons had the social event of the week, the Gates-Hemenway wedding at the New Willard hotel. The small ballroom was banked with palms and Easter lilies. Ribbon aisles led to the kneeling stool, which stood in front of a mass of lilies and green. In the banquet hall a large buffet table was done in Richmond roses and white lilac. The bride's table was done with Killarney roses and valley.

Z. D. Blackistone had the decoration for the reception at the Japanese legation. The parlor was done in Beauties, the reception hall in My Maryland and white lilac. The table was done with Richmond roses and valley.

F. H. Kramer had a quarter page ad last week, offering fern balls, and using a coupon cut from the ad. He sold 987 in one day. The price was 29 cents and a coupon.

Wm. F. Gude has been elected president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce. This puts the florists in front in the nation's capital, as J. H. Small was recently elected president of the Board of Trade.

Mr. Snell, formerly with a Connecticut avenue florist, is now with Marche & Co.

The Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, is said to be contemplating opening a branch wholesale house in Washington.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Valentine Burgevin's Sons, of Kingston, N. Y., place Victory and White Enchantress at the head of their respective classes. Though they decline to give positive figures as to the yield, owing to the fear of being flooded with mail, the cut has been most satisfactory. They have a much improved sport from the Tarrytown strain of White Enchantress, which brings the flower close to the best form of White Perfection, which latter is still a favorite with all growers. Kingston Pet, which originated here, has been distributed locally only. It is a form of Rose-pink Enchantress, but the color is even more pleasing.

Mention was made, in passing through a rose house 30x100 feet, that since August 15 to date, 55,000 blooms had been cut. This record was not intended for publication, but is too good to pass unmentioned. Rhea Reid is a gem. Mrs. Jardine will occupy a whole house next season. Double violets are but little grown now on the west shore of the Hudson, but it is hard to beat the grand Princess of Wales as grown here.

Speaking of the satisfactory condition of holiday business, there was a great call for plants in baskets and vases; in fact anything, new or odd, sold well. Our friends here are fully alive to all demands, and a visit to their store or houses at any time is most instructive.

At Millbrook, N. Y., some of the finest specimens of begonia ever seen were grown by Herbert Fletcher, gardener to C. F. Dieterich, at Christmas. Some hanging baskets filled with Gloire de Lorraine and Turnford Hall measured fully four feet across. This charming plant is destined to stay for a while, despite the disappointments connected with it. The retailer declares he will not handle it another season, but what is there so popular that can fill the bill just now?

W. C. Russell, in addition to being the only commercial craftsman at Millbrook, is the recorder of a bowling team organized by the private gardeners. Scores are made that would put the veterans of the metropolis to blush. Mr. Russell is adding a show house, 20x100 feet.

Henry Hansen, of Catskill, N. Y., says Boston Market and White Perfection are the best whites he has for shipping purposes. He has a snug business and is, in addition, superintendent of the town cemetery.

Wm. Cordes, gardener to F. V. Burton, of Balmville, N. Y., is justly proud of his unique collection of palms, equaled only by the botanic gardens. All are carefully labeled, thus making the recognition of old and rare favorites more easy.

J. W. Cunningham, of Cold Spring, N. Y., is adding a house, 20x100 feet, to enable him to keep pace with increasing demand.

William Williams, of West Kingston, N. Y., took over the old Stow place last spring and has thoroughly gone over it. He notes a decided improvement in business.

J. G. Barrett, of Troy, N. Y., justly lays claim to being the banner designer of the Trojan City. At the time of my visit his workroom was jammed with big designs for the funeral of a prominent citizen. Growing a large variety of stock makes it much easier for the artist.

ASTERS FOR CUTTING.

This is the proper time to plant asters for summer flowers in the vicinity of San Francisco, and, although the last week has been a very stormy one, there is no danger if the seed is protected from the excessive rainfall. For an early variety, where no extra long stem is desired, Queen of the Market is one of the best for this locality. It is at least three weeks earlier than any of the long-stemmed varieties and it commences to bloom at the time when there is a dearth of outside stock. For September and October flowers there are a half dozen different varieties that succeed equally well.

It is a good plan to plant the seed in flats, not too thick, and give them plenty of sunlight during these dark days. It is not necessary to have bottom heat, although a little does no harm. Six weeks after the seed is planted the young plants should be transplanted into flats and they will then, by the first part of April, be ready for their permanent planting.

This is the proper way to handle asters that are wanted for early blooming or for selling from flats. When the later varieties are desired for growing for blooms, the seed can be planted in coldframes about the middle of February and the young plants will not have to be put in flats at all, as by the time they are big enough to handle at all the weather will be warm enough to put them out in the open, where they are expected to bloom.

The aster is a gross feeder and to obtain the best results they should be grown on new ground every year, or not in the same ground oftener than every other season. Plenty of moisture and manure and lots of cultivation are imperative if long stems and big flowers are wanted. The aster seems to succeed best on land that is rather sandy and they can hardly be given too much water during the flowering season.

Great care must be taken in the selection of seed and it is always well to change the source of the seed supply every two or three seasons. Seed that is grown from the plants and replanted on the same ground does not give as much satisfaction as that from some other locality after the second or third season.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Continued rain for a week has dampened the ardor of the flower buying public, and likewise of the florists. It has also made stock of all kinds rather scarce, but the demand has been so light for everything that the scarcity has not been noticed to any extent. There have been several spurts of funeral work, and quite a quantity of white stock has been used up, but with everything else the market has been dead.

Narcissi of all kinds have, with the advent of warm rains, become overplentiful and Paper Whites can be purchased at $1 per hundred. Daffodils sell well and the retailers buy them at from $2.50 to $4 per hundred. From present appearances they will be one of the best selling spring flowers. Acacia molissima flowers have made their appearance and huge bunches are being displayed in the shops and by the street hucksters. Violets are overplentiful and cost the retailers 75 cents per dozen bunches. Valley and Roman hyacinths move slowly. Carnations are a shade cheaper than they have been at any time this season, because business is poor. Roses are practically in the same condition. Outside mums are holding out well. Practically all that is left are the late flowering white sorts, with a few poor yellows.

Christmas berries, owing to the severe frosts in the mountains, are over for another season. Green stuff of all kinds still finds much favor with the public who desire to decorate, but will soon be displaced by early fruit blossoms.

A visit to some of the leading retail establishments in Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda shows much the same conditions that abound in San Francisco. All the store men are anxious to have the rain cease. There is in this locality ample moisture at present to allow planting of all kinds to progress and a few hours of bright sunshine and drying winds would tempt the flower buying public to frequent the stores again.

Various Notes.

Frank Barber, of Portland, is in town for a few days' stay.

Samuel Lundy, of the Thorsted Floral Co., of Oakland, has been appointed state vice-president for the northern portion of California for the Society of American Florists.

AMHERST, MASS.

Massachusetts Agricultural College.

Eber Holmes, of Montrose, Mass., gave an instructive talk before the classes in floriculture on Wednesday, January 13. Mr. Holmes spoke on methods followed in the propagation and culture of roses, and he treated the subject in a practical, comprehensive manner.

Nineteen young men are taking the short course in floriculture. These are: J. B. Allen, Haverhill, Mass.; L. E. Avery, Plymouth, Mass.; R. A. Badger, of Totman's, Randolph, Vt.; A. L. Galerneau, of Totman's, Randolph, Vt.; H. D. Barston, South Hadley, Mass.; Harry Bayer, New York, N. Y.; C. F. Belchers, South Framingham, Mass.; J. C. Bibber, Freeport, Me.; P. A. Derr, Williamsport, Pa.; G. A. Felch, of Felch's Greenhouses, Ayer, Mass.; N. J. Fennelly, of Galvin's, Boston, Mass.; R. M. Forbes, of Worcester Conservatories, Worcester, Mass.; F. L. Midgley, of Worcester Conservatories, Worcester, Mass.; W. S. Imlay, Zanesville, O., with the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.; Esther M. Johnson, Cambridge, Mass.; E. M. F. Perrin, Potsdam, N. Y.; A. A. Phelps, Southboro, Mass.; E. A. R. Schmitz, Danvers, Mass.; Harlow Welch, Boston, Mass.

Many of these young men expect to return to their former positions at the close of the course, but a few desire positions about March 15.

The observation trip last Saturday was to the commercial establishment of H. W. Field, Northampton, Mass. This range is strictly up-to-date in every respect and is one of the best in central Massachusetts. All of Mr. Field's crops were in excellent condition and the trip was a fine object lesson as to how a range of greenhouses should be run. Detailed written reports of the trip, including a sketch to show the location of all the houses, have been prepared by each short-course student.

This week the trip will be to the Mt. Holyoke College conservatories.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN. Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

W. F. SCHELL, of the Wichita Nursery Co., Wichita, Kan., states that the company is starting a nursery near Floral, in Cowley county, Kansas, where conditions all are thought to be favorable.

W. C. REED, of Vincennes, Ind., has been at Mobile, Ala., attending a meeting of the classification committee of the railroad lines west of the Mississippi to oppose any changes in classification which will effect an advance in freight rates on nursery stock. Mr. Reed will remain in the south for several weeks.

THE second annual convention of Ohio nurserymen was held in Columbus, January 13, at which President J. W. McNary, of Dayton, was reëlected for the ensuing year. The convention was concluded with an elaborate banquet at the Northern hotel. A full representation of the nurserymen of the state was present.

J. H. HALE says Vermont is the ideal state for growing winter apples, because of cheap lands, favorable climate and nearness to the consumers. "There are great apple possibilities all over New England," says Mr. Hale, "but Vermont can be the great apple state of the Union if she will." Mr. Hale has in the last few years planted to apples several hundred acres of New England hills.

STRAWBERRY CULTURE.

Are the Profits Decreasing?

Forty or fifty years ago the Wilson strawberry was the leader in the strawberry field and about the only sure cropper. A few other varieties were on trial, but some bore sparingly and some were barren.

After a while the growers began to talk a little botany, and to speak about staminate and pistillate blossoms. It came about in this way, as the story goes: A man by the name of Longfellow, a grower in Cincinnati, O., was hoeing out his strawberry patch, and a part of his work was to pull out a certain kind of blossoms, plant and all. He threw some of the plants over the fence into the street. An old Frenchwoman came along and asked permission to take some of the rejected plants. "Certainly," responded Mr. Longfellow, "but they are of no account, madam." The old woman said they were the male plants, and she planted them among her plants, which needed a fertilizer, and grew a large crop of fine strawberries.

About that time some growers went into the business of producing new varieties of staminate and pistillate plants, or what they called male and female plants. The female plant is absolutely barren if planted alone, out of reach of a fertilizer. The old Crescent, the Bubach No. 5, the Enormous and many other fine varieties are in this class. Among the male plants, or the fertilizers, as we call them, are the old Wilson, the Captain Jack, the Charles Downing and the Brandywine, and some others are fair croppers if planted alone. The old Wilson, now out of date in flavor, was a good cropper. The Brandywine, in California, is a world-beater, with proper irrigation giving a fair crop for eleven months in the year. Forty years ago the harvest lasted from twenty-four to twenty-eight days. Thirty years ago the period of harvest began to shorten. In five years the harvest lasted only from eight to twelve days, and today the strawberry grower is working at his job with little profit.

Is there any cure for this degeneration? John G. Bubach, the originator of Bubach's No. 5, said it was lack of fertilizing, as the honey bee was a fail-

Hardy Roses and Ramblers

FOR FORCING

The right time to buy Roses is when they are fresh and well-ripened. Roses potted up in the Fall or late Winter become better established and force better, and are far more satisfactory in every way, and you can retard or force at your leisure. We recommend the American-grown "Ramblers." Don't attempt to force imported Ramblers; the general experience is that they are failures.

Trimming and Training.

This is a subject upon which there is much difference of opinion among the growers. There are many different methods or systems that are followed by different men, and each grower usually thinks that his way is the best.

There is also a difference of opinion on whether it pays to trim at all, or whether it is just as well to let the vines grow as they please. This haphazard, hit-or-miss, trust-to-luck system is probably followed by more growers than all other systems put together. The convenient excuse, "Don't have time," is usually given, but the man who does his trimming in this way is the same one who kicks the tobacco stems and ashes up against the end of the house the next morning after fumigating, and throws the dead plants and pots under the bench —all for the same reason, "Can't seem to find time."

Does It Pay?

But there are some men who have a system of finding time to do everything that needs doing about the place, but do not trim or train their cuke vines because they do not think it pays, and we must admit that the proprietor who cuts down that expense for labor will have a good chance to make as good a profit as his neighbor who gets a much larger crop and pays out much of the receipts for labor to care for the crop.

One thing is certain, and that is that it is not absolutely necessary to trim, because the plants will yield a fairly good crop even if never touched with the knife, as they do outdoors. But another thing is certain also, and that is that if systematic trimming is followed faithfully, the yield of the plants can be considerably increased and the vines will not get all into a tangled mass, with overlapping leaves and branches, so as to cause so many leaves to get yellow and rot and make such an excellent breeding place for disease and insects.

Trimming to Increase the Yield.

How trimming increases the yield is explained by the fact that a branch on a cucumber vine usually has a fruit set on the joint of the first leaf from the main stalk, and sometimes another on the second joint, but will then continue to grow out several joints longer before setting any more fruit. Instead, it is taking the growth which should be given to the one or two little fruits which are set and in need of the sap being sent up from the roots. If the end is cut out of these branches (when small), just beyond the fruit, the fruit will swell up much more quickly, and in the meantime the cut will heal over and branches will break out from the eyes which are just above every leaf. The new branch or branches will set fruit again, just as the other did, and can be trimmed and treated just the same, and so on as long as the crop lasts, getting nearly as many fruits as leaves, while in the untrimmed way there are many more leaves than cucumbers.

The work of trimming and training is a puzzle to any one who does not understand it, but can easily be understood if a little study be given the matter.

The Different Systems.

There are two decidedly different ways of starting the trimming. One is the single-stem system and the other is the branched system.

The single-stem system is followed by trimming all branches, called laterals, off at the first or second leaf and allowing only the main stalk to keep on growing straight up. The branched system is started by taking a strong branch out on each side of the main stalk and then up parallel with the main and about a foot or a foot and a half apart. These two branches will grow as strong as the main and branch out just the same. The only difference is, that they are all three fed by one root stalk instead of each having its own roots.

Some growers train to the single stem, turn all branches to one or two fruits and let them hang down close against the main stalk, tying only the main stalk, like a string of smilax or a single stem tomato plant, but most growers train their vines on wires running about ten inches apart, one above the other, like a fence running the length of the house, really like a grape arbor indoors, except that they are A-shaped instead of square. The branches are tied out along these wires and held away from the main stalk.

The Favorite Method in England.

The most popular system used in England is the single-stem system, selecting a lateral to run each way on each wire and trimming these off at the second leaf, thus having four eyes on each wire from which branches will sprout. These branches from a branch or lateral are called sub-laterals and they are cut off promptly at the first leaf. Branches will break out at any joint, whether there is a cuke set there or not. All branches or subs are thereafter trimmed at the first leaf. The only object in having two leaves or joints on the first laterals is to have enough eyes from which the sub-laterals are to spring, so as to get a large plant as soon as possible. This same system is used in this country also, but somewhat differently, by trimming everything at the first joint from the start and having the plants a little closer together.

Where the branched or three-main system is followed, the laterals are usually trimmed to one leaf or joint, unless the growth does not seem thick enough. In that case they are allowed to have several leaves for a while, in order to have plenty of places for more subs to sprout from, to cover over the trellis more thickly.

Caution in Close Trimming.

It was formerly supposed that to trim off a lateral close to a fruit would injure the fruit, but it has been found that it will not affect the fruit unless the branch has gone too long and grown too large, so as to bleed too much when cut off. It is not well to take off large branches. They must be taken in time, when small, and if too large it may be stopped by taking out the tip only. Many growers still cling to the old method of leaving one leaf beyond the fruit, both as a protection to the fruit and as a source of more branches.

Personally, I prefer the one leaf to a branch system of trimming, but like to give the roots plenty of room and not put the plants too close together. So I compromise by using the branched system or by using the single-stem system and al-

After careful investigation, having become satisfied that the Waban Strain of White Killarney is superior to anything now in the market, we have withdrawn our Sport and will not propagate it at all. We have made arrangements with the Waban Rose Conservatories to procure an abundant supply of their stock and will propagate only from that. lowing the first branches two eyes, so as to spread over a wider area on the start. The proper distance apart to plant in this case is two to two and one-half feet, and for branched systems a foot apart for each branch. That is, three-stemmed plants would be placed three feet apart, one plant in a place. Where two plants are put together, or two in a hill, and trained up V-shape, each plant is usually allowed one branch out on its side of the V, and the double plants or hills are three and one-half feet apart. This method is most common among the growers in the eastern states, and is a very satisfactory way. The vines are usually carefully trimmed and tied until they start bearing; then they are let go and care for themselves. H. G.

Trade Conditions.

Business could be a great deal better than it is, but still, it is better than it was last year at this time. A good quantity of stock keeps on the move, but still there is plenty of it. Prices have dropped a little, but at the same time first-class stock brings a first-class price. With plenty of good stock, it is not a difficult matter to satisfy the customer. January weddings and receptions have been numerous. Funeral work, also, has been plentiful.

The weather last week included some of nearly every kind—rain, sleet, snow, zero and thawing, but no sunshine. The weather throughout last month was dull, with a bad effect on the roses.

Club Meeting.

The Dayton Florists' Club held its first annual banquet at the Phillips house, January 11. Nearly all members of the club, with their wives, were present. The entire arrangements, as heretofore stated, were made by the ladies, and everything was carried out to perfection. The menu, which was daintily selected, and served with the accompaniment of harp music, seemed to appeal to the taste of all present. The banquet hall was artistically decorated with palms, smilax and cut flowers. The table decorations were unique and up-to-date. As a souvenir of the occasion, each one present received a handsomely decorated menu.

Mrs. E. Young, who was at the head of the banquet committee, announced the toasts, and those who responded were: H. H. Ritter, president; Horace Frank, secretary; George Bartholomew, treasurer; I. J. Schaefer, Wm. McNary, E. E. Schaefer and W. J. Engle.

After the toasts, a short business session was conducted by the president. All present declared that they had had a most enjoyable time, and expressed the desire that the club would allow the ladies to arrange for all like functions in the future.

Various Notes.

Sleighing is the best it has been for years and everyone is taking advantage of it in all ways possible. W. G. Matthews has a fine race horse, Opalhal, which captured the blue ribbon in street racing last week. Mr. Matthews was unable to attend the club meeting, on account of business which called him to Chicago.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business was satisfactory all last week. Nothing startling happened, but a steady demand has kept the market well cleaned up. All the stock is of good quality. Roses are coming in nicely. Carnations are fine. Bulbous stock is commencing to come in. Some fine tulips and jonquils are arriving from Mt. Clemens. Romans and Paper Whites are plentiful. Sweet peas are also getting better.

Club Meeting.

The club meeting January 18 was not largely attended, but those on hand were treated to a most interesting account of the development of the flower business in Detroit, by Robert Flowerday. He began with his boyhood days in Holland. It was in 1874 that he began work for Stephen Taplin in this city. Among other things he said he can recall at least 135 varieties of carnations grown here at different times, but now not seen.

Charles Warncke was elected to membership. Mr. Ellis, of Leamington, Ont., was a visitor.

Various Notes.

Henry Fruck has entered the employ of J. Breitmeyer's Sons and will look after the orchids at the Mack avenue greenhouses. Herman Knope, foreman for Breitmeyer's, has been absent for some time, owing to sickness.

In the last four years three men have come to grief through attempting to flim-flam B. Schroeter with bad checks. The last of the trio, a young man of rather fine appearance, dropped into the store Saturday evening, January 16, and after having two dozen Beauties packed in a box, tendered one of the clerks a worthless check for $20. At police headquarters he was later identified by Murray Patterson, from whom he obtained $4 and a box of flowers last Thursday. He also was identified by W. B. Brown, who would not accept his check, but who did send $6 worth of flowers to a well known family, who later called up and wanted to know who was so kind as to send them flowers.

One of Detroit's best candy firms is removing from its present quarters to 216 Woodward avenue, which is next door to J. F. Sullivan's store, meaning additional patronage for "J. F." H. S.

HARTFORD, CONN.—N. F. Beck has gone out of the florists' business.

CLARINDA, IA.—J. V. Pfander has reorganized his business, taking a partner and doubling his greenhouse capacity. The name of the firm will be Pfander & Crosthwait.

NEW DEPARTMENT—ROOTED CUTTINGS

So many customers and other growers have asked us to supply Young Stock (rooted cuttings and 2½-inch plants), that we have decided to add this department as a regular line of our business. We shall handle only such Young Stock as we know to be first-class in every respect—from growers we know to produce and ship nothing but the best. At the same time, our outlet is so large we can make quick sale for all growers who have first-class Young Stock of desirable varieties.

LEXINGTON, KY.

The Market.

We are having some real winter weather, but good business is reported by all the florists. Sunshine is what we need, as we have not had any in this vicinity for a week.

All downtown stores have been busy with funeral work for the last two weeks, and some good work has been turned out. Business conditions in other ways are satisfactory and have been so since the holidays.

Roses and carnations are of fairly good quality, considering the dark weather we have had here. White Perfection and the Enchantress varieties are the leaders here at present. Beacon is considered the best all-around red.

Sweet peas are constantly improving and quantities are used in funeral work by some of the florists. Lilium longiflorum is of good quality. Lily of the valley, Paper White narcissi, callas, Roman hyacinths and other bulbous stock are coming in, and the quality and demand are fairly good. Green goods are plentiful and are selling well. There are some good plants in some of the downtown stores, such as azaleas, cyclamens, etc.

Various Notes.

Otto Heberling, of the Georgetown Floral Co., Georgetown, Ky., was a recent visitor here.

S. S. Kelley is serving on the petit jury.

William Bell has been very busy with funeral work. Miss Elizabeth Lyle, his saleslady and designer, will attend the carnation convention at Indianapolis. Miss Lyle has been with Mr. Bell about four or five years, and is a highly competent designer.

Louis A. Michler, of the Michler Bros. Co., reports a fairly good business.

H. F. Hillenmeyer, the nurseryman, is particularly busy these days.

Blue Grass.

Raspeburg, Md.—John P. Willheim has a prosperous business, with about an acre under glass.

Cromwell, Conn.—A. N. Pierson is erecting another greenhouse, to be used for grafted roses.

Mr. Mum Man

I presume you received my catalog of new and standard chrysanthemums.

I presume you also know that I won the two principal classes of 40 varieties in Chicago; and also the Silver Medal for best collection of singles. If you are a customer of mine you do not wonder at it. If you are not a customer don't you think it's time we got acquainted? There's a reason. So send for my list if you did not receive it.

New Carnations == 1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal; closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Immediate delivery.

CHAS. KNOPF FLORAL CO., Richmond, Ind., and S. J. REUTER & SON, Inc., Westerly, R. I.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50 00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

BARNARD, N. Y.

Will the Review allow me a little space for the news from Barnard? Starting with a visit to Charles Fry, we find his place looking well, as it invariably does. All his carnations are doing fairly well, though somewhat off crop at present. Mr. Fry picked heavily all the fall from some 10,000 plants. He cut over 40,000 blooms up to January 1, growing such kinds as Lawson, Enchantress, Winsor, Beacon, White Perfection, White Lawson, Queen and White Enchantress.

Then we cross the road to Mr. Clifford's place, and there, also, we find everything looking well. His place is just coming into crop on white, pink having been the mainstay so far. His sweet peas are particularly good.

At the establishment of the Vick & Hill Co. we see some fine lots of geraniums and other young plants that are coming along for spring, and also some fairly good carnations. And, by the way, there is a fine lot of aster seed here.

At Charles Lee's place we notice that the carnations are looking nice and clean and are well loaded with buds. There are also some nice plants here for spring trade.

Our next call is at E. H. Ruestow's, and we are pleased to see that both he and his carnations are looking well.

At George Bennett's place the carnations were in first-class condition, especially Enchantress, which were in full bloom for the holidays and are full of buds still. F. B.

Rugby, N. D.—N. P. Lindberg's holiday trade showed an increase of forty per cent over that of last year, and everything was cleaned out at a good profit. Mr. Lindberg will build three more houses, each 25x90, in the coming spring. At the date of this report, January 11, the outside temperature here was 42 degrees below zero.

The Market.

We have had several snow storms lately, which delayed traffic somewhat, but we have good sleighing at present, with open weather. Twelve degrees above zero is the coldest weather we have had.

Good cut flowers are in great demand, and the supply is hardly sufficient. Freesias, sweet peas and speciosum lilies are seen on display.

Various Notes.

W. O. Baur has returned from a pleasure trip to Toledo and Cleveland.

The florists have put out some fine calendars this year. Baur's showed a lady with a corsage of violets; Offerle & Schaal's showed a lady and gentleman opening a box of choice cut flowers, and J. V. Laver also had a handsome calendar. B. P.

CARTHAGE, MO.

Stephen Hyde, Jr., has begun the erection of four greenhouses, each 30x600 feet, in connection with his present plant. These new buildings will practically double the space devoted to his business, but the new houses will not be ready for use before next fall.

The greenhouses now in use contain 50,000 square feet of glass, so that when the improvements are completed Mr. Hyde will have a range containing 90,000 square feet of glass. The new houses will be used for carnations.

The new boilers will also be installed next summer, to heat the new greenhouses, and when all improvements and additions are completed Mr. Hyde will have one of the largest and most complete establishments in the southwest.

Oskaloosa, Ia.—Theodore Greve has built a greenhouse on North Sixth street.

Greenhouse Heating.

WRITE the REVIEW about your heating troubles; state the details, giving a little sketch of the way your houses are laid out, and we will give you the benefit in this department of the suggestions of one of the best greenhouse heating engineers in the country.

THE consolidation of the American Blower Co., Detroit, and the Sirocco Engineering Co., New York, the two largest firms in their line, is of much importance to the heating and ventilating trades, and of interest to florists, as many are using steam traps purchased of the American Blower Co.

HOUSES AT RIGHT ANGLES.

My house No. 1 is 23x50. It runs east and west, with the boiler in the east end. The main is 2½-inch. There are two flows, each 2-inch. There are six 1¼-inch returns on the north side and four 1¼-inch returns on the south side. There is plenty of heat and the boiler has plenty of extra capacity.

My house No. 2 is 16x130 and runs north and south. How can I best pipe this? Shall I use one flow or two? How many and what size of returns will be needed? Would I need any gates to cut off heat, as I want house No. 2 to be 5 degrees cooler than house No. 1? It is never very cold here, in southern Georgia. Our coolest temperature is about 20 degrees above zero, two or three times during the winter. T. G.

As I understand your statement, the question is how to heat the house 16x130, which stands at right angles to the other house. The house 16x130 can be heated by carrying one 2½-inch flow from the boiler down house No. 1 to a point under the ridge of No. 2, then to the far end of No. 2, and there feeding eight 1½-inch returns placed under the benches or upon the side walls. An independent return should also be provided for this house. It should be the same size as the flow. This is calculated for a temperature of 45 degrees, in an outside temperature of 20 degrees. L. C. C.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Business has been somewhat freaky during the last few weeks, the demand for cut flowers having been spasmodic. There have been a number of funerals at which the floral displays were large, but these have been so scattered and the orders for designs so divided among the dealers that few have experienced any great activity.

Various Notes.

The Newport Horticultural Society is arranging for the eleventh annual ball, to take place in Masonic hall in February.

W. Hoffman, of Pawtucket, is cutting some fine Lilium longiflorum.

Department, last week. More than forty pieces were counted. Charles Hunt, of South Providence, had several of these.

The Market.

Business is still dull. There is not a great deal of stock, so it would seem that if there were a little spurt in the demand, there would not be enough flowers to go around. If business improves and the supply of stock does not increase, there will be a good, stiff rise in prices and things ought to go along at a merry clip.

The supply of stock is not heavy. Really good roses are scarce. Beauties are selling well and red roses of other varieties are in demand. The cut of carnations is increasing, but even with the quiet business there is not an oversupply of them. Sweet peas are coming in larger quantities and are selling at much lower prices and more slowly. Violets, too, are coming strong and are not selling so well. They are fine in quality, especially some from the east. Lilies seem to be more in demand than anything else, and the price on them holds up well. Judging from the reports from other markets, I suppose we have no kick coming, as they all report business as slow.

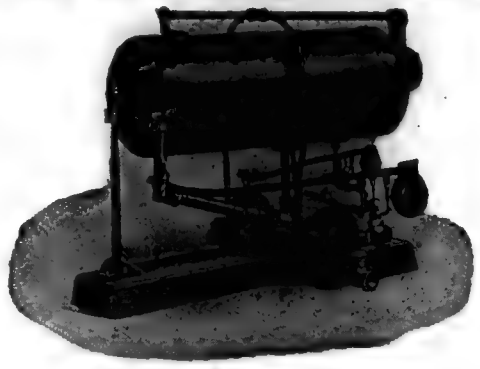
The charity ball failed to bring forth the anticipated demand for violets and sweet peas. The ball hardly created a ripple, so far as the demand was concerned. The market was well stocked with this class of goods, in the hope that they would all be sold out at high prices, but there was quite a large supply left over.

Various Notes.

Park Superintendent J. W. Rodgers is in Columbus, O., attending a convention.

William Dilger and Mr. Hinchman, of the Park Board of Detroit, Mich., were callers last week on their way to Virginia.

The executive committee of the Cincinnati Florists' Society met at E. E. Gillett's, last Friday afternoon. They got down to business at once and, after some discussion, the chairmen of the various committees to have charge of the S. A. F. convention were named. All of the appointments will be confirmed Saturday night, January 23, when there will be a general meeting of the society at Weiland & Olinger's, 136 East Third street. It is expected that this meeting will be largely attended, as business of great importance will be transacted.



E. G. Gillett will attend the meeting of the carnation convention at Indianapolis next week.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

There has been a decided falling off in the cut of all kinds of flowers. Roses are in short supply and, owing to the continued dark weather, they are rather poor. Carnations are moving better, with not enough to supply the demand part of the time. Violets continue to move slowly, some of the retail stores running special sales on Saturday. All light flowers were better sellers last week, there being quantities of funeral work all the week.

Various Notes.

Albrecht & Smith, of East Ninth street, have moved to their new location on Prospect street, which is a great improvement over the old one, as the building is more modern.

The J. M. Gasser Co. is sending a good cut of Maids, with fine color and good, long stems.

Ogden Gaul entertained a few close friends at cards on Saturday evening, and the occasion was greatly enjoyed by all present.

Westman & Getz report having had a heavy trade last week.

Mrs. Isaac Kennedy is improving daily, having been operated on a few days ago.

B.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

The cut flower trade is good. Flowers are quite plentiful, with the demand fairly good. Funeral work is good, using up lots of short stock. Carnations retail at 50 cents and 60 cents per dozen, roses at $1.50 and $2 per dozen. Violets are coming in of good quality; $1.50 per hundred is the general retail price. Sweet peas bring $1 per hundred. Some nice tulips are to be seen; they retail at 60 cents per dozen. Paper Whites sell at 50 cents per dozen, retail.

Various Notes.

J. H. Cleary is receiving nice carnations from S. S. Peckham, of Fairhaven. Mr. Peckham is quite busy these days installing Columbus gasoline engines, of which he is the agent.

William P. Peirce is showing some nice carnations in his window, chief among them being Rose-pink Enchantress. He is also showing a fine line of flowering plants.

R. E. Nofftz is bringing in lots of bulb stuff, this being one of his specialties.

Fred Reynolds, formerly with S. S. Peckham, is now back at his old place with Dick.

Davenport & Son had a nice window last week, of tulips and carnations.

We have had some very cold days in January so far, but at present the weather is quite mild.

Seedsmen's catalogues are now arriving fast, the first sign of coming spring. Let it come, and welcome.

HAMMOND'S GRAPE DUST

MILDEW ON ROSES, CARNATIONS, ETC. IT IS SIMPLE AND EASILY APPLIED.

Staatsburgh, N. Y., May 25th, 1908.

MR. HAMMOND. Dear Sir:

Replying to your inquiries regarding Grape Dust, would say that we use it solely on Roses, Carnations and Chrysanthemums. As a Fungicide we have not found anything to equal it; it is simple and easily applied. We close down the ventilators and fill the house with dust blown through the bellows; when the dust has settled down we ventilate again, putting on a little air as required. We have been using your Grape Dust with good results for the last 14 years. Yours truly, Business Good.

No one here has any "kick" on business. The carnation growers say the demand for cut blooms has been so good that they have been pushed to find the stock to fill orders, and the condition of their places verifies it, for stock is being cut tight. Crops have been only moderate, because of little sun in January, but there are plenty of buds and the promise of a good cut right along if someone will only "push dem clouds away," as the minstrel sings it. Shipments of rooted cuttings are going out heavily.

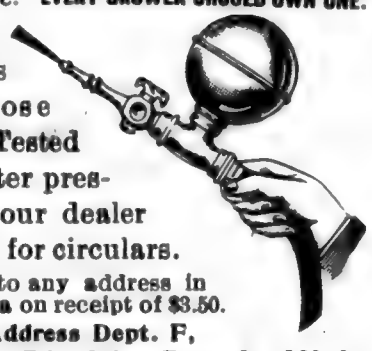
At the retail end, business is just what it ordinarily is at this season—an occasional decoration, but more funeral work and the usual dribble of counter sales.

Various Notes.

A. C. Rott has been having his own troubles since the cold weather arrived January 7. One of his windows contains a gold-fish pond and the other is fitted up for stock. Both windows froze up tight; even the pipes to the water window burst and he had to take a hatchet to rescue the gold-fish. Mr. Rott is looking forward to the day when he can get a new store-front put in, with one large, straight window instead of two semicircular ones

The J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. states that its business this year, in both blooms and cuttings, is running well ahead of last season and Chas. M. Fish, the manager, says he is anxious for the day to come when they can put up some more houses. One morning recently he arrived at the plant to find that a bursted heating pipe in the office had taken off about all the varnish on the woodwork and furniture. There was no other damage.

A. T. Pyfer and P. Olsem will go to the Carnation Society's convention at Indianapolis in the special car from Chicago. The Chicago Carnation Co. will make about its usual showing in the exhibition. The new variety, on the Prosperity order but with much more color, will be shown for about the first time.



The famous herd on the Higinbotham estate is to be sold off at auction this week.

The replevin case by which J. D. Thompson lost possession of the horse on which he twice paid $82 express charges is set for hearing January 22.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.—The plant houses of H. W. Field were visited recently by the nineteen students of the floricultural course at Amherst, under the guidance of Prof. E. A. White.

TRI-CITIES.

The Market.

Business is rather brisk at present, and flowers are scarce. The scarcity, however, is largely due to the dark weather.

Club Meeting.

The Tri-City Florists' Club held its regular meeting Thursday evening, January 14, at the Davenport Outing Club, and the attendance was good, all the regular members being present. President William Knees was in the chair and J. T. Temple was on duty as corresponding secretary.

The club was in receipt of a letter from A. W. Van de Veer, acknowledging his election as the first honorary member of the club. R. C. Rohlfs, of the Alta Vista Nursery, of Davenport, was elected a member.

The president appointed a committee, composed of two members from Davenport, one from Rock Island and one from Moline, to arrange for the regular banquet of the club, to be held sometime in March. A committee on nomination was also appointed, to submit names of officers for another year at the next regular meeting.

The topic for discussion was "Fertilizers and Their Uses," and it may be truthfully said that the subject was well aired. T. Ewoldt had an especially comprehensive and instructive paper.

The club will hold its next regular meeting at the residence of Henry Gaethje, in Rock Island, February 11.

After adjournment of the club, J. T. Temple invited the members to the dining room, where the steward of the Outing Club house had a fine lunch prepared. Mr. Temple had the table decorated in up-to-date style. After enjoying the repast and telling a few good stories, all left for their homes, feeling well repaid for having attended the meeting.

Julius Staack, Sr., of Moline, is reported on the sick list. H. M.

NEW ORLEANS.

Another week of spring weather in the middle of January has been pushing every plant into bloom, and business also has been advanced at the markets. The last two winters have been very mild and that is not exactly what the florists want to create a lively demand for stock when the season opens. But February is not past and we must not lose hope yet.

T. Shalk, for several years with J. A. Schindler & Co., has left his position.

J. Rehfeld, on Bienville avenue, lost his wife last week. M. M. L.

Something About Roses in U-Bar Houses

Time and again gardeners have told us that they have less trouble with their roses when grown in a U-Bar house. Mildew more easily prevented and all that sort of thing.

Whether this is because of the increased lightness, the under-bench ventilation or the perfect system of heating, we are not wise enough to say, but suspect all three have to do with it. However, the fact is established, as results have proven, and results are what you want a greenhouse for. Send for fully illustrated catalog and know why it is also the most enduring construction.

LOUISIANA RED CYPRESS

"The Wood that Won't Rot"

Described by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.

"Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our Greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has all rotted out. We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years, while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve years. We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose. BASSETT & WASHBURN."

Ask your dealer for Louisiana Red Cypress and if he hasn't got it, get him to write us, or write us yourself.

Geo M. Garland Co
Des Plaines Ill.

Gentlemen Replying to your inquiry of recent date, as to our opinion of your Iron gutter, will say we have used it exclusively in our building operations for the last 6 years and have never found any reason for regretting it, am particularly pleased with your Dale style 8 ft. lengths, it being very uniform in construction, and amply strong, we feel that while the gutter is some more expense at cost, the results of its use such as durability, quicker snow clearance, doing away of glass breakage and general appearance, it makes the wooden gutter entirely out of the question, you deserve credit for its originality

Truly yours J. A. Budlong Co.

THE INDIANAPOLIS CONVENTION

The American Carnation Society Holds Its Eighteenth Annual Meeting and Exhibition.

President, Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.
Vice-president, Fred Burki, Pittsburg, Pa.
Secretary, A F. J. Baur, Indianapolis, Ind.
Treasurer, Fred E. Dorner, Jr., Lafayette, Ind.

NEXT MEETING PLACE, PITTSBURG, PA., JANUARY, 1910.

With a record of seventeen successful conventions, the American Carnation Society has set a new high water mark at Indianapolis this week, for the third time in its history—1894, 1902, 1909.

Favored with ideal weather and a splendid hall, there was nothing left for the exhibitors to desire. And as for the rank and file, the wonderful quality of the stock was ample recompense for a long journey. Indeed, many a man was inspired to go home and do yet better things, for it was amply proven that the end is not yet in the triumphal progress of the carnation — already the leading, one might almost say dominating, flower in a trade sense in this country. The American Carnation Society, affording yearly opportunities for the comparison of the best products of the best growers, is to be largely credited with the rapid pace at which the flower has advanced in quality and popularity, but in spite of the great progress of the past, in no year other than the present has a longer stride been taken forward. Never was there better quality, speaking of individual exhibits, and as a whole the character of the display was far and away ahead of other years. There was not a poor vase in the hall and the great gain made since 1902, when the convention last was held in the Hoosier capital, was remarked by many old-timers.

Carnations come and carnations go. The convention of the A. C. S. is the place to see the latest arrivals, and this year the showing of new sorts was a revelation to those growers who think the old sorts are "good enough." Aside from splendid vases of practically all the new sorts out this year, there were seedlings beyond number, representing a wide range of colors, from purple to bright canary yellow, and quite a number giving promise of great commercial possibilities. There are probably more new sorts of the Enchantress shade of pink than of any other color, for the hybridizers are using Enchantress blood in a majority of their crosses, but it was those of Lawson shade that attracted the most attention. Lawson in its day turned in more money to the trade than had any other variety up to that time and it is with sincere regret that its passing has been witnessed, particularly as none of its erstwhile successors has wholly made good. But there will be a succession of new cerise pinks in the next few years. Some of them were shown in considerable quantity at Indianapolis this week, and their advent in the trade is eagerly awaited.

The New Varieties.

The new sorts coming out this year were shown in good shape. Roper's Bay State, farthest from home of all, took the gold medal. Cockcroft's Georgia, also far afield, was in fine condition. O. P. Bassett was in excellent form for comparison with the earlier reds. It took a first and a bronze medal. W. N. Rudd staged a good vase of the Mrs. Vaughan, white. Dorner's Pink Delight was in pleasing shape. Mrs. Knopf and Ruby showed up well. Lucille was like a new Prosperity. Apple Blossom and Wanoka were well shown. Scheiden & Schoos staged President Taft. May Day was shown in attractive shape. Not many of the new sorts were entered for competition.

Of the newer sorts two whites took growers' attention—Shasta, by Baur & Smith, and No. 404, by Dailledouze Bros. Of each 100 blooms were shown and each looked good. E. G. Hill Co. had a big white, No. 511, that got a preliminary certificate. James Whitcomb Riley, the new yellow of Bertermann Bros. Co., is without a rival. It seems to be steadily improving and it is an interesting item as showing the field for a yellow that, merely on the note published in the REVIEW at the time of the national flower show, Bertermann Bros. Co. has received six orders from England, one to hand this week being for 5,000 cuttings.

Nic Zweifel, of Milwaukee, showed one of the new Lawson shade of pinks, No. 228, fifty blooms, and received a certificate. His No. 108 is in the same class and both promise well. E. G. Hill Co. showed a few blooms of a pink that looks as if it would trot, No. 235, which scored 88 points. A. C. Brown, of Springfield, had two winners in the pink classes in Superba and Sangamo. F. R. Pierson was in the running on Lawson shade of pink with No. 50. He also had a good dark sport of Winsor, a light pink sport of White Lawson, a good looking white in No. 30 and a crimson, No. 60, that was certificated.

Dorothy Gordon looks good by comparison with Rose-pink Enchantress, which it resembles. In light pink, Admiration looks like the best thing the Charles Knopf Floral Co. has yet produced. Mary Tolman was a little the worse for its journey. Hill had a seedling, No. 406, that was liked. The Chicago Carnation Co. has named its No. 500, variegated, calling it Conquest. It has lots of color.

There were scores of seedlings under number, R. B. Hayes, of Shelby, O., staging as many as seven. Roper had a red, No. 2021, that may turn out well. A good red, No. 400, fifty flowers, was not tagged with the exhibitor's name and there were many others, including a good-looking light pink, that were merely set up to see what the trade thinks of them, for they were without identifying mark.

The quantity of the general exhibits, as well as of the seedlings, was large and the whole country was represented, the eastern grower coming up particularly well.

Splendid Arrangements.

The German House affords an ideal hall for a flower show. It is large and light, with abundant ventilation, something which has been notably lacking in several recent years. The result was that the stock showed its true keeping quality, much to the satisfaction of all concerned, and particularly pleasurable to the Indianapolis florists, who had issued cards admitting the public during certain hours. It was the better class of flower buyers who attended and there can be no doubt the carnation received a boost with the people that will be felt, like the ripples from a pebble dropped in water, far beyond the limits of the city or even the boundaries of the state. The preparations by Superintendent A. F. J. Baur were admirable and staging was accomplished on time and with the minimum of confusion. Space was abundant, so that nothing need be crowded, and the tables were covered with green cheesecloth, the sides curtained with white, making a fine appearance.

The meeting hall was under the same roof, warm and comfortable, and the business was put through with dispatch by President Patten. Last year at Washington a three-days' convention was tried, but two days is long enough. If strung out too long, the doings also are spread out too thin. Better a short, snappy program that will keep up the interest from start to finish. It was a good move to keep the essays down. No matter who the essayist, the average member fails to enthuse at the prospect—and generally fails to attend.

The local hospitalities were specially open-handed. The committees had been and were indefatigable and, aside from the smoker and banquet, there were innumerable courtesies extended. The ladies were entertained at a theater party. One had only to ask a man with a blue button, and his slightest need was met—or his greatest. The German House had been elaborately decorated with palms, ferns and bay trees for the occasion.

First Business Session.

The society convened at eight o'clock Wednesday evening, January 27, for its first business session. The call to order was by J. S. Stuart, president of the State Florists' Association of Indiana.

Evidently someone had told him that we judge by deeds, not words, for he made no address, and as briefly as possible introduced C. D. Bowen, the city attorney, to make an address of welcome on behalf of the mayor. When he said that Indianapolis averages a convention a day we could realize that the mayor must do quite a part of his spell-binding by proxy. But Mr. Bowen went on to say that of all the conventions held in the city, none brought together men who are pursuing a more ennobling craft or who are more welcome.

Herman Junge was introduced, to speak for the State Florists' Association. He said, among other well thought out things, that no florist has more to be proud of than has the carnation grower. Europe cultivated the carnation for 200 years, but its development was not begun until the trade in America took it in hand a brief while ago and carried the flower to its present high estate. Now all Europe looks to us for its new varieties,

A. F. J. Baur.
(Secretary-elect American Carnation Society.)

and the word "American," applied to this flower, means "best of all."

E. G. Gillett, of Cincinnati, responded on behalf of the Carnation Society and, after accepting the proffered keys to the city, referred to the first time the society met in Indianapolis, in 1894, when two small rooms in a hotel sufficed for both exhibition and meeting. He said that one of Dorner's seedlings was the sensation of that day, but that it compares with the flower of the present about as an ant does with an elephant.

President M. A. Patten, of Tewksbury, Mass., being introduced to take the chair, read the following address:

President's Address.

We have been already in Indianapolis long enough to learn that we are among indulgent friends. As eighteenth president, I also extend to you a welcome and wish you all a prosperous and happy new year, and a successful convention on this our third visit to Indianapolis.

The past year has been a trying one to the florists. The depression in business has laid a heavy hand on many, but the future looks bright. Let us be alert and ready to take advantage of the improvement in business.

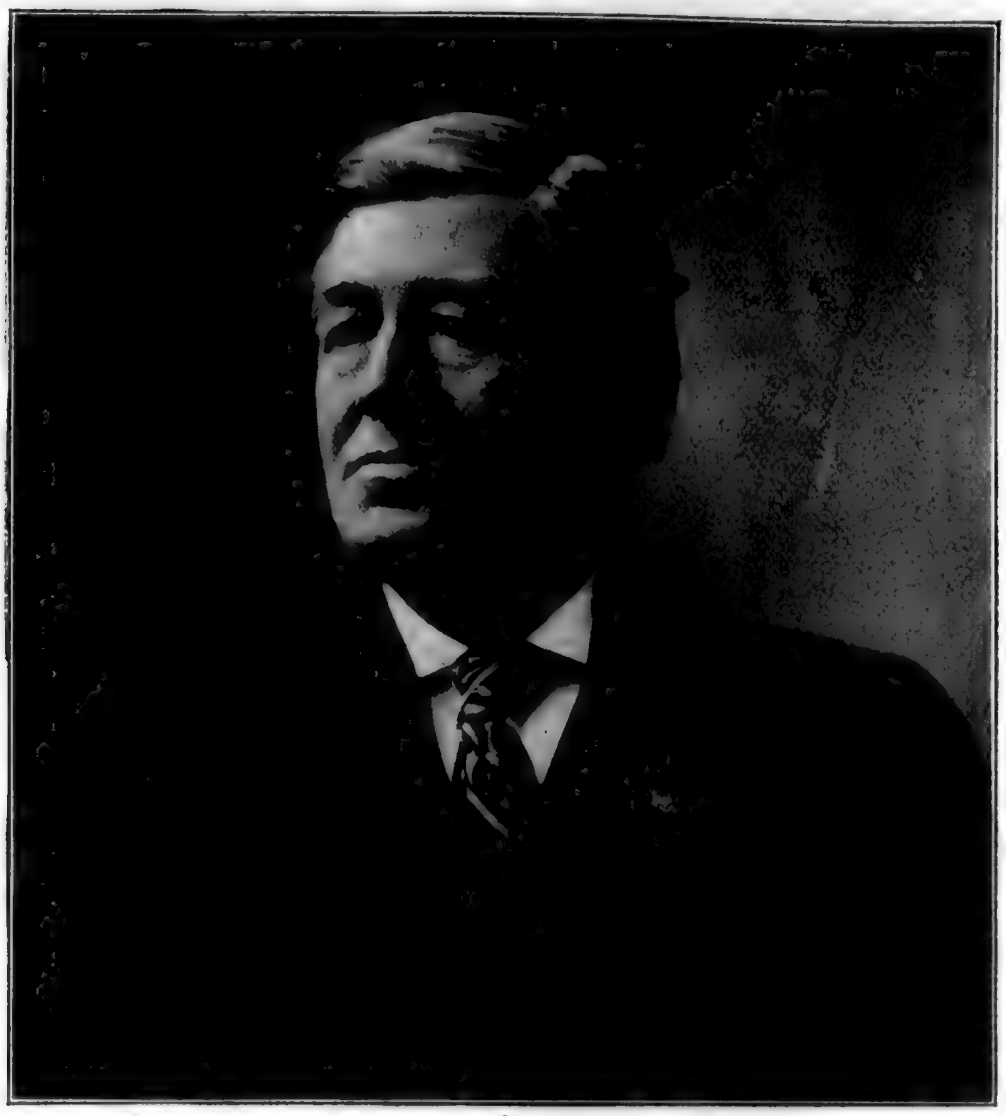
Advancement of the Carnation.

Many new varieties of carnations have been introduced during the past season; time will tell how many will prove worthy of perpetuation. Anyone sending out a new variety should exercise due care to have the stock healthy, the cuttings good and well rooted.

The carnation is still the popular flower, and as our society stands for the advancement of the carnation, continue it so. The raisers of new varieties have made marked improvement, but have not reached perfection yet.

I think it generally understood that this society does not necessarily endorse a variety as a profitable kind to grow commercially, because it has been successful in obtaining a prize.

Fred E. Dorner, Jr.
(Re-elected Treasurer American Carnation Society.)



At the national flower show at Chicago last November, under the auspices of the S. A. F., the interest in carnations was indeed manifested by the enthusiasm of the many visitors. This was probably the largest exhibition of carnations at a fall show ever held in the country, and was a credit to the exhibitors.

A Plea for Increased Membership.

As our conventions are held in different parts of the country, some members lose interest when the conventions are held at a distance, and drop out. As our society creates an interest in the carnation and the proceedings at our meetings are quoted over the entire country, every florist receives the benefit to a certain extent, and ought, in justice to the society, to become a member, even if unable to attend.

Some florists have been growing their carnations on concrete benches; it would be interesting if they would relate their experiences. It probably is economy to build of concrete if the plants do as well as on the wooden benches. Many growers have dispensed with the use of bone, and claim that their plants do just as well, if not better.

Last year the experiment station at Washington devoted a lot of work to carnations, which was appreciated by all who had the privilege of visiting the greenhouses and listening to Dr. B. T. Galloway, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry. We might get more good from this bureau if we would try, for the officers are ready to work with us.

Exhibits of Pot-grown Plants.

What about having pot-grown carnations at our exhibitions? This has been called to your attention by former presidents, but we do not seem to make much headway in the matter. I think it would be a good thing for the introducers of a new variety to have a well grown plant in a pot to show with the cut flowers. It certainly would be of interest to intending purchasers. Would it not be well to offer prizes for collections of three or more pot-grown carnations, say $10, $6 and $4? It would give more material to make an exhibition and tend to create more interest in the divine flower. Pot carnations years ago were quite a source of revenue to the florists.

At the convention of the S. A. F. at Niagara Falls, last August, the Carnation Society voted the sum of $25 to be sent as a premium to the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society of England.

I would suggest that the salary of the secretary be increased, if possible.

I hope all our members will wear a carnation in memory of the lamented President McKinley, January 29.

I wish to thank you for the loyal support given me. I especially wish to thank the secretary, Albert M. Herr, and the vice-president, A. F. J. Baur; also the directors. The press, which has been so friendly to us, is entitled to all the thanks we can give it. To the members of the local society for the arrangements and details of the exhibition, we are under obligations and grateful to each and every one.

At the conclusion of the reading of the president's address, the report of the treasurer was presented, as follows:

Treasurer's Report.

Briefly stated, the society had on hand $227.58 January 25, 1909. This is in the general fund. In the permanent fund there was $2,375.31. A summary of the financial operations of the year is as follows:

J. S. Stuart.
(President State Florists' Association of Indiana.)

The secretary's report was presented, as follows:

Secretary's Report.

Your secretary begs leave to report having issued the report of our annual meeting in due time and having mailed the same to all members in good standing.

January 4, 1909, the premium list for the present meeting was issued and mailed to all members on our books, this list being made up as per instructions from your board of directors at a meeting held in Washington last January. The usual effort was made to secure advertisements for this list by your secretary. A circular letter was sent to every member on our books, and to about 300 possible advertisers who were not members of this society. This was followed up by a personal letter to a hundred or more whom your secretary thought should advertise with us. The result is $105 worth of advertising, not one-fifth enough for the work of solicitation necessary to get it, and I again recommend that this part of our premium list be abolished.

An innovation this year was a request made to every member of this society to add to our Class B, of named varieties, any variety they might want to see inserted, providing they would pay the premiums, if any were awarded. This was followed up by an appeal made through the trade papers and the result was one addition, that of Afterglow, by R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, O. This meager response may have been due to this feature not being properly understood, and partly owing to financial depression; at least it is to be hoped that we as individuals will have pride enough in our society to see that this part of our premium list is well filled for another year.

In membership we have thirty-two who have not paid their dues for 1908, and forty-one new members, so that we are gradually gaining in membership, as the new list will no doubt be increased considerably at this meeting.

There were several deaths during the year, but, no notice being received by your secretary, no official announcement can be made.

I want to thank the president and vice-president for their assistance during the past year and beg pardon for the few errors that have occurred during the same period. I also want to thank every member of this society for their hearty coöperation during the fourteen years I have served them as secretary, and bespeak for my successor the same helpful spirit from them.

This society has advanced the carnation and its methods of culture somewhere near perfection. To continue its mission it must take up the work of popularizing the flower with the buying public, and as far as possible correct the evils and make improvements in the buying and selling end of the business.

We need a secretary who either has ample time of his own to devote to its affairs, or sufficient clerical force to have them attend to all of the details between meetings, and one to whom the salary is no object for the amount of work done.

With me it has been a labor of love for fourteen years—years which I can look back over with many pleasant memories and for which I feel amply repaid by the acquaintance of the men

Herman H. Junge.

Herbert Heller.
(Member Press Committee for Carnation Convention.)

I have been working with, and that is all of you, for we have all worked together or we would not be where we are.

But a few years ago, as some of you know, I was bumped pretty hard financially, and as the hardest part of the work of this society extends from November 1, with the soliciting of advertisements, until sometime in March, with the sending out of the annual report, without any intermission, right in my own busy season, it makes too much work for me (work that I could not possibly have given the attention I did had it not been for the kindly assistance of Mrs. Herr), and feeling that I cannot give this work the attention it should have, I hereby tender my resignation, to take effect at the end of our official year, April 1.

On motion of E. G. Gillett, the report was accepted, including the resignation, and Mr. Herr was given a rising vote of thanks for his faithful service for fourteen years.

Nominations.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club, by letter, and N. Zweifel orally, asked for the meeting next year, but there was a letter from the Pittsburg club urging that the implied promise of last year be made good and W. A. Clarke called upon Milwaukee to retire in favor of Pittsburg, as Pittsburg had for Indianapolis. So it will be Pittsburg in 1910 and Milwaukee in 1911.

Eugene Dailledouze nominated Fred Burki, of Pittsburg, for president, and William Weber nominated Albert M. Herr. Mr. Burki withdrew.

Wm. Nicholson nominated Mr. Burki for vice-president.

For secretary, W. J. Stewart nominated Louis J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I. E. A. Nelson nominated A. F. J. Baur, of Indianapolis.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

Chief of the miscellaneous exhibits was a long table of baskets and other cut flower work by A. Wiegand & Son. To the public this was one of the best features of the exhibition and those in the trade found in the display more than one hint as to how they can improve the character of their own work.

H. W. Rieman put up a fine table of plants, mostly blooming stock in splendid condition, such as cyclamens, cypripediums, primroses, azaleas, etc., well arranged.

J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, showed some excellent plants of Begonia President Taft, good pandanus, dracænas and Adiantum Farleyense.

Alfred Pahud, Indianapolis, brought a vase of cut double poinsettias.

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, had a splendid vase of White Killarney rose and some good plants of Superbissima fern.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, staged for the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., a magnificent vase of White Killarney rose. The size of flowers was specially notable.

Weiland & Olinger, New Castle, Ind., showed good Maid and Bride roses, tulips and Paper Whites.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, staged Rhea Reid, Maid and Bride roses of excellent quality.

The Morehead Mfg. Co., Detroit, had a model steam trap.

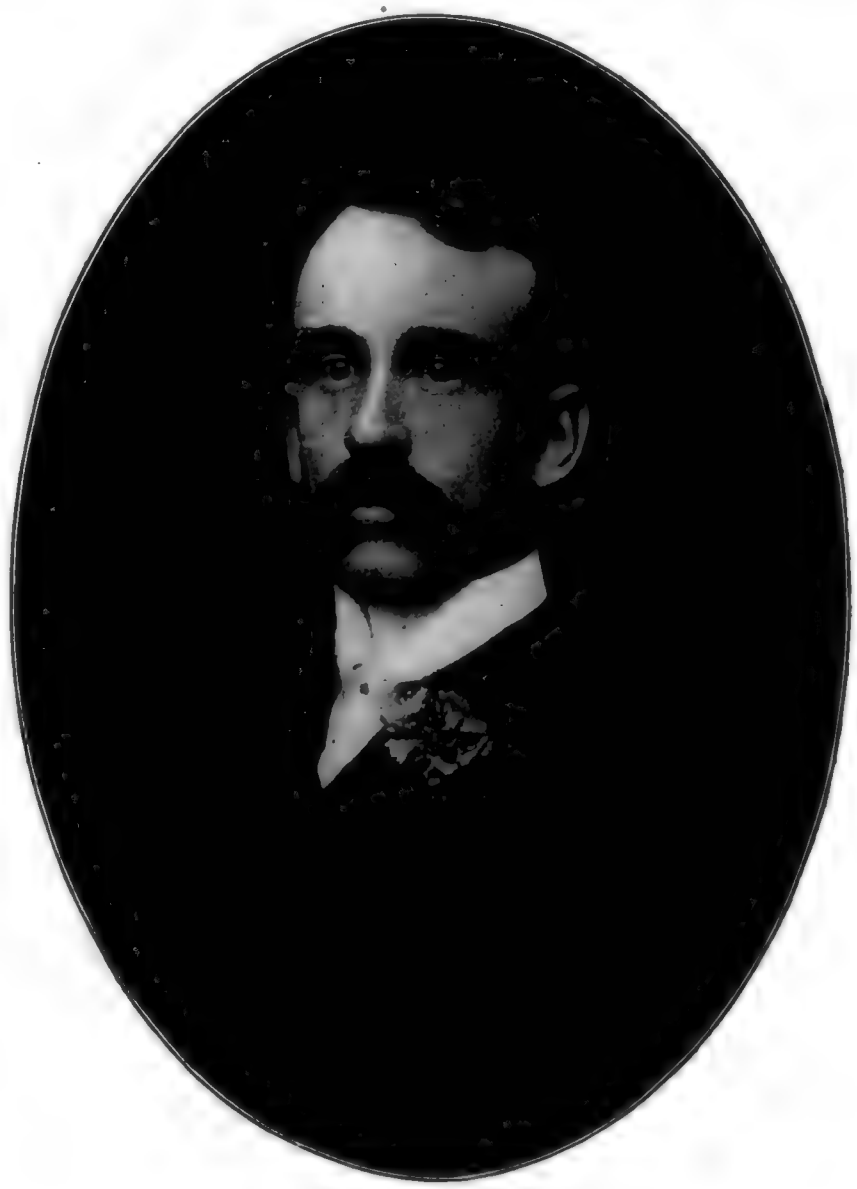
Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, had a model of its greenhouse boiler, heat generator, etc.

The Pulverized Manure Co., Chicago, had a large exhibit of its special line of fertilizers in bulk and packages.

A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, had a table of ribbon, chiffon, letters, hose and samples of other supplies.

The Advance Co., Richmond, Ind., exhibited its ventilating apparatus.

After adjournment the visitors were the guests of the Indianapolis florists, on the bowling alleys and at a smoker and Dutch lunch.



Thursday's Session.

Thursday morning W. N. Rudd raised the point that no requirement for quality being called for in exhibits for the society medals has a tendency to lower the value of the award. He stated that in his view so high quality should be required that the gold medal would not be awarded every year. After discussion it was voted that, in future, varieties to receive the medals must score as high as ninety points for the gold, eighty-eight for the silver and eighty-six for the bronze.

Pittsburg was duly selected for the next meeting, the fourth Wednesday and Thursday in January, 1910.

The election of the following officers was unanimous: President, Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.; vice-president, Fred Burki, Pittsburg; treasurer, F. Dorner, Jr., La Fayette; director, F. Burki; judge, R. Witterstaetter. For secretary A. F. J. Baur, of Indianapolis, received thirty-five votes and L. J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I., twenty votes. Mr. Reuter moved to make the vote unanimous for Mr. Baur.

Papers were read at this session, as follows: "What the Experiment Stations Have Done for Carnation Growers," by H. B. Dorner; "Closer Relations Between the Commission Man, the Retailer and the Grower," by W. J. Stewart. Each was listened to closely and given a hearty vote of thanks.

F. R. Pierson, J. C. Vaughan and A. H. Poehlmann were appointed a committee on resolutions on the death of L. E. Marquisee.

The Banquet.

The Indianapolis florists entertained the visiting florists and ladies at a banquet at the Columbia Club Thursday evening, January 28. The club is one of the finest in the west, and many were already known there through Judge Vesey's having entertained a party of his friends there the previous evening, as he had done on the occasion of the society's last meeting in Indianapolis, seven years previously.

J. S. Stuart, president of the State Society, presided at the banquet. E. G. Hill was toastmaster. Among the speakers were Mayor Bookwalter; President Patten, of the Carnation Society; President Valentine, of the S. A. F.; W. N. Rudd, Mrs. Vesey, Miss Sarah Hill and several others.

Bright and early Friday morning the New Castle and Richmond florists took a carload of members for a trolley trip to Richmond. The schedule included a stop at the Bertermann plant, at Cumberland, a call at several New Castle ranges and a visit to three or four of the principal places at Richmond. There was every provision for comfort and enjoyment.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Watering.

The expression, that "good waterers are born and not made," is to a certain extent true. One can, however, by close observation and the application of common sense, become quite proficient in the art. Since so much depends upon local conditions, it is impossible to give any arbitrary rules. At best, we can only relate such experiences as have, in practice, proven valuable.

Carnation plants, if growing vigorously and blooming profusely, require considerable water—much more than would be implied by the advice given in a recently published catalogue, to "water only sufficiently to prevent plants from wilting."

In the morning of a bright day is conceded to be the ideal time in which to water, though it is admissible and even important to carefully touch up dry spots at any hour of the day or in any weather. These dry spots may occur through variations in density and depth of soil, or at points in close proximity to heating pipes.

The old notion, that we are not following nature's method in watering while the sun shines, is without reason, for, though the sun is obscured during a rainfall, everything is wet on the sun's reappearance after passage of the storm, and have you not noticed how "things fairly jump" under these conditions?

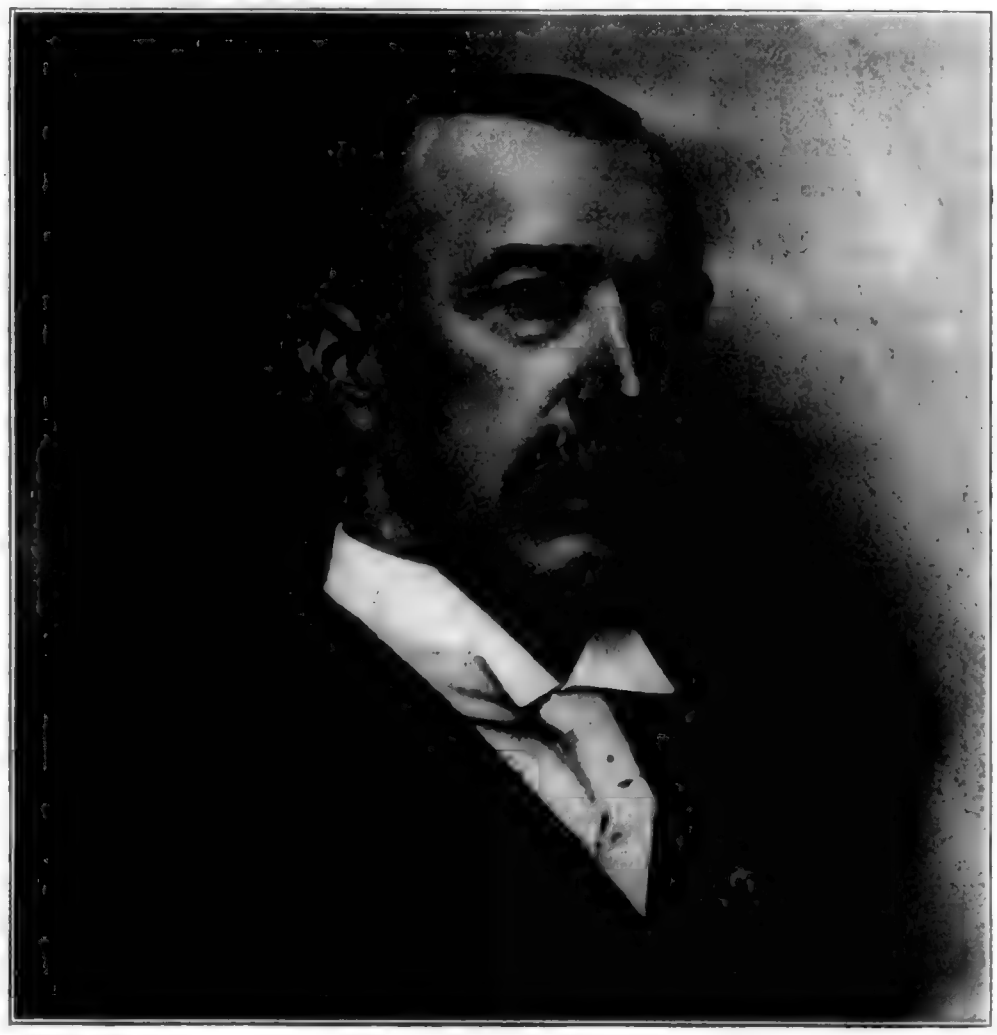
Transpiration.

The amount of moisture given off by the leaves into the air is much larger than is generally supposed. Scientists have demonstrated that certain plants transpire surprising quantities, and estimate that over ninety-five per cent of the energy received from sunlight is used to perform the work of transpiration. Naturally this goes on more slowly during cloudy periods than when the sun shines brightly; consequently we must be on our guard against excess of moisture in dull weather.

Should a sudden change from fair to cloudy weather catch us with the soil heavily watered, and perhaps the foliage wet by syringing as well, we can only remedy matters by keeping on a crack of air and turning on sufficient heat to maintain the regular cloudy day temperature.

The principal evils arising from an oversupply of water are souring of the soil, resulting in destruction of roots, and promotion of soft growth, rendering the plant particularly susceptible to attacks of fungoid diseases.

Watering That Impoverishes.



With the modernly constructed bench, amply providing for drainage, it would be an exception to find the soil actually water-logged. Care must be taken, however, not to apply the water in such quantities as to create a shower under the bench, thereby impoverishing the soil by leaching.

Relative to the question of overhead watering, there is little doubt but that the plants are benefited by an occasional application of water to the foliage; not, however, in such manner as would be termed syringing, but merely a gentle swash through the body of the plant. Of all plants, the carnation will most bitterly resent the removal of that glaucous bloom peculiar to its foliage; therefore syringing should be resorted to only for the purpose of destroying red spider.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

SLEEPY CARNATIONS.

Will you tell me the cause of my carnations going to sleep? The trouble is principally with White Enchantress and White Perfection, though Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress are affected to some extent. We thought for a while that the trouble was with our ice-box, but experiments seem to show that this is not the case. These carnations, with some other varieties, are grown in a house 50x150, run as near 52 to 54 degrees at night as possible. They have been top-dressed at intervals of two weeks, with a light mulch of sheep manure, wood ashes, air-slaked lime, soot, shredded cattle manure, and blood, bone and potash—not all at once, of course, but in succession.

W. W. Coles.
(Member Finance Committee for Carnation Convention.)

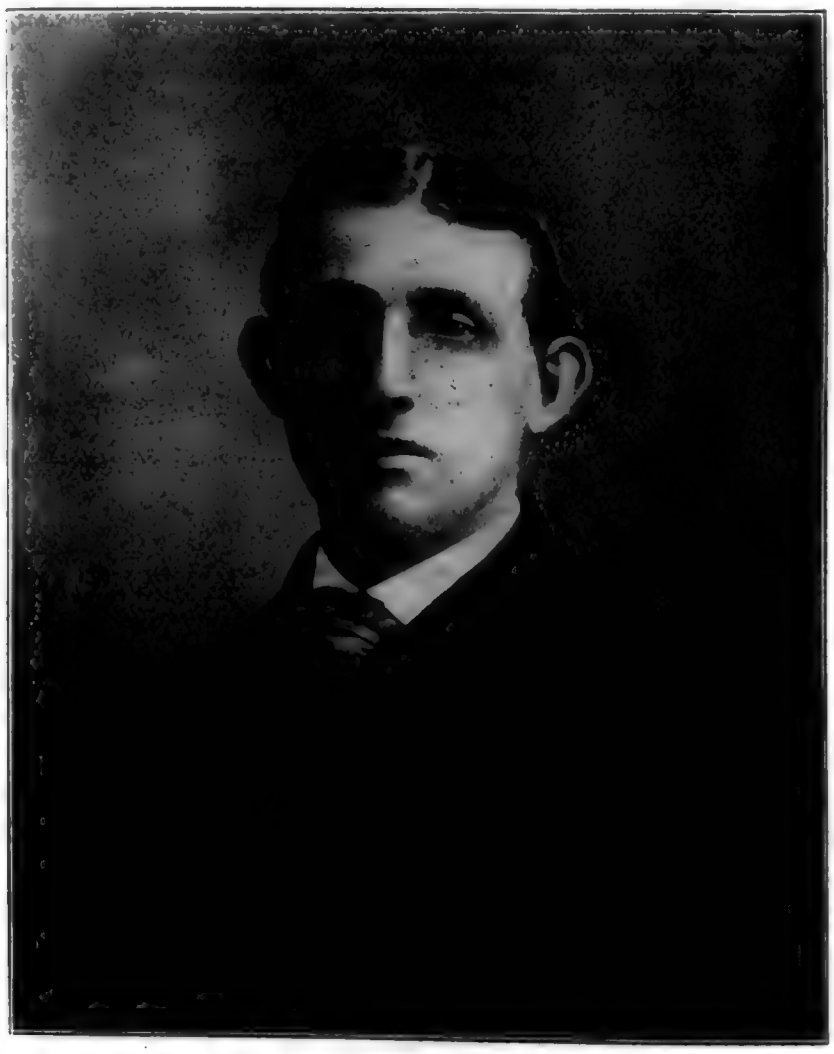
They have usually been picked at 6:30 a. m. and not put into water until they reached the store, at about 8:30. But flowers picked at night, put immediately into water and remaining in it over night are acting in the same way. We have had numerous complaints of their not keeping well, though they were perfectly fresh when sold. It is a mystery which we are trying hard to solve, and come to you for help.

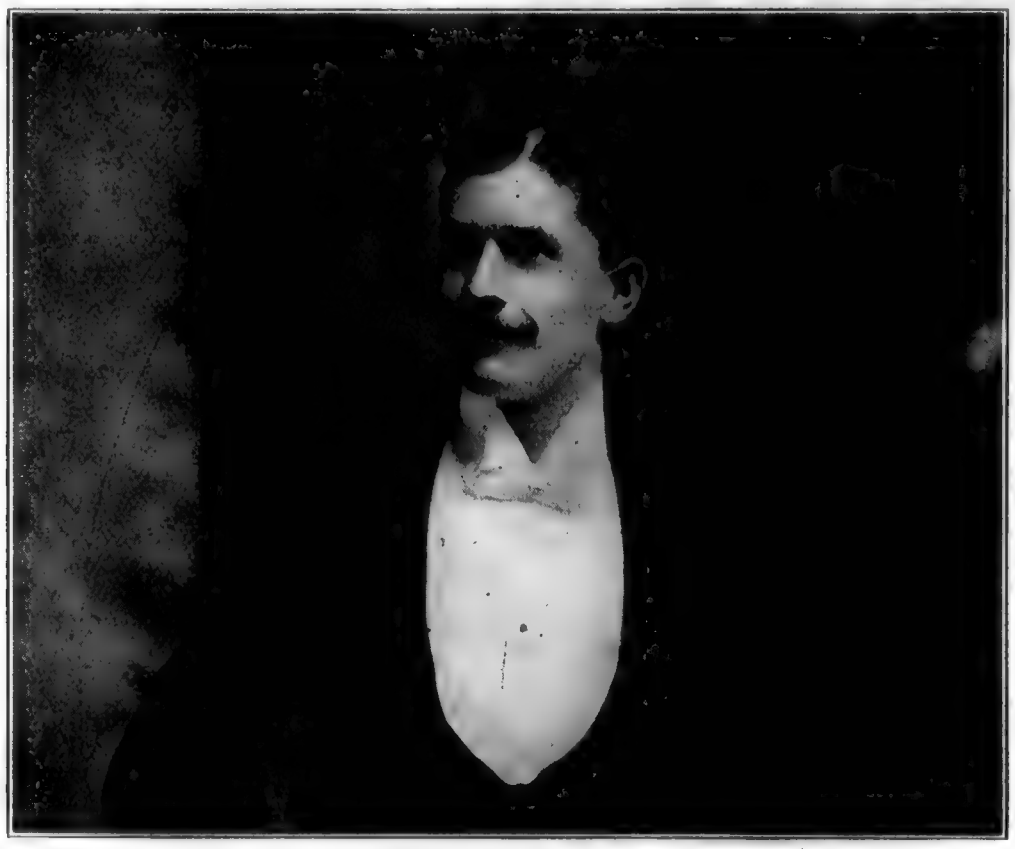
We have thought the trouble might come from the flowers getting chilled on the way from the greenhouse to the store, but today, with very mild weather, we are facing the same conditions. Is it the growing or the after-treatment that is wrong? C. S. D.

In such cases as yours it is much more likely that the cause of your trouble will be detected at home than that it will be solved by some outside party. We have had come under our observation a number of cases of carnations keeping poorly, in spite of all kinds of precautions, as well as changes in culture, handling, etc.



I will say here, however, that in almost every case we have observed that where the blooms went to sleep within an unreasonably short period of time after picking, it was not caused by faulty culture, but by some other cause, usually gas—gas of some kind, from one source or another. We call to mind one case where a certain retailer turned from one grower to another vainly, in search of carnations which would stay awake two days after reaching his store. Other plants and flowers seemed to keep and grow, but no carnation grower could be found whose stock would hold up. The discovery of a minute gas leak was made quite accidentally, after hundreds of dollars of loss had been caused. The presence of gas had been suggested, but it was argued that the plants apparently grew as well here as anywhere else. It proved this one thing, that a small amount of gas may have a serious effect on carnation blooms—an amount so small that it cannot be detected by the odor.

The fact that the blooms complained of in your case were sent to different places does not disprove this suggestion. If there happens to be a gas main near your carnation houses, the cause might still be the same. We have known a case of this kind, where there was a very small leak in the gas main. During mild weather, as long as the ground was not frozen, there was no trouble, but as soon as the ground froze an inch or two deep the gas could not find a way out except to seep along under the frozen crust until it reached the unfrozen earth under the greenhouse. As soon as the ground thawed the trouble disappeared again. Perhaps you have a case of this kind.



We find that while right or wrong culture will improve or impair the lasting qualities of carnation blooms considerably, it will not do so to such an extent as in your case. Wrong methods of culture will more frequently, and in fact usually, show themselves in poor texture of the petals. Overfed blooms will be soft and unable to withstand the knocks received in the handling of the stock. In such cases the blooms are used up, but not asleep.

It strikes me, however, that you might have gone a trifle strong on the feed. But if you are experienced in growing carnations you would be able to see that yourself in other ways. However, it might help just a little in aggravating the trouble if it already existed. We find tnat all the Enchantress varieties are inclined to soften when a little overfed. Your habit of not placing the stems in water for two hours after picking is a bad one. It would be better to hold them in water twenty-four hours, if it were necessary, in order to make certain trains, or for some other reason. Give this a trial. A. F. J. B.

THE CARNATION MITE.

I have a bench of a white carnation seedling which I selected as a good commercial sort three years ago. I think enough of it to drop White Perfection, White Lawson and Queen Louise, and grow no other white than the seedling. Now, this year almost every bloom looks queer when it opens. I have examined them and find what I suppose is thrips, or some kind of mite that hops. In the same house I have Enchantress and Winsor, which are not affected whatever. I am a little afraid to use the gases that I have read about in the Review. Would you please let me know if there is any way of killing these pests, besides the gases? I think that I should do away with them, if possible, before I start rooting cuttings, as I think they might possibly cling to them and I would have them next year.

I have put red pepper in the tobacco two or three times when fumigating, but it does not seem to bother them much. R. W. W.

If the buds on your seedlings fail to open properly, it is more probably due to the ravages of the carnation mite than to thrips. If I had a specimen for examination, it would be easy to tell which it is. When thrips attack the buds, the bloom usually develops normally, but there will be discolored spots, mostly around the edge of the petals. These spots are usually the first sign the grower notices of their presence. Sometimes, in isolated cases, the injured petals will stick together, but not often. The injuries inflicted by the mite, however, are quite different. Instead of attacking around the edges of the petals, they seem to work in the very heart of the bud. The outside petals will frequently develop normally, but the center petals remain folded and finally rot. In aggravated cases none of the petals will develop, and the whole bud decays. What little experience we have had with this pest would indicate that it discriminates between varieties considerably more than thrips does, which is another indication that it is this pest which is causing your trouble. Enchantress and Winsor are both favorites of thrips.

The hydrocyanic acid gas is supposed to be the best agent for destroying this pest and I would advise you to resort to it. Use it according to the directions which have frequently appeared in these columns, and there is no danger to your plants. The most important precaution will be to allow no one to be exposed to the gas, as it is very deadly.

Inasmuch as the variety under consideration is a seedling of yours, it may be pertinent to say here that in placing a value on the variety its ability to resist the attacks of both insects and diseases is of great importance. Your variety may be fine in every way, but if it is a special favorite of one of the common pests, no grower will want it on his place. As between a variety of this kind and one of those which are only average in quality, but able to make a good, clean record year in and year out, without giving the grower any worry, the grower will always select the latter to constitute his main planting. That is why so many varieties which make great records on the exhibition table are soon dropped after their dissemination. The rank and file will not give them such coddling as they have been accustomed to, and of course they fail to duplicate their former records. Consider well before you discard all other varieties in favor of some pet seedling. A. F. J. B.

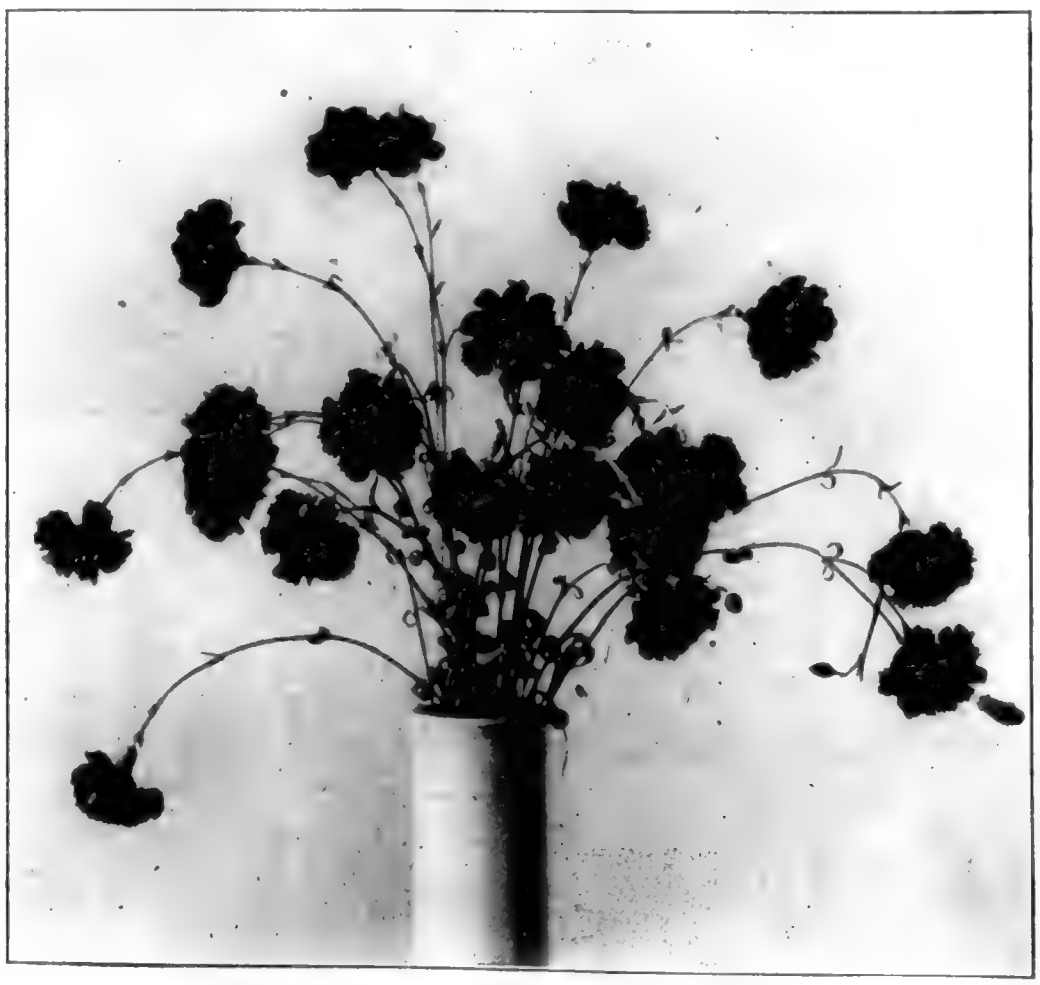
LACK OF BUDS.

I have several benches of carnations, especially Fair Maids, which were benched all right, and seemed to make a good start, but lately have not been throwing many buds. The plants are healthy, showing no disease whatever, with many shoots starting, and from this stage to shoots half grown, with broad leaves and stout stems, but it seems an interminable period before a bud emerges at the top. I have given them lime and sheep manure as top dressing, separately, since November, working it into the soil.

Now, is there any chemical, or other substance, such as nitrate of soda, which I could apply to hasten the plants into bud, or rather, to make them bud instead of sending many useless shoots? I keep the temperature as near as possible to the right mark. My soil is apt to be rather heavy, as I have no soil that could be called sandy on the place, although the soil in the benches seems loose and not packed solid. Would such soil have any effect on certain kinds of pinks? Beacon seems to do well for me, as all shoots go directly to bud and bloom.

Is there any special variety of pink which you could recommend as suited to such soil? I. F.

There is not a great deal you can do with those carnations, except to have patience. At this time of the year you cannot adopt any radical methods to promote growth, as there is too much danger of getting the plants into a soft, worthless condition. Better wait for the crop to come and get a good one, than to hasten it unduly and get an inferior quality.



If you had a whole house of the variety in question, you could hasten them on slightly by raising the temperature about 3 degrees, providing you would run ventilation on the house almost continuously. There should, however, be no increase in temperature unless it be accompanied by an increase in ventilation in proportion.

All plant foods, such as nitrate of soda, etc., will soften as well as hasten growth and should be used sparingly at this time of year.

You will find that some varieties are inclined to make a fall and early winter crop of blooms and to go off crop about this time, coming in again about March. You can overcome this to some extent by proper pinching, with a winter crop in view. A. F. J. B.

BEST WHITE CARNATION.

Please tell me what you consider the best white carnation of those generally grown, considering productiveness and size. H. G. F.

If I had to choose one best white carnation I would pick White Perfection. Next, and so close to it as to have but little preference, I would mention White Enchantress. Many other growers place the last named variety at the top, and the other one second. Each will occupy about the same amount of space on our place next season, with a leaning toward White Perfection. I might say in connection herewith that Lady Bountiful will not be dropped by us just yet. This variety has some points that have made it a favorite here. Lloyd seems promising and, while its showing thus far this season does not warrant its displacing any of the three varieties mentioned, yet we expect it to make good here another year, and to stick. RECORD OF CUTS.

The Pikes Peak Floral Co., Colorado Springs, Colo., found a special interest in the record of carnation cuts published in the REVIEW January 7, comparing results with Enchantress and Victory at the establishment of E. T. Wanzer, Wheaton, Ill. When they consulted their own record for Enchantress they found that they have obtained more than fifty per cent more blooms per plant than Mr. Wanzer has cut so far this season. But when they turned to their figures for Mrs. Lawson, they found it showed practically only half the production of their Enchantress.

The firm has on its benches 6,318 plants of Enchantress and in the three months to January 1, 1909, the cut was 29,155, or an average of 4.61 blooms per plant. Of Lawson they had 12,048 plants and the cut in three months was 27,892, or an average of 2.31 blooms per plant. Mr. Wanzer kept a separate record of his perfect flowers and his splits, but the Pikes Peak Floral Co. puts their cut all in together as follows:

Enchantress.	Blooms Cut.
October	7,412
November	10,174
December	11,569
Total	29,155

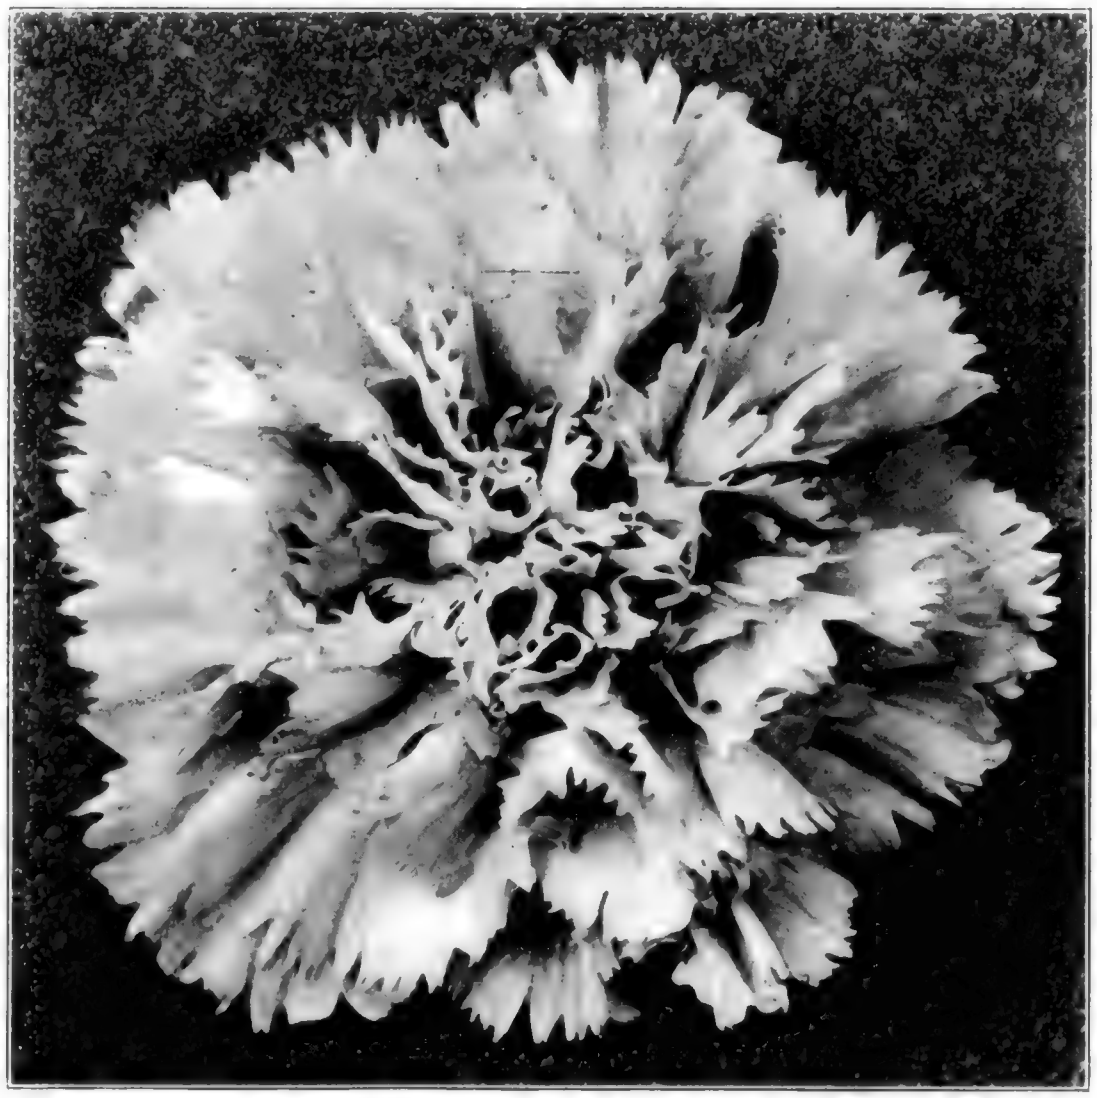
Lawson.	Blooms Cut.
October	7,929
November	7,730
December	12,233
Total	27,892

Other growers are invited to send in the record of the cuts from a given number of plants of any variety. The comparisons will be interesting.

BLOOMS DO NOT OPEN.

After reading such glowing accounts of White Perfection, I am wondering what is the trouble with my own. I have about 1,200 plants. They were good plants when housed, about September 1. They are in a good house, with plenty of head room, and have had a temperature of about 50 to 54 degrees at night. The soil is new and is a medium black loam. They have had no feeding except the manure that was put in the soil.

They are in full crop at present, hundreds of buds showing color, but the trouble I wish to refer to is, that they do not open. They do well until the flowers are about half open; then they stop and go to sleep, or, if they do mature, they will not keep. I have grown them three years now and have always had the same trouble. White Cloud would do the same thing. F. B.



That your White Perfection do not open their blooms properly is certainly not the fault of the variety. It must be some local cause. This variety is giving splendid satisfaction here, with no faults except here and there a split calyx. The blooms open up full, and do it quickly. Its keeping qualities, too, are good here.

I am wondering whether or not there might be seepage of gas into your house where this variety is growing. Would advise you to investigate along this line. If your plants grow well and other varieties thrive in it, your soil can hardly be at fault. Insufficient ventilation would aggravate the trouble, especially if there are traces of gas. If the soil is dry at the bottom, that would make it worse, too. A. F. J. B.

TOBACCO ASHES AS FERTILIZER.

I should like to inquire as to the value, as a fertilizer for carnations, of the ash of tobacco powder after fumigating. A. S. C.

The ashes from any burnt vegetable matter are more or less valuable as a fertilizer, on account of the potash they contain. The per cent of potash, however, will vary a great deal, according to what kind of material the ashes came from. It seems a safe rule to suppose that the slower the growth of the article consumed the higher will be the percentage of potash. That is why hardwood ashes are more valuable than those from softer wood, etc.

Carnation No. 50, Pierson's Scott Shade of Pink.

Carnation May Day.

Tobacco, being a rapid and tender growing plant, like all annuals, would not likely contain a great deal of potash. The little you get from your fumigating would amount to little, indeed, in improving your crop. On the other hand, there is no need of wasting even the least valuable material unnecessarily. Some growers gather up in their hands the ashes from each pile or pan, after each fumigation, and scatter it thinly between the plants close by. Others have a barrel to dump them in, to be used when a sufficient amount has accumulated. The latter is, perhaps, the more commendable plan, as it promotes cleanliness as well as economy, and is certainly a heap better than to scatter them over the walk with a kick of the foot, as some are known to do. A. F. J. B.

CARNATION BRITANNIA.

We have pleasure in giving you a few particulars in regard to the Britannia carnation. We have grown this variety since it was distributed and cannot speak too highly of it. It has only one fault; it is not so long in the stem as some other sorts.

American growers need have no fear in growing this sort, which is said to be a seedling from Lawson and Winter Cheer, and is quite as free as Mrs. Lawson. The bright red flowers possess a very sound calyx, which never splits and is of large size, and the foliage of the plant gives the prettiest effect of any variety in commerce. It is very free and the only sorts that can compare with it, in our estimation, are Beacon and Victory.

We have not yet tested Defiance sufficiently to say whether it is first rate or not. HUGH LOW & Co.

SPLIT CALYXES.

We have been troubled a good deal lately with carnations splitting. Will letting the houses get a little on the cold side, or on the hot side, split them? We try to keep the houses about 58 to 60 degrees in cloudy weather, but sometimes the sun will come out on a cloudy day and run the houses up suddenly. Will that cause them to split?

BEGINNER.

There is perhaps nothing which will cause carnations to split their calyx more than uneven temperature, especially if the variations are severe. The same is true if cloudy and sunny weather are intermingled too much, and if, as you say, the temperature is allowed to run up excessively before the ventilators are opened. The man in charge should keep as close watch on the ventilation as he does on the watering and on the steam heat at night. A. F. J. B.

DISBUDDING.

In disbudding carnations, is it proper to leave the last bud up to the crown bud on the stalk and not take it off at all? H. G. F.

In disbudding, take off every bud you can, without injuring the main bud, or the flower stem and foliage. If the bud is too small to handle properly, then leave it to be taken off later. It should come off, however, as soon as large enough to be handled properly.

A. F. J. B.

THE BEST THREE REDS.

Please tell us what three red carnations are giving the best general satisfaction. C. S. M.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Palms.

Any repotting or retubbing of palms can now be done. If delayed much longer, the rush of many other duties may compel its postponement. If the foliage of the palms has not yet been cleaned during the present winter, take advantage of the general overhauling to give them a thorough sponging before repotting them.

It is always wise to avoid big shifts with palms of all kinds; overpotting is often the cause of sickly foliage. For compost, fibrous loam which has been cut from an upland pasture, sand and broken charcoal is suitable. It is better to avoid the use of animal manures, but if the plants will have to remain in the pots some time, add a little bone meal. Where they may be kept in tubs for several years, work in a little bone of a coarser grade.

Pick away loose soil with a sharp-pointed stick and use every care not to break or injure the brittle roots. Press the soil in firmly, but always leave a good surface basin for water. Soak thoroughly, then apply water more sparingly until root action is again in evidence. Plants which do not require repotting will be benefited by having the surface soil removed and a topdressing given. In potting or tubbing palms, keep the roots below the surface. Too often kentias are seen which have been potted too high and as a consequence the stems are held by the roots several inches above the surface.

Avoid syringing at this season, which will drench the pots. Water directed through a spray nozzle will keep the foliage cleaner than if applied in a heavier stream.

With such palms as Cocos Weddelliana and Geonoma gracilis, neither of which makes many roots, it is necessary to avoid overpotting. On the other hand, the phœnix family are gross rooters. The most useful member of the latter family, P. Rœbelenii, is now fairly abundant and moderate in price and should be included in every retail florist's collection. It is a beautiful decorative subject and one which succeeds specially well in the dwelling house.

Hippeastrums.

Hippeastrums, perhaps better known as amaryllises, are not so much seen in commercial establishments as could be wished. The newer hybrids are handsome and as their culture is not difficult, there would seem to be an opening for a moderate quantity of these handsome bulbous flowers with many retailers. We know that farther south many of these amaryllises succeed finely outdoors, but in the colder states greenhouse culture is necessary, except it may be in the planting out of seedlings during the summer months.

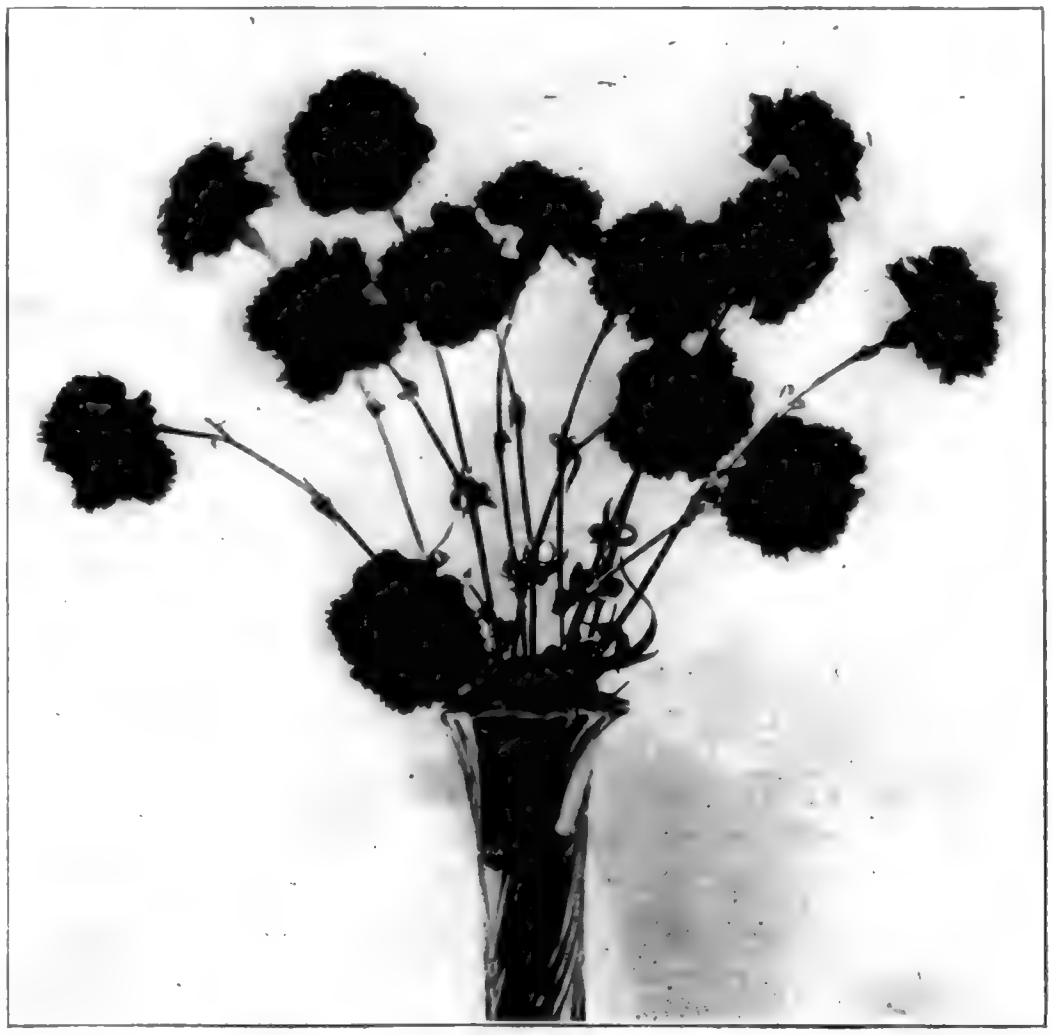
Where the bulbs have been resting for some time, the flower spikes will now in many cases be appearing and the plants should be repotted or at least given a rich topdressing. They do not require a warm house, but open better in a night temperature of 55 degrees, moving them to cooler quarters while in flower. A good compost for amaryllises is one consisting of equal parts of dry cow manure and turfy loam, with some sand and fine charcoal added.

Seedlings are quite easily raised. These require to be grown on continuously without rest until they flower, which usually takes two or three years, although they can be bloomed in less time. Sow in flats, pot off singly when they have made a single leaf, and shift into larger sizes, as required; 6-inch and 7-inch pots are of suitable size to flower them in. The seed requires a warm, moist temperature, in which it will soon germinate, and until June the little plants should have a warm house. During summer they will succeed well in any ordinary greenhouse or frame. In securing amaryllis seed it pays, as with all other flower seeds, to secure the best obtainable. Cheap mixtures will prove disappointing.

Cannas.

It is too early yet to start cannas for spring sales, but if you want a few plants to flower in pots for late spring, start the roots now. The possibilities of cannas as pot plants are not fully appreciated in America, but in Europe, where the summers are cooler and the plants do not succeed so well outdoors, they are popular indoor decorative plants. If you have a few nice pots in flower, you will find it a great help in selling your stock at bedding-out time. Customers can see at a glance what color or colors they want. Have you ever noticed, but of course you have, how geraniums or any other bedding plants with a flower on are selected in preference to bigger and better flowerless ones? Therefore, start a couple of roots of each variety of canna to flower before your sales start, and you will be surprised how much it helps in disposing of your stock.

While it is much too early to start your cannas for bedding, it is well to look over your roots and remove any which may be decaying. The present is a good time to stock up on any you may be short of.



Seed Sowing.

While it is rather early to sow a number of flower seeds, there are some which can now be sown with advantage. These include cannas, Begonia semperflorens, gloxinias, stocks for Memorial day use, asters for an early crop under glass, the best early variety being Queen of the Market; petunias, verbenas, Lobelia Emperor William and speciosa, Primula obconica, antirrhinum, berried solanums for use at Christmas, Vinca rosea, impatiens, Pennisetum Rupelianum and longistylum, two useful ornamental grasses; Pyrethrum aureum, Cineraria candidissima and violas.

There is ample time yet for sowing salvia, zinnia, balsam, stock, aster, ageratum, Drummond's phlox, dahlias and other bedding plants. If started now they will be drawn and stunted before bedding-out time arrives.

Azaleas.

It is not yet time to start any of the Carnation O. P. Bassett.

Indian azaleas wanted for Easter. Hold these in a cool pit or greenhouse. Rub off any young growths they may be making and be sure that none are suffering from want of water. There is always a sale for an occasional nicely bloomed azalea and therefore do not hold back your whole stock for Easter, but start a small batch each week. Speaking of azaleas, it is also too early to start A. mollis for Easter. If you allow these six weeks from start to finish, you will find it ample.

Dutch Bulbous Stock.

The winter has so far been a comparatively warm one and bulbous stock is coming on faster than usual. The growths will now be of such length that they can be placed directly in the light from the cellar, without any drawing up in shaded glass cases or under the benches. Those who want to hold their plants for Easter must keep them as cool as possible. Not over four weeks is necessary to flower hyacinths, tulips and narcissi after placing in the greenhouse, and if we get warm spring weather, they will bloom in a week less time. Look over all bulbs in the cellars and you cannot go far wrong in giving them an occasional soaking watering. More are ruined by too little than too much water.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

THE BOXWOOD WREATH.

The accompanying illustration shows a funeral arrangement well liked by the customers of Albert C. Rott, at Joliet, Ill. It is a loose wreath of boxwood sprays on an easel. The looseness and fullness of the wreath add much to the design, but the attractive feature is the loose spray of carnations on long stems at one side. Enchantress color is admirable used with the boxwood. A large knot of pale green chiffon is used. The front legs of the tripod, shown in the illustration, are covered with smilax. An added finish would be given if the rest of the easel also were covered with the green.

VALENTINE'S DAY.

Designs for the Occasion.

Violets are preëminently the valentine flower, together with the daintiest and smallest flowers that glass can produce, as the next choice. Still, there are the devotees of the red rose and the brilliant carnations, who prefer their dash and show to the quiet purple and green of the violet, the vanishing blue of the forget-me-not, or the waxy bells of the lily of the valley.

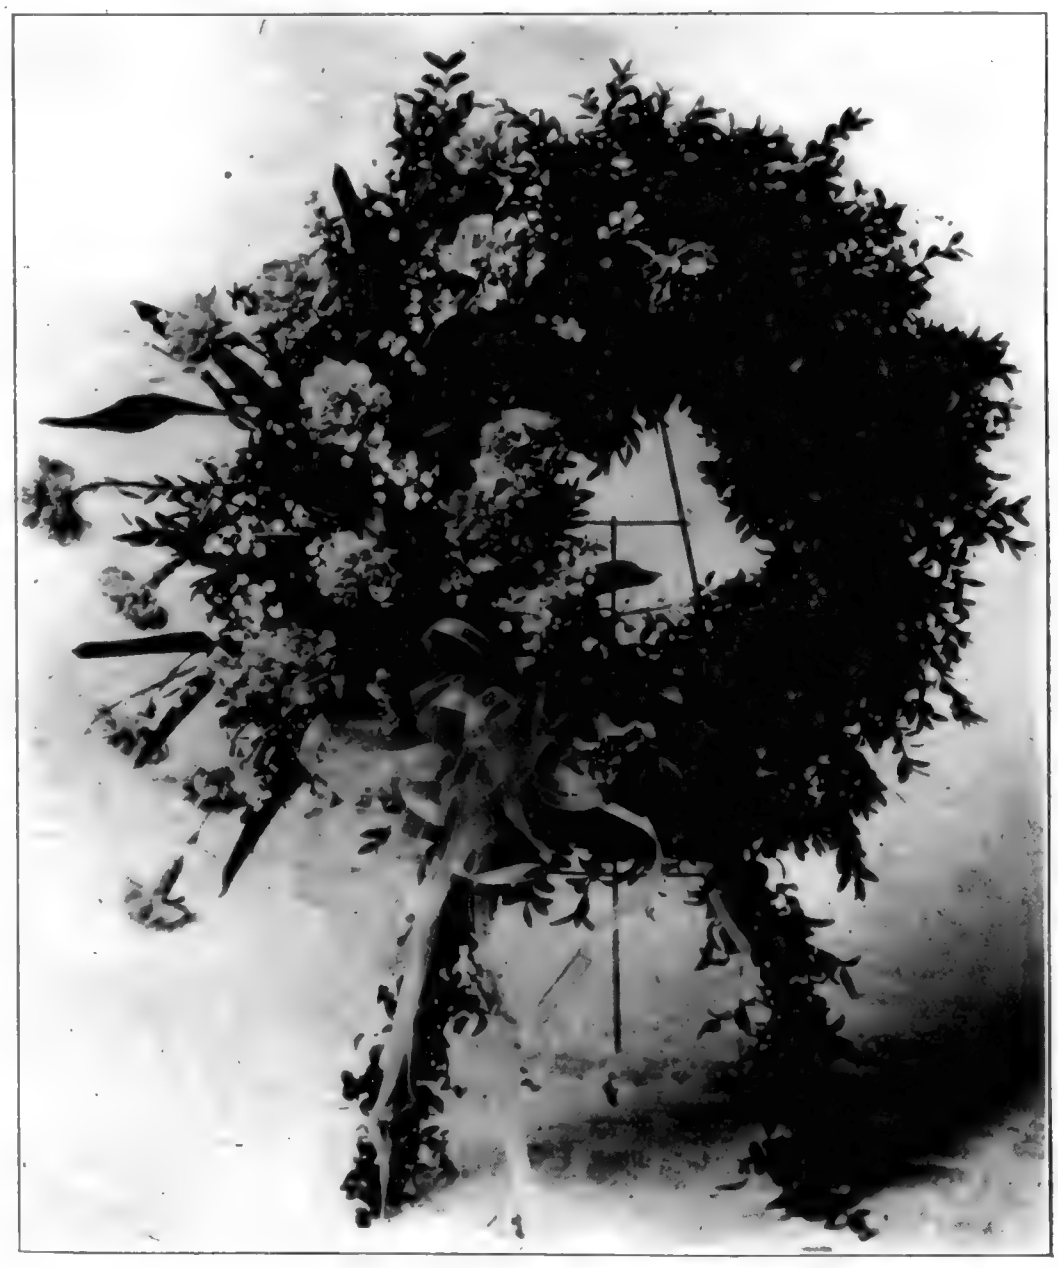
The Conventional Heart and Arrow.

For large and striking pieces hearts of red are deservedly popular, though not new. To take from the solidity of the piece, add an arrow. If one of wire is not at hand, whittle out the shape of an arrow, with the point and feather from a small cycas leaf, and gild or silver it. For a table have a flat heart, and a bow and arrow of small white flowers, drawn and suspended overhead. Tiny bows and arrows or hearts can be used as favors. The hearts should be made like a solid funeral design, without trimming or green, and should be rounded so as to appear full in the center. The shape can easily be obtained by banking the moss high on the center of the frame. If only outline heart frames are at hand, construct a solid bottom and fill as if using a solid frame.

Other flirty designs, like butterflies and fans, make catchy valentine decorations.

Almost the same designs can be adapted from window decorations to table and house designs. We will consider these a little later, after some more suggestions as to bows and arrows.

Cupid the Central Figure.



A large bow and arrow, strung, can be hung from the ceiling. At some convenient point perch a tiny Cupid, dragging along a pierced heart by a narrow ribbon. Below, on the floor of the window, scatter more arrows and hearts, and tiny receptacles for flowers, daintily filled. If a red rose display is used, set a small Cupid inside of a large, half-open bud, conspicuously placed, or fill a bark canoe with red roses or violets, and have Cupid at the paddle.

Another: Suspend a bisque Cupid holding a cluster of narrow ribbon, attached to the numerous ends of which are scattered about below bunches of violets, boxes of violets, hampers with violet cord ties, and all the dainty devices for bunching, tying and delivering flowers. If it is desirable to introduce other colors, a large choice is left open in the way of combinations with light pink or white flowers.

Hampers, Umbrellas and Fans.

Another window or table decoration may be composed of various styles of hampers, some open and filled, others only partly open, with a Cupid's head appearing near the edge. Others may be closed, with a bunch of violets or other flowers lying on the lid. Others may be wrapped as for delivery, with violet cord and a pretty address tag.

Another: Cover a Japanese umbrella frame, from which the paper covering has been removed, with a new covering of wide chiffon and a full ruffle. Partially close the umbrella and turn the handle upward. Fill with flowers loosely and give Cupid a place among them.

A large fan spread in full view may form a good centerpiece for a valentine window. Set the open fan upright. Fill in with violets and white in regulation stripes, alternating the colors distinctly. Have Cupid peeping out from over the top. By way of a practical suggestion, lay a dainty corsage of violets down beside the fan. Valley or Romans may be used to good advantage for a fringe along the upper edge of the fan, with a cluster of green or violet cord attached to the handle below. Sharply contrasting colors should be used for the stripes.

Simple Table Decorations.

For simple table decorations trace a series of heart outlines, with loose violets laid on the cloth. The foliage of English violets will form an occasional heart of green among the purple ones. Between the heart outlines make trailers, as often seen in embroidery work, of violet heads caught one in the spur of the other and the stems flying in opposite directions. Coquettish hats and saucy baskets or "granny" muffs of violets make good valentine centerpieces.

If violets or red are used, bring out in strong relief by a light, contrasting background. The setting for any one of the above designs for a window should be carefully planned. Bearing in mind the size and style of the design, consider carefully the distance at which it should be placed from the glass. A small, dainty piece should be placed rather close to the front, while a large, striking design must be more retiringly placed, with a simple setting.

The Question of "Filling In."

Quite often it is a question what else to put in the window to "fill in." It is better not to have any "filling in" to do. Make the special design large enough to occupy most of the space. Have a suitable floor background, and if a plain woodwork or mirror background is found, break its severity by a green vine tracing or a fabric drapery touched with some flower seen in the design.

Do not try to show something of everything in the house. Limit the variety displayed to the theme of the decoration. In other words, do not introduce anything but what can find a fitting place in the general scheme. For example, suppose you are exhibiting a standing piece and have some presentable blooming plants also. So group the plants about the base as to make it appear that they are planted into that same base, and you may extend that base as far as the bounds of the window and still have a reasonable connection and unity for the whole thing. Gertrude Blair.

LEAF BLIGHT IN GERANIUMS.

Please give me a remedy for the geranium leaf blight. It causes the plants to lose their leaves when bedded out in the summer. It comes in small brown splotches on the leaves and spreads until the leaves are practically covered and fall off. It almost defoliates the plants at times, and is much worse in damp or rainy weather and while the plants are small. I enclose some leaves that show signs of it. E. T.

The trouble referred to is common and is difficult to control. Under glass it is possible to minimize the attacks by careful watering and ventilating, but outdoors so much depends on atmospheric conditions that we can never be quite certain how our plants will stand spells of damp, muggy weather. Our experience has been that fall propagated cuttings, carefully hardened before planting out, are less susceptible to blight than winter or early spring struck cuttings. The first named are rooted without bottom heat; the latter are usually given more warmth and never seem to possess the same vitality as the late fall rooted stock.

Spraying with a solution of permanganate of potash is said to act as a deterrent on both geraniums and hollyhocks. Spraying should begin, of course, before the blight appears. Once it has made its appearance, we are afraid there is little that can be done to prevent its running its course. If the trouble comes while the plants are small, in all cases it might pay to spray with either permanganate of potash or Bordeaux mixture, but with most growers the trouble shows most pronouncedly in the dog-day weather of July and August. C. W.

PAUL CRAMPEL AS A STANDARD.

Those who require standard geraniums in pots for placing in suitable positions on terraces and lawns, or other desirable situations in summer, should grow that brightest of all summer-flowering varieties, Pelargonium Paul Crampel. Plants raised from stout cuttings grown on vigorously soon reach the height required, three feet to four feet for the taller specimens. By repeated pinching of the points as fast as a little growth is made, the foundation of good heads is soon made, and the plants can afterwards be grown on as desired. As a free-flowering variety this pelargonium has few equals, and certainly no superior, when we consider its vigorous growth. In the gardens at West Dean Park last summer, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine, I saw some charming standards of this variety, arranged on the grass with a background of evergreens, and the great masses of flower trusses produced a brilliant effect.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

The U. S. Treasury Department has just completed the record of imports and exports for the month of November, 1908. It is of interest to note how the totals for all classes of seeds compare with the preceding year, as follows:

Exports	1,007,506	495,617

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade has been somewhat dull the last two weeks, this January not being nearly as good as last year's. Stock is plentiful, except that there was a little scarcity of roses last week, occasioned by the dark weather. Bulb stock is on the market in full blast. Beauties are scarce and short stemmed. Plants are not moving very fast. The abominable, slushy weather keeps people indoors, and thus the cut flower business falls off.

Various Notes.

The meeting of the Florists' Club was held Tuesday evening, January 19. It was well attended, and an interesting meeting was held. Mr. Holm, of Holm & Olson, read a paper touching the business entirely from a retailer's point of view, and it contained some pithy remarks, and a lot of good, practical suggestions.

C. I. Lindskoog has put in a stock of goldfish, and finds his new adjunct profitable.

LEXINGTON, KY.

The Market.

Business conditions last week were good. There were several large funerals that cleaned out quantities of stock. We are having some sunshine now and stock is more abundant than it has been.

Roses are of fairly good quality. Carnations are plentiful and good and meet with a ready sale.

There is a satisfactory demand for Roman hyacinths, callas, Paper Whites, narcissi, lily of the valley, and Lilium longiflorum. Sweet peas are in good supply and demand. Tulips and freesias are on the market.

Asparagus, smilax and galax are abundant and move satisfactorily. Other green goods are plentiful and are selling well at present. Cyclamens, azaleas and primulas have a fairly good demand.

Various Notes.

James P. Keller has been busy the last three weeks with funeral work. His roses and carnations are of good quality.

Horticultural Society Meets.

The Monmouth County Horticultural Society held its fifth annual dinner at the Sheridan hotel, in this city, and the affair from start to finish was one of the most successful things of its kind that the writer has ever attended.

The dinner committee, Messrs. N. Butterbach, W. Turner, Harry A. Kettel, George H. Hale and William Dowling, got up an excellent menu.

At the close of the dinner Dr. W. S. Whitmore, who acted as toastmaster, after a few eloquent remarks on the good the society had done and was doing in the community, called on the newly elected president, Joseph Kennedy, to address the members present, which he did in a manner that augurs well for his administration. He welcomed the representatives of other societies present, and was followed by A. Herrington, who spoke for the Morris county society; F. Neubrand, who spoke for the Tarrytown society, and A. Bauer, who represented the Elberon society.

All of these gentlemen congratulated the society on its work and on the cordial relations existing between it and its sister organizations.

The Rickards brothers gave several fine songs and A. L. Holden, a prominent New York architect, made a strong plea for a closer relationship between the architect of a mansion and the landscape gardener who lays out the grounds. His suggestion that horticultural societies endow a scholarship to permit worthy young gardeners to specialize in this particular line is worth careful consideration among horticultural bodies.

Charles H. Totty thanked the members for their generous treatment of him, and in return offered his $50 silver trophy for 1909, to be competed for by this society at its next fall show, conditions to be left to the exhibition committee.

William Duckham, known as the official jollier, made one of his best efforts in that line, and was followed by Father Egan, of Seabright; Father Kelly, of Red Bank, and Dr. Field, who gave us good advice and told us some excellent stories.

Mr. Kemp, superintendent for Dr. Van Vliet, gave an excellent talk on the work which painstaking gardeners are doing in improving plants and flowers, and incidentally made a few digs at Luther Burbank.

Many others, too numerous to mention in detail, made remarks, short but pertinent, among them William Turner, George Hale, N. Butterbach, W. W. Kennedy and A. Metzdorf. The fun was concluded about 2 a. m. by Harry Kettel singing "Rolling Home," with a full chorus accompanying him.

One hundred members and guests were present and every one went away delighted with the evening's entertainment. VIDI.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Slow trade was the order of the week and the weather was partly to blame, starting the week with snow and winding up with thunder, lightning and rain. There was plenty of stock of all kinds and prices, accordingly, were low. Violets seemed to fare worse than anything else. Among the retailers there were some good funeral orders and they needed them, as society is still in a comatose state.

Three Well-known Pittsburgers.

Various Notes.

Randolph & McClements, the Zieger Co. and H. L. Blind & Bros., the east end people, are closing their stores at 6 p. m., except Saturday night.

A party consisting of Fred Burki, E. C. Reineman, P. S. Randolph, Henry Blind, W. A. Clarke, E. C. Ludwig and De Forest Ludwig visited the J. B. Murdoch greenhouses at Vaneman, Pa., last Tuesday, and spent a pleasant day. The houses were not in the condition they hoped to see them, owing to the shortage of water. On account of the drought last summer, the springs which supplied them with water gave out entirely, making them dependent on a deep well which they have been pumping from, but this developed some salt, which did not help their roses, nor was it the best thing for the carnations. By next season this will be overcome by putting in a different water system.

The Geddis store, at Homestead, Pa., was placed on sale last Tuesday and was knocked down at $800 to W. D. Faulk, the highest bidder. Mr. Faulk is known as a hustler and has the good wishes of his friends in the new venture.

The Hartman brothers, who sold out their houses here several years ago and went to farming in Ohio, have again sold out and were in the city last week bidding good-bye to their old friends before starting for the west, as they will settle in Idaho or Oregon.

Ben Elliott, who is associated with John Bader, will leave the last of the week with his brother, J. Wilkinson Elliott, and several others, to make a tour of Italy by automobile. J. Wilkinson Elliott visited most of Germany last fall and left his machine on the other side for this trip, which he had in mind at that time.

The Southview Floral Co. has taken the store room at 1734 Carson street, formerly occupied by M. F. Stafford, who recently failed.

A thief recently entered the home of E. W. Garland, of the Finleyville Floral Co., taking his watch and chain, best suit of clothes and about $100 in money.

David Geddis, who left some time ago for Texas, returned last Saturday. He is interested in the real estate business there, and is here in connection with a large deal they have on hand. He will return in about ten days; his headquarters will be Harrisburg and Houston, Tex.

OBITUARY.

John W. Crane.

John W. Crane, of Bethany, O., died Wednesday evening, January 13, of general debility. He was 72 years of age. He was born in Ohio and had lived in Bethany for a number of years. He spent the latter part of his life in the growing of plants and flowers. He is survived by his wife.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The cut flower trade remains about the same as usual. Carnations are doing well. Carnations retail at 50 cents and 60 cents per dozen; roses, from $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Violets bring $1.50 per hundred blooms, retail; sweet peas, $1 per hundred, retail. A good supply of tulips and Paper White narcissi is now coming in; they retail at 50 cents per dozen. Freesias have now made their appearance and they work in well for funeral work. Funeral work is good, and much short stuff is used up in this way.

Most of the growers here are now making ready for Decoration day, by sowing Ten Weeks' Stocks and candytuft. We are having very mild weather here at present.

R. H. Woodhouse has a nice batch of young geraniums coming along for the spring trade.

E. Y. Peirce and family spent last week at their cottage at Onset, Mass.

William Livesey is cutting some nice Lloyd carnations.

Peter Murray's Winsors are doing finely at his Fairhaven place. This variety has a beautiful color and takes well with the public. W. L.

MINOT, N. D.—A sudden blaze on Sunday morning, January 17, destroyed the entire stock in Geo. E. Valker's greenhouses. The damage to the building is but slight, though a good deal of the glass was broken by the heat. The fire started in the basement, where the heating plant is located. Mr. Valker had begun business only about a month before. The most necessary repairs were made at once.

The trade all will be interested in the article in this issue on Amami O-Shima, its cycas and its lily crops, by Alfred Unger, of the old firm of Louis Boehmer, Yokohama.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Legislative and Tariff Committee.

Benjamin Hammond, chairman of the legislative and tariff committee, has issued a circular letter in which he asks for the assistance of members of the trade in his efforts to obtain information on such matters as affect the revision of the tariff on horticultural products. Mr. Hammond's letter contains the following set of questions, with the request that they be promptly answered and returned to him:

1. Are you engaged in importing merchandise known as "horticultural goods"?
2. What class of horticultural goods do you import, and to what extent?
3. On what articles, in your estimation, should the tariff be increased? Why?
4. Name any articles on which you think the tariff should be reduced, and why?
5. Name any articles in the said class on which you think the tariff should not be changed, and why?
6. Please give your views as to the advantage to importers of a specific rather than ad valorem duty on horticultural goods.
7. Have you made an appeal from the decision of the appraisers at any of the ports of entry? If so, when and where and with what results?

Registration of Cypripedium.

Public notice is hereby given that Alfred J. Loveless, of Lenox, Mass., offers for registration the plant described below. Any person objecting to the registration of this plant or to the use of the proposed name is requested to communicate with the undersigned at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Date—January 25, 1909. Name—Ursula. Kind of plant—cypripedium. Parentage—Leeanum Clinkaberryanum x Niobe Shorthillense. Description—Upper dorsal, round pointed at the apex, two and one-fourth inches wide and the same in depth, upper half pure white, base yellowish green with numerous dark spots; a bright reddish purple line one-quarter inch wide runs through center to apex, and the dorsal is also flushed with the same color, on each side of central line radiating from the base, until lost in the white above. Lower dorsal, pale green, keeping well forward, giving the flower a round, full effect. Petals, deeply corrugated, brownish on upper half, with a margin of pale green, terminating with numerous minute spots at base; dark brown line runs through center; lower half, light yellowish green splashed with chocolate. Pouch, one and one-half inches wide at top, differing from either parent by almost touching the petals on either side and being of a bright, glossy reddish brown in front, shading back to yellowish green. Foliage, similar to Leeanum.

W. N. Rudd, Sec'y.

"THANKS ABOVE THE PRICE."

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time:

If this reaches you in time, drop my advertisement for lettuce plants from this week's issue, as I am deluged with orders from the one insertion. An order this morning for 10,000 from seed bed takes everything that is left. I have shipped this week to Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania and Kansas. With many thanks above the price of the advertisement, I am, yours,

W. L. LEEKA.

Fairmount, Ill., January 19, 1909.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There are widely varying reports on last week's business. Early in the week demand was brisk, supply light and prices strong, but spring-like weather marked the close of the week. Saturday, January 23, the temperature was 65 degrees, breaking all records for January in the history of the weather bureau. There was hardly a glimpse of the sun throughout the week, else the supply would have increased much more than it did. Such unseasonable heat could not but bring in a lot of soft, unsatisfactory stock. Some houses say the business fell off the latter part of the week, but others say January 23 was the best Saturday of the winter, the sales running to a higher total than on any other one day outside the Christmas season.

The present week started off with considerably increased supply, deteriorated quality and weaker prices, but good business sufficed to clean the market out in fair shape. Roses show the effect of the bad weather more than do any other flowers, but they hold their prices more firmly than anything else. Pink roses have lost their color and Maid is the weakest of the roses. In weather such as we have had, Killarney comes strongly to the front. There are good supplies of Richmond, excellent in quality. Several houses are cutting heavily of Beauties, and especially of long stems, but there is considerable difference in quality. Bride is and has for some time been the shortest item in the list and has commanded a little extra price.

Carnations have come in heavily and prices have weakened. A good deal of the stock is soft as a result of the heat, and both growers and wholesalers were glad to see cooler weather again, with a little sun. There was a large sale for violets during the warm days of last week, but home-grown singles are now coming in so heavily that the prices have gone down, at the same time affecting the salability of the Hudson river stock.

Harrisii lilies are again in large supply. Valley is abundant. Last week's special call for funeral work made a run on Paper Whites and they sold better than at any time this year. Tulips in all colors now are plentiful. The quality is good and for the reds and yellows fair prices are received.

Stevia is about over. Orchids are scarce, especially cypripediums, with not enough cattleyas to go around. Sweet peas are much improved in quality, are offered in larger quantity and at lower prices.

There has been an increase in the sale for greens, especially for smilax strings, but also for plumosus strings and bunches.

Valentine's Day.

Preparations are being made for a big business for Valentine's day, February 14. Last year there was a splendid sale for boxes of flowers, particularly fancy boxes of violets. The supply houses are all offering novelties in the line of violet boxes and the wholesalers who handle violets in quantity are making arrangements for the biggest day's business of the year. Valentine's day falls on Sunday this year, which probably is the best day in the week for this business.

Various Notes.

The Illinois Heater & Mfg. Co., known to the trade as the maker of the self-watering flower boxes, window boxes, pots, jardinieres and other metal specialties, is about to remove from 3947 Wentworth avenue to Downers Grove, Ill., where the company has recently purchased a three-story brick factory building with about three acres of additional ground, which will permit it to largely increase its output.

January 22 Weiland & Risch filled the largest single order for funeral work ever known in this market. It was for fifty 18-inch wreaths for the George W. Jackson Co., to be used at the funeral of its men killed in last week's crib accident. Fifty bodies, each with its wreath, were buried in one grave. Weiland & Risch worked all night January 22, making the wreaths. They were required to be first-class in every respect and were made of magnolia leaves and Bride roses.

Gottfried Amling, who is 76 years of age, was taken suddenly ill January 21 and was operated on January 24 at the Oak Park hospital, where he now is doing nicely. He is the father of E. C. Amling, Albert F. Amling and William Amling, all well known in the trade. E. C. Amling had already bought tickets for himself and family to California for a brief rest, which his father's illness has now caused him to abandon.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. is short-handed at the city store this week. O. W. Frese went home ill January 23 and Mons Olson has been on the sick list since the middle of last week.

N. J. Wietor is conducting a hospital this week, wife and children all being ill with tonsilitis.

The A. L. Randall Co. has become Cook County agent for the Mandy Lee incubators, brooders and poultry supplies. This new department is entirely distinct from the florists' business and is in charge of H. S. Seely, formerly with Vaughan's Seed Store. It is the report that the Randall Co. intends to develop the poultry supply department into a general seed business in charge of Mr. Seely.

Kennicott Bros. Co. received the first of Klehm's Novelty tulip January 25, excellent stock for so early.

C. W. McKellar reports gardenias much more abundant than cattleyas.

Bassett & Washburn are in with another big crop of the Formosa lilies.

C. M. Dickinson's son was operated on January 22 for adenoids.

Johnson & Chronis have put up handsome posters along the Illinois Central, advertising their store at Forty-seventh street and Lake avenue.

George Reinberg's Brides have responded to the springlike weather.

Peter Reinberg was operated on Thursday, January 21, at St. Elizabeth's hospital for a minor abdominal disorder. He will have to remain quiet a few days longer.

Kroeschell Bros. Co. tells the story of receiving a telephone order at 4 p. m. one day recently, from Wm. Tawms, who bought out C. Burmeister, near Milwaukee. His heating apparatus had given out. The Kroeschells loaded a new boiler on the night boat; it was in Milwaukee at 4 a. m., and inside of twenty-four hours was being fired up in Mr. Tawms' shed.

Kruchten & Co. say the call for short roses still holds up.

Vaughan & Sperry predict a big call for violets February 13 and 14.

January 29 is McKinley day. It has been forgotten in this market as a factor affecting business.

The E. F. Winterson Co. says goldfish are the best side line any florist can carry.

Zech & Mann say the shipping demand is strong for other things than roses.

Albert Fuchs was cited into the debtors' court January 23 on a judgment for $70 in favor of a printing concern. He says he holds real estate worth half a million dollars, but that his income is temporarily diverted. Nevertheless, he paid the $70.

Peter Reinberg is duplicating his last year's January crop of Beauties.

The John C. Moninger Co. has gone into the pipe business, procuring its supplies at first hand and carrying several carloads in stock. The company also sells the Herendeen boiler.

There have been quite a number of visitors in town this week on their way to the Indianapolis carnation convention. Among those here on business were Alex. G. Robinson, manager of the Kentucky Tobacco Product Co., Louisville, Ky.; Peter Freeman, Aurora, Ill.; George Heinl, Toledo, O.; L. P. ton, Ia., who bought at E. H. Hunt's a stock of supplies for the new store Mr. Bather is opening at 235 Fifth avenue, Clinton.

The Horticultural Society had an animated session last Tuesday, in which all officers were reëlected except the secretary, assistant secretary and executive committee. The election of these was postponed for two weeks.

Chicago was well represented at Indianapolis. There were twenty-six passengers in the special car, including President Valentine and one or two others from outside points.

A small fire broke out one day this week in the Atlas block, where some of Chicago's leading wholesale florists have their headquarters. The damages sustained were slight.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

There is no use coddling winter any longer. It will not come in. Last week's cold snap snapped off in an hour. The week ended in rain and slush and the present week opened with most of the accompaniments of spring. It is demoralizing business. Fortunately, during the last week the supply has been limited, and the demand left the market nicely depleted daily. But this week opens with a downward tendency and shipments are increasing. Samuel Lum, of Chatham, one of the large rose growers there, who was in the city January 25, takes a rather gloomy view of the situation from the grower's standpoint. He has one of the largest plants in that great rose-growing section and speaks with the authority of fifteen years' experience. "Roses haven't paid the grower for years; not since the year of the sun spots," he says, "and present prices leave no margin of profit." These are not the views of a pessimist, but of a philosopher. He predicts a reduction in the number of rose growers in the country, unless there comes a great change for the better in the outlook. Certainly the cut flower growers of this section have had a strenuous season to date.

Beauties are lower, 50 cents securing the best of them. Brides and Maids have fallen to 8 cents for the selected and all the new varieties are going at a concession from last week's figures. The carnation crop is coming in with a vengeance; grand stock it is, especially the novelties, but the average price is lower. This applies, too, to orchids, which are abundant. Violets have fallen again. Seldom will the extra special selected bunches of 100 go above 50 cents, and of the ordinary and mediocre stock that arrives, the street man with his "twent-centa buncha" tells the story. Valley, gardenias and green goods show no change. Retail windows look wonderfully attractive and spring-like. Prices are kept reasonable; $1 boxes even have appeared, a sure sign of surplus, and most of the stores report the usual dinner, wedding and steamer demands. Lent approaches, but has no further terrors.

Various Notes.

The Emerald and Old Guards balls will be national affairs that should be felt in the retail current. The debutantes are still coming out encouragingly. M. A. Bowe had a unique decoration last week at the Union Club. It was for a railroad man and represented a railroad scene. With the aid of electricity the cars were in constant motion. An artificial lake was in the center and miniature stations and copies of scenery en route added to the realistic character of the display.

Another prosperous retailer, Joseph Leikens, of Fifth avenue, has just added an $800 horse to his facilities for travel.

The new store at the corner of Broadway and Twenty-eighth street, into which it is said Charles Thorley will move in the spring, is next door to A. Warendorff's, the entrance of the popular Fifth Avenue theater only separating them. Talk about window decoration! Wait! There will be competition in this contiguity that will make blase pedestrians stand still and take notice.

After all, we have a slim representation from New York at the Indianapolis convention. Sickness in the family prevented ex-President Traendly's attendance.

March 17 the annual dinner of the National Association of Gardeners is announced. John Shore is president. The society is planning for a big flower show and convention on that date and many silver cups and medals will be competed for, Ellwanger & Barry and Lord & Burnham being among the donors.

W. R. Smith, who has been with Peter Henderson & Co. for over twenty years, left January 23 for the state of Washington, where he has purchased land for fruit growing. The firm held him in high esteem and joined with the employees in the presentation of a handsome testimonial on his departure.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club is carnation night, February 8, and a large exhibit is assured. Harry GREENHOUSES, HINSDALE, ILL.

Office and Store, 76 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO

O. May, secretary of the exhibition committee, has arranged to stage attractively all exhibits sent by express in care of John Young, secretary of the club, 51 West Twenty-eighth street, New York city. Members who attended the Indianapolis convention will be present and describe the meeting there. Some of them we expect to return with high honors. It will be a gala night and the provisions by J. B. Nugent, chairman of the house committee, will be above the ordinary.

The annual dinner of the Florists' Club will be given in the Roman banquet hall at Shanley's, Forty-second street and Broadway. It will be a popular dinner and includes the ladies. Tickets are $4 for gentlemen and $3 for ladies, and the hour is 6:30 Saturday evening, February 20. W. J. Elliott is chairman of the committee.

John Armsley, superintendent of the Schlegel estate at Seventy-second street and Second avenue, Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, has a beautiful exhibit of Cattleya Trianæ, of over 1,000 blooms.

The sympathy of the trade goes out to Walter Reimels, of Woodhaven, in the loss of his wife January 20. The young couple had only been married seven months. Mr. Reimels is prostrated by the sudden calamity. He is a son of John Reimels, the popular florist and president of the First National Bank of Ozone Park, L. I.

The local seed and bulb houses are fast getting in trim for the spring rush and travelers for all the houses are enthusiastic on the outlook. Great additions are already made to the working force in these establishments and the many handsome catalogues, which have left on their mission in hundreds of thousands, are already doing business. Harry Bunyard, Al. Rickards, W. E. Marshall, Jack Hunter, Walter McDougall, George Burnett, W. E. Sperling, Walter Mott, Charles M. Taggert and a host of others are out on the road booming things for their respective firms. These heralds of optimism are like tonics wherever they go, in awakening hope and ambition in the hearts of the floriculturists in every section of the country.

Friday, January 29, is McKinley day. The wholesalers have the usual indication of it in their windows, but the retailers seem to take little interest, although it seems as though a little enterprise on their part would pay hundredfold.

James Snyder, violet grower, in the Rhinebeck Gazette of last week gives George Saltford credit for being the enterprising pioneer of the violet industry in Rhinebeck and vicinity, he having there discovered the soil which has made that locality the natural home of the violet in this country.

The Market.

Conditions might be better, but, everything considered, the market cannot be classed as unsatisfactory. They are certainly better than a year ago, and while stock does not move as expeditiously as could be wished, there is no slump in prices. Roses continue to meet with a good sale and are now of excellent quality, American Beauties and Killarneys being especially fine. Carnations are in oversupply, prices remaining much the same as a week ago. Violets, with the mild weather prevailing most of the time, are getting quite plentiful and have in consequence softened in price a little. Bulbous stock increases in quantity, but so far has cleared out well. Roman hyacinths and Paper Whites are now less in evidence. Stevia is still seen in considerable quantity.

Sweet peas vary as much in quality as price. Some are fine, stems extra long. Callas and lilies are in good supply and pansies are more abundant. Myosotis, candytuft, stocks, snapdragons, mignonette and a variety of other seasonable flowers are seen. There is a good supply of smilax, adiantum and asparagus. Prices on these remain about the same.

Various Notes.

The Boston Coöperative Flower Growers' Association has issued the preliminary premium list for its annual flower show, to be held in Horticultural hall, February 27 and 28. The exhibition promises to be the largest of a trade character ever held in New England, and many visitors from other states will attend.

The stereopticon lecture by Prof. E. A. White, of Amherst, on "Ornamental Gardens and Garden Materials," attracted an audience which filled the lecture room of Horticultural hall January 23. The lecturer, who spoke for one and one-half hours, showed successively the gardens of England, Italy, Japan, the American-

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

There was a slight improvement in general business during last week, although the dark days were not auspicious for cut flower business. Roses and carnations remain the staple, but excellent tulips and daffodils are arriving in good numbers. Violets are improving and roses are of better crop and better color. Funeral work has been brisk and there has been an increased demand for cut flowers for social functions.

Horticultural Society.

The annual meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was held Wednesday evening, January 20, and was largely attended. The business session was followed by lectures and a supper. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Edwin H. Burlingame; vice-presidents, R. H. I. Goddard, R. C. Taft, G. P. Wetmore, R. B. Treat, J. E. C. Farnham, Prof. H. J. Wheeler, J. G. A committee was appointed to consider ways and means for the securing of a permanent place of meeting for the society, and several matters were discussed looking to an expansion of the scope of the society and an increase of its usefulness.

Florists' and Gardeners' Club.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held in Swarts Lodge hall, 98 Westminster street, Monday evening, January 18. There was an unusually large attendance, drawn together by the occasion of the thirteenth annual dinner. Members and friends to the number of nearly forty gathered, notwithstanding that the temperature was approximating the zero mark.

The recently elected officers took their respective stations, Charles S. Macnair presiding. On the president's table was a large bunch of white and pink chrysanthemums that attracted considerable attention and were the subject of animated discussion later in the evening. These were shown by James Hockey, who reported that he was cutting them continuously and that he had a large number yet to cut. He announced that he thought he would have blooms for Easter. The blooms were Nellie Pockett and Dr. Enguehard.

A short business meeting was held during the early part of the evening, at which President Macnair announced the appointment of the following standing committees for the ensuing year: Essays and discussions, Cornelius Hartstra, William Hill and James Hockey; entertainment, William Appleton, Owen McManus and Michael Sweeney; investigation, Alexander Macrae, E. A. Appleton and J. F. Schellinger. R. F. Colwell, of Barrington, was elected to membership,

Mr. Hartstra, gardener at the Rhode Island Hospital, presented the club with two volumes of "Medicinal Plants" for the library. At the conclusion of the business, President Macnair presented the retiring president, Alexander Macrae, on behalf of the club, with a handsomely inscribed gavel, amid the plaudits of the members.

The entertainment committee then assumed charge of the evening's program and, after passing cigars, presented the following entertainers, several of whom are identified with the florists' business: R. P. Tully, piano solos; W. P. Lynch, barytone solos; Leon Jarvis, violin selection; W. R. Washburton, tenor solos; Thomas Appleton, bass solos; Philip Smith and Alexander Macrae, banjo solos and duets. During the latter part of the evening a Dutch supper was served, to which all did full justice.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Conditions have materially changed since the report of one week ago. The weather has moderated; in fact, we have been enjoying a genuine January thaw, with a moderate amount of sunshine and an immoderate amount of fog. The fog did not do much good, but the sunshine helped production to a marked degree. The demand has hardly improved in proportion to the supply, prices being a shade easier. Business is good for the last week in January, the volume being much larger than during the scarcity of the dark, cold weather of a week ago.

Beauties have receded slightly, there being an ample supply of the long stemmed and a fair supply of the short stemmed flowers, with a scanty supply of medium grades. The proportion of imperfect blooms is decreasing. The specials of Richmond and Killarney are fine indeed, both in color and substance. Mrs. Jardine is also good. Brides and Maids are in fair supply; the short stemmed flowers of Bride, the grade most in demand for design work, are not equal to requirements.

The demand for carnations has quickened, the market being better sustained on all grades and varieties of a week ago. White has some off days, but the end of last week saw a good clean-up on all colorless stock.

Violets sold fairly well toward the end of last week, but the market broke with the warmer weather on Monday, the street taking a large portion of the stock at figures that were for the street very good. The supply of singles is excellent, of local doubles only moderate. Callas have been in oversupply. There is no special feature to the Easter lily market, the demand being generally equal to the moderate supply now coming into town. Daffodils are selling well, the quantity arriving being larger than a week ago. Freesia is also much more abundant. Tulips are in good supply, with a moderate demand. Gardenias have been selling well indeed, and it is doubtful if this market has ever seen such fine stock. The heavy supply of Cattleya Trianæ is past. Prices held well throughout, and will probably stiffen a little as the supply decreases. There are a few Cœlogyne cristata about, and also a few Dendrobium formosum. Cyps are nearly over. Sweet pea conditions remain unchanged—the best selling, the poor begging.

There are odd conditions in the green situation. Stated briefly, bunches of plumosus are scarce and high; that is, you do not get as much plumosus for your money; while smilax is extremely plentiful, and does not sell at all.

Shipping is excellent.

Red Wing, the new carnation of the Robert Craig Co., is now in full crop. It is a better color and a better producer than Beacon. The flowers, though not so large, are a good, salable size. Robert A. Craig says that, when known, Red Wing will be grown by every grower who plants carnations for profit.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade was much better last week. There were a great many social events, which used up considerable fancy stock. This, with funeral work, made good business for the local retailers. The wholesalers, too, report a good shipping trade and only regret that the rose crop is off. The demand for roses was brisk and consignments were cleaned up daily. Fancy long Beauties have been scarce. There are plenty of shorts, but the bulk of them come deformed. Carnations, too, have been in demand, but there were plenty for all demands, white being cleaned up almost daily. California violets are down to 50 cents per hundred in small lots. The market is well supplied with them. Sweet peas and tulips sell well. Romans are a glut and there are plenty of Paper Whites, valley and callas to be had. These, with a few freesias, cover the consignments that come to this market. Everything in greens is in plenty.

Various Notes.

J. Henry Kahrs, who recently bought out the Burke store at 605 Locust street, held an opening reception Saturday, January 23, inviting the general public. Handsome souvenirs were given and music made the opening a success.

C. Young & Sons Co. has just issued its spring catalogue, which is most complete and a credit to the firm. They are making big preparations to handle a large spring shipping trade. They are the largest shippers of plants in the city.

J. Van Hook, of Ferguson, is consigning to this market some extra well grown carnations and California violets.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. has a new folding wire plant stand, which will be put on sale in a few days. It is something new for plant decorations.

F. C. Weber, Jr., celebrated his twenty-seventh birthday Monday, January 18, with a billiard party and supper to his young friends at the home of his parents, 5384 Watterman avenue.

Otto Schubert, of Columbus, O., has been in the city for the last ten days, looking for an opening.

The Ellison Floral Co. has about completed its new show-house adjoining its store.

There were two handsome decorations last week, one of American Beauties at Louisiana hall for the reception of the supreme officers of the Legion of Honor, and the other at the Missouri Athletic Club, of pink carnations, for the Royal Arcanum banquet.

C. E. Howard, gardener for St. Vincent's Institution at Wellston, has his new conservatory filled with plants of all kinds. He will grow a lot of outdoor stock this summer.

Robert Thomson & Co., local greenhouse builders, have recently completed a new greenhouse at the Yeatman high school and one for the St. Vincent's Institution at Wellston.

The Engelmann Botanical Club should have held its monthly meeting January 11, but owing to the severe snow storm the meeting was postponed until Monday, January 25. This year marks the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Dr. George Engelmann, after whom the club has been named. The subject for this meeting was "Twigs of Woody Plants in Winter," by C. H. Thompson, of the Missouri Botanical Garden. Prof. H. C. Irish presided over the meeting. W. W. Ohlweiler is secretary and treasurer.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting in the hall of the Central Y. M. C. A. and elected its officers for the ensuing year. They are as follows: President, Edward Mallinckrodt; vice-presidents, Leonard Mathews, D. S. Brown, J. B. Gazzam and J. H. Gundlach; secretary, Otto G. Koenig; treasurer, Fred C. Weber. George B. Windler and Rudolph Windt were added to the executive committee, and H. N. Davis, W. K. Bixby, Walker Hill and John Forster directors. The society offered $50 in prizes for best kept gardens and home surroundings this summer. It was also voted to hold a spring flower show during March or April.

The Market.

A week of dull business has just passed. It is hard to find a single bright spot in it. Perhaps the fact that stock is not overplentiful is the greatest thing we have to be thankful for. The majority of the retail stores are complaining of the poor demand and the wholesale houses can report only a fair business. No matter how you estimate it, it will hardly figure up to last year.

Roses are equal to the demand. Red roses are in good demand and Beauties can be considered scarce. Outside of that, all orders can be filled easily and there is some surplus. But, aside from this, it must be stated that the average price now is considerably lower than for the same time last year. Carnations, if anything, are holding their own better than roses, but even they are averaging from 50 cents to $1 per hundred lower than last year. There are plenty of carnations and they are cleaning out well, though the concession in price has to be made to move them. Lilies, both callas and Harrisii, are more plentiful. Valley is selling fairly well. Violets are equal to the demand and moving out at fair prices. Sweet peas have dropped in price, but they are selling out pretty well at the lower figures. There are plenty of narcissi, both white and yellow. In green goods this market is well supplied.

Various Notes.

The carnation show at Indianapolis is attracting a number of the Cincinnati florists. Among those going are J. A. Peterson, C. E. Critchell, William Murphy, R. Witterstaetter, P. J. Olinger, W. K. Partridge and E. G. Gillett.

E. G. Gillett received and accepted an invitation from Secretary Baur, of the Indiana State Florists' Association, to respond on its behalf to the address of welcome by the mayor of Indianapolis.

The called meeting of the Florists' Society, held at Weiland & Olinger's Saturday night, was a decided success. A large crowd was present and they enjoyed the good cheer provided by the firm. William Gardener saw that none of the boys went away without getting their full share of the good things. At the business meeting several points of importance were talked over and settled, in part at least. Arrangements were completed for the entertainment of the executive board of the S. A. F. at its meeting here sometime in March. The chairmen of several committees were present and made reports. The machinery looking toward the entertainment of the S. A. F. here next August is fast being put into condition, and before long everything will be in first-class working shape. There is plenty of energy shown at all of the meetings, and it all points to a successful convention.

O. C. Heberling, of Georgetown, Ky., and F. W. Winter, of Charleston, W. Va., were callers; also William Dilger, of Detroit, Mich., on his way home from a business trip south. On his last visit here, about a week ago, he was severely hurt by slipping and striking his knee upon an icy pavement. The injury was a painful one.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

Business for the last fortnight has been fairly good. Quite a lot of funeral work was turned out, which helped to clean out the glut that had been on the market since the first of the month. Roses are scarce, being off crop. Carnations are not quite as plentiful as they were, but are not bringing any better prices. Beauties are equal to the demand.

Romans, Paper Whites and a few tulips are being used up pretty well in design work. Some good azaleas, primroses and cyclamens are to be seen at the stores.

Bowling Club.

At the last session of the Bowling Club Capt. Will Walker's team took three straights from Capt. Fred L. Schulz's team. Geo. E. Schulz and Robert Miller were the two highest rollers and will be captains next Monday night. Refreshments will be served and prizes will be rolled for. There will be enough for everybody—both prizes and refreshments.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Business picked up in fine shape last week and a raft of stock was disposed of. Bulb stock moved most freely, though all stock had a good call. Tulips in all the colors are still short, but single daffodils are in fine shape. Heavy shipments were received and all sold well. They brought a good price and sold on sight. Lilies, also, met with more than an average demand. Funeral work called for a quantity of cheap stock.

Various Notes.

The sudden growth of Buffalo in the northern section has attracted the florists in that direction, and no less than three stores have been opened there within a short space of time. S. O. Anderson is the last to open, having leased a store in the Elmwood section. The store will adjoin his greenhouse, occupying a space in a large building recently erected.

Walter Mott called recently, in the interests of the Yuess Gardens.

The club will meet the first Tuesday of next month, and as important business is to be gone over, please attend, everybody.

Plants are selling exceptionally well now, such as good cyclamens, azaleas, primroses and pots of daffodils.

R. A. S.

TOPEKA, KAN.—C. E. Hubbard, of 316 Polk street, will build a $1.000 greenhouse at his home.

THE REVIEW does beat all in selling stuff. Every time I advertise in it I get more orders than I can fill.—S. J. GALLOWAY, Eaton, O.

SHAWNEE, OKLA.—A modern, well equipped range of greenhouses, comprising 20,000 square feet of glass, has been erected here by the Brenner Floral Co. The firm conducts both a wholesale and retail business. C. W. Anderson, also of this place, will go into the trucking business, and thus the needs of the community will be supplied in both flowers and vegetables.

NEW ORLEANS.

Horticultural Society.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting Thursday, January 21. A communication from Prof. W. Newell, of the State Crop Pest Commission, was read, warning the horticulturists to look out for a fish-tailed moth, a very destructive insect which has made its appearance lately and is dangerous to plants and flowers. The finance committee presented its report.

An interesting paper on "The Growing of Bulbs in the South" was read by R. Eichling. His long experience on the subject made valuable the cultural directions he gave on the different bulbs best adapted to the south as a commercial crop, the two important points being the selection of the kinds and the treatment most suitable to our climate.

Various Notes.

J. A. Newsham had some fine spikes of Oncidium splendidum and Cattleya Trianæ at the club meeting. On visiting his place a few days ago, we saw the finest collection of orchids to be found in the south. Having standing orders with different collectors, Mr. Newsham is constantly increasing his stock by new importations from different places, some of which he visited a few months ago. Mr. Newsham says that his next trip will extend as far as South America. The Oncidium splendidum, which he has in bloom in quantity, have been blooming two months since they were received. A house of Easter lilies, imported directly from Japan, looks promising.

M. Cook's Sons have a large bench of Hydrangea Otaksa in different stages of growth, some ready to open the flowers.

B. M. Wichers, of Gretna, says he is progressing nicely on his new place, thirty miles from New Orleans. Pending the growing of palms and shade trees, he will grow cucumbers, melons and other vegetables well adapted to the situation.

Abele Bros. report a heavy business in fruit trees and roses.

The newly erected greenhouses at the City park can be seen now to the best advantage. The collection of crotons is gorgeous; the begonias and ferns are perfect. The head gardener, F. Brocker, is busy with annuals grown in the frames outside.

The demand for euphorbia bracts is generally reported as having been large this year. Why could we not grow them outside, with a slight protection, and ship them north? M. M. L.

J. M. Kessler says that Topeka has had its share of dull spell following the holidays. If it were not for other people dying during such spells it would certainly be the florist's turn. The legislature and new administration usually liven up social affairs. Two weeks ago he decorated the Auditorium and capitol for the governor's inaugural. This week he is decorating the governor's mansion for a large reception and he has two or three like events booked for the near future.

Last week he had two florist visitors, Mrs. Raymond Miller, of Abilene, Kan., and C. H. Frey, of Lincoln, Neb. Mr. Frey is recognized as one of the most successful florists west of the Mississippi.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

With continued cloudy weather, there is not an overabundance of stock. Business is improving. Society has been busy and the demand for funeral work still keeps up.

Various Notes.

Z. D. Blackistone had the Bonaparte dinner to the President at Rauscher's. The banquet hall was banked with palms, and 100 strings of asparagus were used for a lattice effect in the doorway. Richmond roses and white lilac were used on the table.

Gude Bros. Co. did the dinner given by Representative Olcott, of New York, to the Vice-President-elect, Mr. Sherman. There were forty covers. Among the decorations were garlands of French silk pink illuminated roses; a silver bowl in the center, running over with roses, and a tall silver candelabrum coming up from the bowl, with garlands of roses. Small glass French baskets, filled with roses, studded the table. Huge Alice blue ribbon bows were used at each end. The drawing room was done in Beauties. Palms and ferns were banked throughout the house.

The dinner for General Humphrey was done by Marche & Co., using 800 pink carnations and 1,200 violets. The general scheme throughout the house was pink and green. This firm also had a blanket for an out-of-town funeral. It was composed of 400 Brides and 300 valley, and was very effective.

George Cooke used that peculiar yellow-pink sweet pea, grown by Theo. Dietrich, for the luncheon at Senator Dupont's on Sunday. The entire table was in the Dresden effect.

Small & Sons are showing a fine lot of Keiserskroon and Yellow Prince tulips in their window.

The Agricultural Department has been experimenting with carnations in solid beds, and claims to have proved this a decided success.

J. A. Magruder, of the United States Propagating Gardens, has taken out a patent for a waterproof form, shaped and colored like a calyx, for split carnations. It does away with the cramped appearance of the ordinary mended calyx. It fits inside the split place, fills up and gives the flower a larger appearance.

Gude Bros. Co. has a brand new automobile delivery wagon. If this proves a success, several more will be added to their delivery department.

The coming inauguration will make a lot of work for the florists. The plans for the court of honor and ball, with the street decorations at the capital, will be the most elaborate ever seen here.

Geo. C. Shaffer has just put in a mirror, measuring 9x12 feet, at the back of his counter, with cut glass electric light brackets. He has also added two rooms at the rear of his store. These are fitted up to display jardinieres and vases, giving up the entire floor space in the front to plants and cut stuff. O. O.

State Horticultural Society.

The fortieth annual convention of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society was held here January 19, 20 and 21. The attendance was large, and that it was made up of those interested was shown by the strict attention that was paid to the matters in hand throughout the entire session.

The display of flowers and fruits exceeded anything ever before shown at the society's winter session. Exhibits of flowers were made by Henderson, of Omaha; Simanton & Pence, of Falls City; Green, of Fremont, and Dole, of Beatrice. The quality all through was superb and the honors were quite evenly divided.

Other matters of particular interest to the greenhouse men were the paper on "Cultivation and Care of Cannas," by Mr. Simanton, and the election of C. H. Green as president of the society and Ed. Williams as second vice-president.

Mr. Williams served as judge of the floral display, and accomplished the rare feat of pleasing everybody.

BULBS FOR EASTER.

When should I bring my hyacinths and tulips from the cellar to bloom for Easter? They are now up half an inch. L. C.

Keep your tulips and hyacinths in a cold cellar or pit until three weeks or a month before Easter. A temperature of 50 degrees at night will bring them into flower within that period. Watch the cultural calendar in the REVIEW for frequent references to these and other Easter plants. C. W.

WINTER BLOOMING PLANTS.

I would like to know when cinerarias, primroses and verbenas will bloom from seed sown October 2, and kept in a greenhouse with a temperature of 60 degrees during the day and 45 degrees during the night. I have just transferred 1,000 plants into 3-inch pots. How should I treat them to have them bloom quick? I live in West Virginia. G. C. H.

October is late to sow any of the seeds named. Even in your latitude cinerarias and primulas will amount to but little, I am afraid. The best you can now do is to allow them to flower in comparatively small pots. The natural blooming time for Chinese primroses is December and January, cinerarias following February and March. It will not pay to carry along the verbenas. It would be far better to sow seeds in February. These will give you splendid plants to set out in early May.

For another year I would advise you to sow the primulas in March and thus secure good flowering plants for Christmas sales. Cinerarias do better sown after torrid heat is past. Get them in from the middle to the end of August, using a coldframe or bench in a north house for the seed flats. Verbenas are of little value for winter flowering, as there are so many other plants of superior merits for this purpose. Cinerarias want a cool house without sunshine, 40 to 45 degrees at night in winter. Primulas must be broken from direct sunlight, but will do well 5 degrees warmer than the cinerarias. C. W.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-seventh annual convention, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22 to 24. 1909.

THE largest part of the government seed contract, for the stock for the distribution of 1910, was let last week to the Braslan Seed Growers' Co., San Jose, Cal.

THE 16-page order sheets, listing every variety in the general catalogue, are quite the thing this year; they are included in a dozen or more of the leading books.

ERNEST BITTERHOFF, of August Bitterhoff & Son, Berlin, Germany, exporters of valley pips, is making a tour of the United States. McHutchison & Co. are the American agents.

THE trade all will be interested in the article in this issue on Amami O-Shima, its cycas and its lily crops, by Alfred Unger, of the old firm of Louis Boehmer, Yokohama.

AT 117 Fifth avenue, Chicago, the sign of the W. W. Barnard Co. has replaced that of the National Seed Co. The store has been brightened up, restocked and made ready for spring business.

THE A. L. Randall Co., wholesale florists at 19 Randolph street, Chicago, has become Cook county general agent for the poultry supplies of the Geo. H. Lee Co., Omaha, H. S. Seely being in charge, and rumor has it that seeds are to be added.

THE Northrup, King & Co. catalogue for 1909 is the twenty-fifth annual edition. It is a big book in every way, and with a wholly distinct cover representing the seed buyer in a canoe shooting rapids in which the rocks which beset the seed planter show up prominently. The pages are larger than those of any other general seed catalogue that has reached the REVIEW this year.

PURE CULTURE SPAWN.

F. A. Waugh, of the Massachusetts Experiment Station, compared pure-culture spawn with English and French spawn in mushroom culture during two years under ordinary conditions and found that pure-culture spawn is, as a rule, much better than either English or French spawn, but that there are important points of difference between the commercial pure-culture varieties. These differences consist in color, flavor, form, and, above all else, in productivity. In all of the experiments pure cultures gave larger yields than either the English or French spawn.

"It seems to be one of the chief advantages of the new method of growing mushroom spawn from pure culture that it nearly always gives fresher and more vigorous spawn. The product is nearly always more uniform and of higher quality; but, while this advantage is important, it is not so great as the one already mentioned."

FINDLAY, O.—E. J. Foster & Son have abandoned their downtown store. Miss Emma Barnd, who has been in charge, will occupy a position at the greenhouses on South Cory street.

SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of the executive committee of the American Seed Trade Association was held at the Hotel Astor, New York, January 22, with the following in attendance: President Watson S. Woodruff, Vice-President M. H. Duryea, Secretary C. E. Kendel, Charles Dickinson, Geo. S. Green, Howard M. Earl and S. F. Willard, members of the committee, and A. L. Don and W. Atlee Burpee by invitation.

It was decided to hold the convention June 22 to 24 at Niagara Falls, and the Clifton House, on the Canadian side, was chosen the headquarters.

BULB CASE VERDICT.

A case raising a number of points of considerable interest to those engaged in bulbs and kindred lines was decided January 19 in the federal circuit court at Milwaukee, presided over by Judge J. V. Quarles.

The suit was brought by Ralph M. Ward & Co., the New York importers, against Currie Bros. Co., of Milwaukee. The dispute revolved around a large consignment of Japanese lily bulbs ordered from Ward & Co. by Currie Bros. Co., which the latter claimed reached Milwaukee too late, and further, did not conform to the quality called for by the contract of sale. It was on these grounds that Currie Bros. Co. based its refusal to pay for the bulbs, although it accepted and used a part of them. When suit was brought by Ward & Co., Currie Bros. Co. set up the defense that it had entered

New Rose White Killarney

GROWN BY

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown=on=Hudson, N.Y.

NEW ROSE
White Killarney

We Know You Will Want to Buy White Killarney

Every live, progressive, up-to-date grower who has seen it is buying it; but when you buy White Killarney, be sure you get the right White Killarney [the Waban variety]. When you buy from us, you get the variety that has been exhibited and certificated, and the one that has attracted such favorable attention. There have been several white sports of Killarney, which are very much inferior to the White Killarney that we have been offering and exhibiting—the one that has made the reputation for White Killarney. The superiority of our sport is admitted even by those who have the other sports.

It may seem strange, but the bud of White Killarney is much larger and fuller than the bud of the pink Killarney.

If you are in the vicinity of New York, we should be glad to have you call and see White Killarney growing at our Scarborough range, and you will say at a glance—as everyone has who has seen it growing—that it is by far the best white rose that has ever been placed on the market.

It is not only a good winter-flowering rose, but is good the entire year, for which reason it will supersede Bride and Kaiserin, neither of which covers the entire season. In addition to this, it is a splendid shipper. We have shipped flowers as far as Dallas, Tex., and they have reached destination in perfect order. In confirmation of this statement, we take pleasure in reproducing a letter just received from Mr. Willis N. Rudd, Secretary of the Society of American Florists, dated January 18, in which he writes as follows:

DEAR MR. PIERSON:—

I cannot refrain from writing you and expressing my admiration for the White Killarney as shown at Chicago on Thursday. It is an exquisitely beautiful thing, and attracted much attention I took half the blooms home with me, and they were finer on Saturday than they were at the show. The record is that these blooms were shipped from Tarrytown, staged and exhibited during the afternoon. They were then carelessly wrapped up in a box, and remained in that box until 1 o'clock Friday morning, at which time I reached home; improved in quality up to Saturday, and were in fairly presentable condition on Sunday.

In addition to being the most beautiful white rose of its class which I have seen, this demonstrates its splendid keeping and shipping qualities.

W. N. RUDD.

We were awarded Silver Cup, National Flower Show, Chicago

We have a fine stock of White Killarney, but, owing to the large number of orders that are constantly being booked, if you want early delivery, it will be wise to place your order before long. Better do it now, while you think of it. You will regret it if you do not buy it this season in quantity, and you will not regret it if you do. It is the best new rose that has been introduced in years.

BULB CASE VERDICT.

into a subsequent distinct agreement with the plaintiff's traveling salesman to return all the lily bulbs which it did not sell, and furthermore set up a counterclaim for $3,000 damages, due to late deliveries and inferior quality of bulbs. The main reliance was on the alleged contract with the salesman of the plaintiff. In this defense the court held that it had failed in two respects: Firstly, in not showing that the sales agent of the plaintiff had either the express or apparent authority from his principal to make such agreement, and, secondly, if such authority existed there was no memorandum of it in writing sufficient to suffice for the purpose of this case. The court in consequence directed a verdict for the plaintiff in accordance with the demands of the complaint. The sum involved was some $4,000.

KILLING UNDERGROUND PESTS.

In England the gardeners have had so much trouble with the nematodes called eelworms, wireworms, grubs, etc., that much time has been spent by experts in seeking a remedy for the trouble, and, according to all reports, they have been quite successful. Two different firms now advertise insecticides for use in the soil. One is called "Vaporite" and the other "Killogrub." They are much alike in appearance and effect. They

VICK QUALITY ASTERS

THE STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE

Our Best Novelty

VICK'S MIKADO PINK, Premier of Shell pink Asters. For years we have seen the necessity of a good, mid-season Comet type shell pink Aster. Now we have it, and it's a beauty. Every wholesale florist who has seen it, praises it extravagantly. Just the thing to grow between the extra early and the late flowering varieties. Habit similar to non-lateral branchings. Stems, straight, long and strong. Plant, vigorous; flowers, very large and yet very dainty. Petals, long and narrow and gracefully reflexed. Crown completely covered. Color, a charming sea shell pink. Sold this year by packet only. Each, 25c.

VICK'S MIKADO WHITE AND ROSE

Every grower ought to have both of these colors to go with Vick's Mikado Pink. Although we have catalogued these two colors before, we have never heretofore had enough stock to fill orders. We have a splendid stock this year, and prices are lower than ever before.

1-32 oz., 35c; 1-16 oz., 50c; ⅛ oz., 85c; ¼ oz., $1.50; ½ oz., $2.75; 1 oz., $5.00.

Two More New Asters

VICK'S IMPERIAL LAVENDER

Vick's Imperials, Daybreak and Purity, are known wherever good Asters are grown. Vick's Imperial Lavender possesses all of the splendid qualities of Daybreak. Color, a pure lavender. Will sell well in any market.

1-64 oz., 40c; 1-32 oz., 60c; 1-16 oz., $1.00; ⅛ oz., $1.50; ¼ oz., $2.50; ½ oz., $4.50; 1 oz., $8.00.

VICK'S NON-LATERAL BRANCHING

For several years we have been working to produce a branching plant with fewer, stronger, longer stems, without being sapped by side buds and shoots. We now have a strain in which the whole strength of the plant goes into from nine to fifteen stems, all of which produce exhibition flowers. Two colors only, white and rose.

1-32 oz., 25c; 1-16 oz., 40c; ⅛ oz., 60c; ¼ oz., $1.00; ½ oz., $1.75; 1 oz., $3.00.

Other Recent Vick Introductions

VICK'S EARLY BRANCHING

Similar to the well-known Standard Late Branching. Season, about a week or ten days earlier Two colors, white and rose.

1-16 oz., 25c; ⅛ oz., 40c; ¼ oz., 70c; ½ oz., $1.30; 1 oz., $2.50.

VICK'S ROYAL PURPLE

Flowers, similar to Branching. Stems start close to the ground. Very few lateral stems. Season, medium early. Goes well with Early Branching.

1-16 oz., 25c; ⅛ oz., 40c; ¼ oz., 70c; ½ oz., $1.30; 1 oz., $2.50.

VICK'S UPRIGHT WHITE

There is a heavy demand for this variety. Flowers similar to Branching, but stems grow directly upwards, leaving more room for cultivation. Splendid shipper. Last year we could not furnish seed enough.

1-16 oz., 30c; ⅛ oz., 50c; ¼ oz., 75c; ½ oz., $1.25; 1 oz., $2.00.

VICK'S CARDINAL

For brilliancy of color and profusion of bloom, this Aster surpasses all others. Especially adapted for bedding, where it makes as gorgeous a showing as Scarlet Salvia. Each plant resembles a huge bouquet.

1-32 oz., 25c; 1-16 oz., 40c; ⅛ oz., 60c; ¼ oz., $1.00; ½ oz., $1.75; 1 oz., $3.00.

are a gray powder which is scattered over the soil and then spaded in deeply, getting the powder well down below the surface of the soil. The action of the moisture in the soil upon the powder causes it to throw off a gas, or vapor, which thoroughly penetrates the soil, killing all insects, worms, grubs, etc., and all hibernating pests, without the slightest injury to the plants.

Entomologists in the United States are looking into the merits of these chemicals and, if they prove to be as efficient as claimed by the originators, there will no doubt be a market for much of those products on this side, as many growers are troubled by the same underground pests. The English method is not expensive and the sale of the products is said to have reached enormous proportions. H. G.

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $13,832.

THE HOLLAND BULB DISTRICT.

The trade visitor can in no way see more of the bulb-growing industry of Holland, if his time is limited, than by an automobile trip from Leiden to Haarlem, the intervening country representing the center of the industry, which may now be said to reach as far north as the Dutch Sea islands, and as far south as the province of Zealand. Leaving Leiden, the route lies through Rijnsburg, a district in which tulips are chiefly cultivated; thence to Noordwijk, where not only tulips, but narcissi and hyacinths, are grown in great numbers. At Sessenheim a brief halt may be made to inspect the several nurseries growing stock for export. Afterwards the journey lies through Lisse, a center for hyacinth culture, and to Hillegom, which has developed from a small village into quite a town solely by reason of the bulb culture. From Hillegom the way leads through Heemstede to Overveen, a district in which bulbs were cultivated almost from the first, and thence to Haarlem, which is approached through what are known as the Haarlem woods or park. An international exhibition of flowering bulbs is to be held in these woods in 1910.

It is a pleasant trip, for Dutch roads are good and the ground is almost as level as a floor. Much of the land in the district traversed lies below sea level. The lighter, more sandy localities are selected for hyacinth culture, and the more loamy soils for tulips and narcissi.

Forcing Gladiolus

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladioli are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose:

America. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color. $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000.

Augusta. The florists' best white Gladiolus. First size bulbs, 1¾ inches and up. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosy crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

AMAMI O-SHIMA.

Home of the Cycas.

An island interesting to the trade is Amami O-Shima, one which for twenty years has played a large part in the florists' and seed business, even though it might not be known to most of the gardeners. The island lies about on the twenty-eighth parallel and belongs to the Liu-kiu islands, south of the main Japanese islands, in a chain of islands that leads down to Formosa. Most of these islands originated from volcanoes and are covered with high mountains, which on the isle of Tokuno Shima reach a height of 6,000 feet. On account of lying in the tropical and moderate zones, these islands have a very interesting flora. Palms, bananas, pandanus, ferns, evergreen trees, climbing plants and mosses also grow on the islands. Everything is at its best during the rainy season.

The most interesting plant to the gardeners is the Cycas revoluta, which grows all over, on the sides of mountains, in the valleys, etc., more especially in the fields as fences, and without a doubt this was the home of the Cycas revoluta and it grew wild there once upon a time. The seeds as well as the trunks form a nourishment for the inhabitants, but through civilization it got to be a money-making proposition. When the style came up in Germany to use the cycas leaves on coffins for decorating purposes, the enterprising Albert Wagner, of Leipsic-Gohlis, sometimes known as Cycas Wagner, who visited the island twenty-two or twenty-three years ago, imported

Gladiolus America

A few points of merit

COLOR: A beautiful, soft, flesh pink, very light and much like Enchantress Carnation, except slightly tinged with lavender, which gives it the delicate coloring of the most beautiful Lælias. Words fail to do justice in describing this grand and glorious color; it must be seen to be appreciated. PURPOSES: For florists' use, its color makes it everything to be desired; delicate, attractive and absolutely new; no other color in Gladiolus like it or one-half so beautiful. It has created a sensation in the cut flower markets, selling for more than five times the price of other varieties.

America. The best commercial pink in existence. 1st size bulbs, $4 00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000; $165.00 per 5000.

Blue Jay (Baron Hulot). Finest blue Gladiolus yet seen. It is a rich, deep color of indigo shade. The only real blue Gladiolus on the market. $10 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis. Extra fine red variety. 1½ to 2½ in., $1.50 per 100; $12 per 1000; $50.50 per 5000.

Lilium Philippinense

Have you a stock of this fine lily for next season's requirements? It has been forced in 90 days and, with proper care, the bulb is in even better condition for a second forcing. In the garden it will give you bloom in July and August, when choice flowers are at a premium. This lily bulb is not exhausted by one season's bloom, but, like the gladiolus bulb, can be of use year after year.

The bulbs we offer have been grown in America one summer and are not to be compared with freshly imported stock, which is usually very small and shriveled. We prepay transportation charges to any part of the United States.

the cycas plant to Europe. The firm of J. C. Schmidt, in Erfurt, who showed a great interest in this article and who obtained it from Louis Boehmer, Yokohama, more than nineteen years ago, had me visit Japan as representative of Louis Boehmer, for the special purpose of interesting myself in the cycas plants. Therefore, in the winter of 1889 I visited this island for the first time, since which time I have paid it three more visits, each time sending large quantities of cycas plants to Schmidt at Erfurt.

How the Market Was Stocked.

Even though the price of this article was reduced on account of the large shipments to Germany, the prices of those raised in greenhouses were still too high to give them to the general public. On account of this fact they got the idea of cutting off the leaves at O-Shima, drying and pressing them and sending them to Germany, where they were again colored, so as to resemble the original. They had an enormous sale in Germany as well as other countries, being shipped from German factories. The height of the sale of the plants was reached when the German government put a duty of 250 marks on 100 kilograms (equal to $50 on 220 pounds). It was, therefore, of importance that the people interested in that industry should get as many of the cycas leaves in as possible before the tariff was levied and it developed a marvelous activity on the otherwise quiet island. A few people accumulated small fortunes through this industry.

On account of the European importers overbidding each other, the Japanese shippers took advantage of the situation and prices went up about 300 per cent. The natural consequence was that millions of cycas leaves got through before the tariff act took effect, so that the want in Germany was supplied for several years. The inhabitants of Amami O-Shima, who thought that this would keep up, found that there was suddenly an end to it. The big presses and sheds which were built for that purpose are idle, have been for several years, and will remain so until the trade on this article picks up again.

it is that of growing lily bulbs, Lilium longiflorum, the Japanese "Teppo Yuri." The shipping of these bulbs, which are cultivated in greenhouses in Europe as well as America, in very large quantities, and are used by millions in America, especially during the Easter season, has from year to year gained prominence and developed a big industry in Japan, as well as in Bermuda, also the Isles of Azores. The shipments from Japan alone are from 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 of these bulbs yearly, which are raised near Yokohama and in the Province of Saitama.

Lycoris Squamigera

or Amaryllis Hallii

DESCRIPTION

LYCORIS SQUAMIGERA produces, in early spring, attractive green foliage which grows until July, when it ripens off and disappears, and one not familiar with its habits would think the bulb had died, but about a month later, as if by magic, the flower stalks spring from the ground to a height of two or three feet, developing an umbel of large and beautiful lily-shaped flowers, 3 to 4 inches across and from 8 to 12 in number, of a delicate lilac-pink shaded with clear blue. Very useful for the hardy border or among shrubbery.

Catalog and Advertising Cuts by all Processes

One of our customers recently wrote: "You give me the kind of service I have wanted for years. I never had better plates, and never before had them delivered on time every time."

They are shipped under three classes, namely: Lilium longiflorum eximium, L. longiflorum multiflorum, and L. longiflorum giganteum.

Through overculture, and on account of carelessness, a disease sprung up among the first two types, which caused the purchasers much annoyance, time and money. Almost fifty per cent of the bulbs went to loss through this disease, as they could not bring the plants to bloom, and we exporters naturally received lots of complaints. For years we tried to overcome this and planted in different places, but as the disease lay in the bulbs, it was of no avail until finally the government, as well as the people, came to the conclusion to gather the bulbs in their original home, where they grew wild on the hills, and plant them in neighboring lands on good soil. I can assure you that the results were very satisfactory. During the last year the first trial boxes were sent to America, about 300 to 400, and Europe, and the results which the cultivators obtained were so good that today there is a great demand for them. To be sure of the quality and to convince myself as to the amount that really were raised there, I went to the Island of Amami O-Shima, after an absence of fourteen years.

I want to state in conclusion that on account of the Island of Amami O-Shima being 800 miles south of Yokohama, the bulbs ripen there about a month sooner and that the type that is known in the market as Lilium longiflorum Formosum is also a month early, whereby the anxiety of getting the bulbs in blossom by Easter is overcome. The gardeners have profited wonderfully by this and we hope that the culture of this article will assume greater proportions.

ALFRED UNGER.

COLEUS THYRSOIDEUS.

Coleus thyrsoideus supplies a color among indoor winter-flowering plants that is far from being common. The plants are voracious feeders, and unless grown in small pots they are inclined to grow rather coarse. Confined to 4½-inch pots, and grown in a cool greenhouse until the approach of winter, the resulting plants are dwarf and stocky. Weak liquid manure will prove beneficial if applied previous to flowering. As the majority of spring-blooming plants produce light-colored flowers, we can, by the grouping of this coleus, add brightness and variety, features which at this season are doubly welcome, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business was quiet last week, as compared with the previous week. There is little doing in the social line, and we could stand a little more funeral work.

Stock on the market is good. Roses, which have been scarce lately, are coming in more plentifully, with the outlook for a still better crop in a week or two. There is a good supply of carnations arriving several times daily and meeting with a fairly good demand.

Bulbous stock is coming in larger quantities as the season advances. So far we have tulips, jonquils, Romans and narcissi.

Various Notes.

While in Cincinnati recently, William Dilger had a mishap which will interfere with his getting about for some time. He fell and injured his knee in such a way that he has been compelled to keep it in a plaster cast.

John Bregger, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, has been laid up for some time with the grippe.

On the evening of February 1, D. S. Kimball will favor the club members with a paper entitled "Scales and Insects Affecting Trees and Shrubs."

H. S.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

The first part of the month was cold, so that trade suffered. The last few days have been wet and sloppy, so that shoppers were not out. Added to this must be noted the entire absence of nearly all society functions, and we have some reasons for light trade. However, the demand has kept ahead of the supply, so that prices have been well main-

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the State Florists' Association was held in the new hall, 510 Snelling avenue, January 19. The attendance was fairly good. The entertainment committee reported arrangements for a dance and card party to be given in U. C. T. hall February 15. A grand, good time is assured to all and every one in the trade is expected to be present.

The premium list for the state fair was adopted as reported and the committee instructed to present it to the board of managers with the request that they accept it and also appoint a special superintendent for the floricultural division.

O. J. Olson read an interesting paper on "The Retailers' Profit in Flowers," which was discussed and commended by several.

As visitors we had Arnold Ringier and Alex Henderson, salesmen for Chicago seed houses, and Mr. Jansen, of Keur & Sons, Hillegom, Holland.

The executive committee was asked to report at the next meeting on the advisability of holding a flower show in the Twin Cities next fall.

The judges awarded prizes as follows: Certificates of merit to Carl Haugen, for double cyclamen scoring 85 points; to Aug. Swanson, for Lilac Marie Legray scoring 80 points; to Louis Boeglin, for Primula Sinensis scoring 85 points; to E. Nagel & Son, on Winsor carnations scoring 85 points. Honorable mention to Louis Boeglin, on Primula Kewensis scoring 75 points; to E. Nagel & Son, on lily of the valley scoring 75 points.

PACIFIC COAST.

Echo, Ore.—Frank Skinner has purchased five acres of land just across the river from Echo and will build an up-to-date range of greenhouses.

Portland, Ore.—Fire caused by an overheated furnace recently damaged the hothouse of Milton W. Smith at 826 Hood street to the extent of $100. A large number of plants were killed by the extreme heat.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Another week of continual raining, and everyone is beginning to wonder when it will stop. We have not had a glimpse of the sun for two weeks in this neighborhood, and yet it is not cold. The lowest temperature during the month has been 50 degrees. We should have an avalanche of flowers if we were treated to a little of old Sol's rays in addition to the excessive, warm rains we have had, but it is just as well as it is, for business is so slow at present that there would be absolutely no chance to use additional stock.

There is rather a scarcity of fancy roses, but the list of deficiencies ends here, for with everything else we are most abundantly supplied. Never have violets been more plentiful, or of finer quality or lower figure than at present. From $2 to $4 per hundred bunches gives a good idea of their value. Carnations cost the stores from $2 to $3 per hundred.

Valley and Roman hyacinths move slowly; so, also, does L. longiflorum. Daffodils of the earlier varieties sell well. They wholesale at from $3 to $4 per hundred, but will be cheaper in a few days. Freesias have made their appearance and sell well.

Outside mums are almost at the end of their season, although some good late whites are being brought into town. Inside mums, with the exception of a few beds of Appleton, are down and out for the season. Wild ferns of various kinds have made their appearance and help out wonderfully, as the overworked supply of maidenhair and Asparagus plumosus was showing the effects of a hard winter.

Various Notes.

John McLaren, of Golden Gate Park, has issued a neat volume, entitled "Gardening in California," which has received much favorable comment in the book reviews.

George S. May has returned from a tour of the southern counties.

THE VEGETABLE FORCER.

"Whoever takes up vegetable forcing," said William Turner, of Oceanic, N. J., in an address he made at Boston, "must have love for the work and should watch the developments of the different crops, knowing when to feed and when not to. The first thing to be considered along those lines—and all important—is the house or houses best adapted for the work, that is for producing vegetables through the winter months. Twenty or twenty-five years ago the average house at our disposal was anywhere from ten to twenty feet in width, in fact anything wider was looked upon with disfavor. But experience has taught us in recent years that a house anywhere from twenty-five to fifty feet in width is to be highly recommended, according to the demands. Good results may be had whether the house runs north and south or east and west. My preference would be east and west, as one gets more benefit from the sun during the short days. One thing should be borne in mind; that is, for best results build as light a house as possible, so that there will be no shade to speak of in the house. In regard to heating, either steam or hot water is successful, although hot water is to be preferred. Lettuce, cauliflower, and radishes may be grown successfully in the same house, while cucumbers, tomatoes, beans, etc., require a warmer atmosphere.

"Vegetables are not particular as to soil. In fact, here is a difficult problem in explaining the nature of soils, the amount of fertilizer to give best results, etc. Experience has taught me that some soils will take much more food than others. I claim there can be no hard and fast lines laid down in regard to how much fertilizer a certain crop should receive for the best results. My theory has always been that each grower in different localities and with different soils, by studying the condition of his growing crops is the best judge as to how much food will be of benefit."

Stokes' Bonny Best Early Tomato

Is a wonder. It is MAKING GOOD wherever grown.

If you grow tomatoes for early market you should use it.
If you grow tomato plants as a side line (there's money in it), it will make you a reputation.
It is very early.
It is a fine bright scarlet.
It is just the right size and shape.
It is the finest all-around tomato ever introduced.
It holds its size clear to the end of the season better than any tomato I have ever seen.

PEPPERS UNDER GLASS.

Their Increasing Usefulness.

Although it is not generally known, sweet peppers can be successfully grown in greenhouses and make a fairly profitable crop.

Green peppers are now considered one of the staple vegetable crops, much as cucumbers, tomatoes and melons are, and are used at all times of the year when obtainable. They were formerly used only in pickling time, in the fall, and little use was made of them except for pickling, etc., but now they are used in a great many ways in hotels, clubs and some of the wealthier private houses.

Good hothouse peppers sell for 30 cents to 50 cents per dozen in winter. They are rather difficult to grow in the shortest days, but later are a comparatively easy crop. It takes over three months to get a crop to bearing from the time seed is planted, but they do not need to occupy the house for more than about six weeks from the time they are benched until they are bearing.

Their Culture.

The seed should be planted in flats and transplanted as soon as well up, placing them about two and one-half inches apart in other flats or on a bench. After they get to be about three or four inches tall they should be potted into 4-inch pots and kept there until ready to plant out. When young the plants require good care and should not be overwatered. They should have a fairly good soil, new, clean and well drained. When placed in the benches they should be planted about fourteen inches apart in the rows. An ordinary rose or carnation bench, about four feet wide, will take two rows nicely, placing them about ten inches from the edges of the bench. A 6-foot bench will take three rows. They are not very particular about soil. A good, ordinary greenhouse soil will grow them well.

There are few insects that attack peppers. They like a night temperature of about 60 to 63 degrees, and about 15 degrees higher on bright days. A little ventilation should be given each day when the thermometer gets up around 70 degrees. The longer the ventilation is kept on the better, if the temperature is right and no draughts wave the foliage.

Ruby King and Bull Nose are about as good as any for inside use. H. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

William A. Peterson was re-elected, January 5, a director of the State Bank of Chicago.

If seeds of trees have been sown in the fall and no protection in the shape of manure or leaves has yet been given them, no more time should be lost in putting some such covering over the ground.

It is not wise to prune trees or shrubs while the wood is frozen, but on mild days this work should be pushed ahead. Grape vines should be trimmed now, rather than wait until spring, when bleeding is probable.

The wild raspberry is often despised, whereas it should not be, because when planted in almost any kind of soil or situation it thrives admirably, and flowers profusely for the greater part of the summer.

A. Marriott, manager of the Saskatoon Nursery Co., Saskatoon, Canada, has resigned his position with that firm and will move to British Columbia to commence business on his own account. He has been with the firm since it commenced business two years ago. The firm, which has consisted of two partners, Messrs. Ashworth and Holmes, has now been incorporated as a joint stock company.

The Engelmanni spruce, which is found growing on the high mountain slopes from British Columbia to New Mexico, makes a serviceable pulp wood. This spruce has not been considered a valuable lumber tree and has only been used for lack of better material.

Persons intending to plant Kalmia latifolia should not do so in very sunny situations, or before many weeks the plants will have a scorched appearance. This is especially true with regard to plants brought from the woods. Plants that have been grown in nurseries will naturally succeed better in every way.

HARDY SHRUBS FOR CUTTING.

Will you kindly give me the names of hardy shrubs for cut flower use, such as give a good flower which stands the hot summer months pretty well and which lasts quite a while after being cut? I should like to have such varieties that after one is through blooming I can start to cut on the next. I am located in Pennsylvania. H. H.

The following varieties can be safely recommended as being among the best for the purposes required. There are, of course, many others which can be cut, but the subjoined list pretty well covers the ground: Forsythia Fortunei, April; Spiræa Thunbergii, April; Prunus triloba, P. Sinensis rosea pleno, P. Sinensis alba pleno, early May; Syringa vulgaris, all varieties, beginning to end of May; Syringa Chinensis, Persica villosa, end of May to middle of June; Azalea mollis and Pontica, early June; Spiræa prunifolia, late May; Spiræa Van Houttei, late May and early June; Deutzia gracilis and Lemoinei, late May and early June; Philadelphus coronarius and varieties of Lemoinei, June; P. Gordonianus, July; Diervilla Eva Rathke and D. rosea, early July; Hydrangea arborescens grandiflora nivea, July to September; H. paniculata and paniculata grandiflora, August and September; Viburnum Opulus, May; V. plicatum and V. tomentosum, June. WARNS AGAINST MOTH.

After a conference at Albany, between State Commissioner of Agriculture Pearson, William Pitkin, of Rochester, a member of the legislative committee of the Western New York Horticultural Society; J. R. Cornell, of Newburgh, representative of the New York State Fruit Growers' Association; Irving Rouse, of Rochester, member of the executive committee of the Eastern Nurserymen's Association, and George C. Atwood, in charge of nursery inspection work of the department of agriculture, it was decided to send to each nurseryman of the state of New York a letter of warning against the brown tail moth, which has been found in some importations of nursery seedlings recently arrived from France. The caterpillars have been identified by Professor Singerland, of Cornell University; Professor Parrost, of the state experiment station, and State Entomologist Felt. This pest has not become established in New York state and nurserymen and orchardists who know of its depredations in Massachusetts will unite to repress it.

HAMMONTON, N. J.

There does not seem to have been much planting of berries last fall, though the ground was open until the end of December. Usually growers set out their fruit at that time of the year, as it gets a good start. The small planting is probably due to the fact that prices had ruled low. The prospects for next season seem to be good, as trade in general, in all lines, seems to be picking up.

About 3,500,000 quarts of berries left Hammonton last season. This is one of the best paying crops in this section, as the soil is simply ideal for this purpose. Prices of blackberries and raspberries held firm at the start, but as soon as the main crop came in, prices were discouraging. In fact, they had not been so low in many years. On account of the exceedingly dry weather, thousands of quarts burned on the "hills," which caused lighter shipments. There was no rain from the beginning of the season until the end, which is about six weeks.

In the year 1907 the prices held firm all the way through, which encouraged many growers to larger planting. The writer sold his last crates of berries (black) for $1.25 last year, while in the previous year the last crates went at $3.00; that is, to merchants at this station. Strawberries held firm, taken all the way through. H. K.

THE highest known trimmed hedge in the world is at Meikleair, Scotland, and was planted in 1745. The hedge was trimmed last fall, special climbing apparatus being used. The average height is 100 feet and it is entirely English beech. Lord Lansdowne is the owner of this noble estate.

MICE are destructive in many places during deep snow, especially if a strawy mulch has been banked up around the stems of trees and shrubs, which will afford nesting facilities. This should be drawn back a little from the stems. If the lower part of the main stems is smeared with lime wash containing a little coal tar, the mice will leave them alone.

Rooted Carnation Cuttings of Quality

We grow Carnations primarily for cut flowers. We grow them cool, 48° to 50° nights, 56° to 60° day temperature, with air on at all times, except the very coldest nights. Plenty of fresh air and cool houses gives us fewer, but larger, better colored flowers on strong stems. We feed our plants but sparingly. The varieties do not "run out" with us, as you see them on so many places, but are now better than they were the first year or two after their introduction. As our plants are never forced by high temperature or high feeding, our rooted cuttings are naturally stronger, and worth more to the man that grows Carnations for the cut flowers, than cuttings taken from plants grown in a high temperature or unduly forced by high feeding.

We have the following varieties to offer:

	Per 100		Per 100
Enchantress	$2.50	Sarah Hill	$6.00
Rose-pink Enchantress	2.50	Pres. Seelye	6.00

Now that shrubs are receiving their annual pruning, it will pay to systematically collect all the wood suitable for cuttings, of such plants as will root from hard wood (and they are many), and tie them up in neat, compact bundles. After a day's work is about over, the cutting wood secured during the day should be put away in a cool place and covered with soil or sand, but this covering can be delayed if a short time only will elapse before the wood is cut into proper lengths, which work can be done in wet or extremely cold weather. It will be a convenience later if to every bundle a label is attached, with the correct name of the shrub. In every nursery there should be a piece of suitable ground exclusively devoted to the propagation of young stock, in order that such can have the necessary care at a minimum cost.

DENVER.

The Market.

Trade since the holidays has not been so quiet as was expected. A good demand is noticeable in almost all lines. From a social standpoint, last week was a busy one, causing a demand for cut flowers. Funeral work has been extremely good also.

The market affords some pretty good stock, none of which is overplentiful. In Beauties, the medium stemmed ones have been scarce, with the demand good, some of the flowers not being up to the standard. The long stemmed ones sold well, none being left over. Other roses have shortened somewhat, but there are still enough to go around and the quality is fine.

Carnations are now bringing 2 cents and 3 cents, and there does not yet appear to be an oversupply. Smilax and other greens are selling well; so, also, are callas and narcissi. Roman hyacinths seem to be plentiful also. A few daffodils are seen, but are not yet at their best. Sweet peas are coming in, but not in any quantity; consequently they bring good prices. Taking it all in all, trade has been good for the last ten days.

Various Notes.

The funeral of J. C. Davis, who was a victim of the D. & R. G. railroad wreck, was the occasion of considerable floral work, being one of the largest funerals in some time. All of the shops got more or less of the work.

Mrs. Mary Lehman is building a new greenhouse on Colorado boulevard, to cost about $2,500. Concrete and steel are to be used in its construction.

President J. A. Valentine, of the S. A. F., is attending the carnation convention at Indianapolis.

Frank Fraser, of the Alpha Floral Co., is on the sick list. E. S. K.

Pleasant Hill, Mo.—The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co.'s carnation cut is averaging 4,500 a day. On January 25 the number was 6,675. Business at present is fair and prospects for the coming season good.

PLANTS FOR HANGING BASKETS.

Please tell me the best plants for porch hanging baskets in the climate of eastern Kansas. F. M. K.

In flowering plants ivy-leaved geraniums, Abutilon vexillarium, also called A. megapotamicum, with variegated foliage, Abutilon Eclipse and petunias are all good. The trailing blue Lobelia gracilis would not do well in your climate. In foliage plants variegated vinca is always reliable. Asparagus Sprengeri is also good; in slight shade it will keep a darker color. German ivy, cinnamon vine and English ivy may all be used. In well shaded places nothing succeeds better than the various nephrolepis, of which the old Boston fern is still one of the best. Of course, all basket plants require an abundant water supply, and stimulants should be added when the earth is well filled with roots. C. W.

MAKING TILES FOR BENCHES.

One of the important details in making tiles for greenhouse benches is the mixing of the clay to secure the proper porosity, for the drainage does not all depend upon the cracks between the tiles, as many suppose. A party of Cleveland florists who recently visited the plant of the Camp Conduit Co., to see the process of making tiles, were surprised at the process through which the clay is put before it reaches the molding stage.

The clay is hoisted from the clay bank to the clay room, thirty-five feet from the ground. The clay is placed on a moving belt, which carries it to a large dry pan. Here it is ground by two large mullers and passes through a fine screen-plate. It is then conveyed to the top of the clay elevator shaft and is passed over a wire screen, removing all of the large particles which have passed through the dry pan. The screened clay then passes into a large hopper, from which it is delivered into two 8-foot wet pans, which are on the ground floor of the factory. Here it is thoroughly mixed and sufficient water is added for the proper tempering of the clay. It is then delivered onto a roller belt and is taken to the second floor and deposited in a large press feeder. The press feeder is equipped with a clutch and belt from which the press cylinder is filled.

The press upon which the tile benches are made consists of a 44-inch steam cylinder with a clay cylinder at each end. There is a die for each style of piece required. These dies are bolted to the ends of the press. The steam is applied and the plunger in the clay cylinder forces the clay out through the die to a cutting-box. Here the pieces are cut off the proper length, allowing for shrinkage in drying and burning. They are then placed on slatted dry-house cars and are taken to the dry house. They are left there several days, being dried by steam. The tile are then delivered to the kilns, which hold about seventy tons of material each. The lower course in the kiln is placed on what is called a set ring. They are not set over three or four courses high, depending on the kind of material. It requires from four to five days to burn off a kiln, using the best grade of Pittsburg coal. After the kiln is burned off it requires about two days to cool off sufficiently to draw the kiln, when the tile are ready for shipment.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal; closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Immediate delivery.

Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50 00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

ASTER DAWN OF DAY.

For the benefit of my brother florists, I wish to offer a bit of information regarding an early variety of aster which I tried last season, called Dawn of Day. I found the variety catalogued by W. W. Rawson & Co., of Boston, Mass., who claimed for it the earliest record given to any variety of aster—that it would bloom by June 15. So I thought I would see what could be done with it. I sowed my seed by February 15 and flatted the plants as soon as possible. I also potted a few, which proved still earlier in blooming. I had elegant blooms to cut by early May, and, according to my records, I had cut asters to tie up for funeral work by May 9, 1908. At Decoration day, 1908, I had elegant asters to cut, which sold well.

By planting this strain out in a good coldframe as early as the frame can be prepared, one could have a bed full for Decoration day that would bring in many long sought dollars. The blooms are about the size of Boston Market and perfect in shape, with stems eighteen to twenty inches long. With good treatment and plenty of feed, the Dawn of Day aster is a prize which never in my experience has been equaled or even heard of. I shall grow more of them this season, as they come in when it is hard to get blooms of anything except roses and carnations.

The Dawn of Day needs to be grown quite near the glass in its young stage, as its early habit of growth causes it to want to go into a single flower stem if left on too low a bench.

Anyone trying this strain of aster will never regret it. The flowers are pure white and the plants keep blooming a long time. I hope anyone who wants early asters will try this variety.

G. J. Benedict.

NAME OF PLANT.

Please give me the name of the enclosed plant. I find it a remarkably quick grower and its peculiar nutmeg aroma is much appreciated here. Would it answer well for vases and window boxes during the summer? P. E. B.

The name of the plant is Nepeta Glechoma variegata. This makes a useful carpet bedding plant and can also be used for baskets and vases. It succeeds best, however, in the open sun.

BOBBINK & ATKINS, Rutherford, N. J.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The Market.

Business has kept up exceptionally well for the last two weeks, with plenty of funeral work and a good number of weddings and banquets.

The cloudy weather we have been having, with the sudden change to summer temperature, has made stock somewhat soft. Sunday, January 24, was like a spring day and people were out without their overcoats and wraps.

Roses are coming in well, but they have been used up closely from day to day, and at times there were few to be had at any price. Carnations have been more plentiful, but the demand for them cleans them up daily, so there has been no surplus at any time. Quite a few carnations are coming split and the growers lay it to the cloudy and changeable weather we have been having.

Tulips are coming in nicely now and find ready sales. Paper Whites have had a big run and loads of them have been used up, keeping them down so that there has been no glut on the market. Sweet peas and violets are coming well and find ready sales. The demand for callas and Harrisii has been about equal to the supply.

Pot plants have been selling well, especially azaleas, cyclamens and La Reine begonias.

Stock at the different houses is looking fine for Easter, and by the outlook there will be plenty of it.

Various Notes.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. reports business good, and also reports that A. Knopf is getting along nicely out in Los Angeles, where he went some time ago for his health.

E. Metzmaier reports business keeping up excellently.

The Munk Floral Co. is cutting a heavy crop of carnations and also a good crop of roses, which find a ready market.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. reports business rushing, and the new location is all that can be desired. They are cutting fine roses and carnations.

Robert Schenck was a caller in the city last week.

G. Drobisch reports heavy business on funeral work.

Ben Flynn, of Graff Bros., was hurt quite seriously about a week ago by being crushed between two street cars. At last report, he was getting along as well as could be expected. J. M.

GREEN BAY, WIS.—Charles De Clerc is preparing to build an addition to his glass, for carnations and roses.

Greenhouse Heating.

THE REVIEW is glad to have its readers contribute their ideas on heating, for publication in this department.

INSUFFICIENT RADIATION.

I have a greenhouse 23x43 feet and twelve feet to the ridge. It is located in Illinois. I use a Wilks No. 20 hot water boiler. I have one 3-inch flow pipe from the boiler and ten 2-inch returns, all connected with one 2-inch return running into the boiler. The length of the hot water pipes in the greenhouse is forty feet. They are under the benches. The boiler is four feet underground and four feet lower than the returns. My expansion tank is thirteen feet higher than the boiler and three feet higher than the highest hot water point.

In cold weather I can only hold the heat in my greenhouse to about 52 degrees above zero. I want to add one more 2-inch return into the boiler, or I could add two more if needed. Would I thus have better service from my hot water pipes? Where is my trouble? I am a beginner and did my own plumbing, as we had no plumber here.

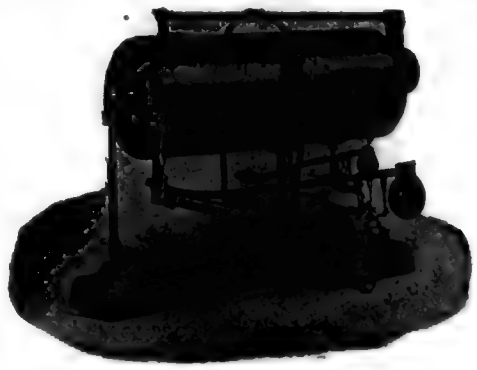
E. T. O.

Your trouble is mainly inadequate radiation. If you had fifteen 2-inch returns you would have about the right amount of radiation for roses. Twelve pipes will answer for carnations and lettuce. Your plan seems to be all right, but you do not say that the expansion tank is connected to the main return close to the boiler. It should be, and should be elevated six to ten feet more than at present. It would be better if the return were the same size as the flow for hot water. L. C. C.

PIPING IN OHIO.

What would be the best method of heating a greenhouse 27x200, running east and west, with walls seven feet high, three feet of glass in the north wall and five feet in the south wall? There will be no benches. I want a temperature of 50 degrees when the outside temperature is 15 degrees below zero. Would it be better to locate the boiler in the center of the house on the north side, or at the northeast corner? I expect to grow chrysanthemums, lettuce, etc., at present, but hope to try carnations later and add more glass. I shall have to do my own night-firing at first.

Would hot water be better than steam? Kindly state both methods, giving the size and number of pipes for each system. Can hot water be used where the boiler is on top of the ground? If not, what is the lowest type of practical boiler for hot water and about what price? Please give details of piping, so I can direct the work myself.



R. A. K.

My preference would be to establish the nucleus of a central heating plant, if I contemplated adding to the plant. While steam will require more attention and a little more night firing, I should prefer to install a steam boiler. You can, with proper traps and circulating pumps, work either steam or hot water boilers above ground. If you decide to use hot water, it would be preferable to locate the heating plant 100 feet from either end and carry risers from the center to the ends, and return by using fourteen 2-inch pipes fed by a single

4-inch pipe carried under the ridge in each direction. If I were to use steam, I should determine the location of a central heating plant for the entire range to be heated from it. CONNECTING EXPANSION TANKS.

In the REVIEW of January 14, A. B. R. asks why it is usually recommended to connect the expansion tank to the main return pipe near the boiler, rather than to the main flow at the high point. The reason given is that when connected to the top pipe, the hottest water is driven into the tank in place of being forced through the system.

Now, according to our experience, no greater fallacy can be set up than this. That some hot water may get into the expansion where the connection is made in the flow pipe, we admit, but that it interferes with the circulation in the least is a mistaken idea. The great advantage in top connection over bottom connection is the fact of its acting as an escape for any steam that may form during hard firing, and if connection in this way is made with ½-inch or ¾-inch pipe, no influence whatever will be noticed in the circulation, except perhaps to promote it.

The writer well remembers some years ago coming into possession of a small range of glass heated by hot water from one boiler, put in by the leading city steam fitter. The expansion tank was well elevated and connected to the main return near the boiler, the main flow pipe being provided with the regulation air cock at the high point. The result was that unless this air cock was opened at short intervals during heavy firing, steam would gather at that point and back the water out through the expansion tank, so that when the fire went below this point there would not be sufficient water in the system to complete circulation. A remedy was sought, and to that end the connection of the tank was changed from the return to the flow pipe, with the result that no better heating system could be desired. No matter how hard we fired, the circulation was smooth and perfect, and we feel safe in saying that there are men today who are having trouble with their heating plant through no other cause than this same theory of connecting the expansion tank to the return pipe near the bottom of the boiler. Those who practice this theory have everything to lose and nothing to gain.

FLOW PIPES TOO LARGE.

We intend to build a house 30x135 feet, here in central Indiana. We wish to have two 3-inch flows, one running under each gutter, using twelve 2-inch returns, six for each flow. Will this maintain a temperature of 45 degrees, with an outside temperature of 10 degrees below zero? We will use hot water heat.

We have two houses heated with overhead flows which are twelve feet above the boiler at the highest point. In the proposed house the flows will only be five feet above the boiler at the highest point. Will you kindly tell us if this

Greenhouse Heating.

THE REVIEW is glad to have its readers contribute their ideas on heating, for publication in this department.

INSUFFICIENT RADIATION.

I have a greenhouse 23x43 feet and twelve feet to the ridge. It is located in Illinois. I use a Wilks No. 20 hot water boiler. I have one 3-inch flow pipe from the boiler and ten 2-inch returns, all connected with one 2-inch return running into the boiler. The length of the hot water pipes in the greenhouse is forty feet. They are under the benches. The boiler is four feet underground and four feet lower than the returns. My expansion tank is thirteen feet higher than the boiler and three feet higher than the highest hot water point.

In cold weather I can only hold the heat in my greenhouse to about 52 degrees above zero. I want to add one more 2-inch return into the boiler, or I could add two more if needed. Would I thus have better service from my hot water pipes? Where is my trouble? I am a beginner and did my own plumbing, as we had no plumber here.

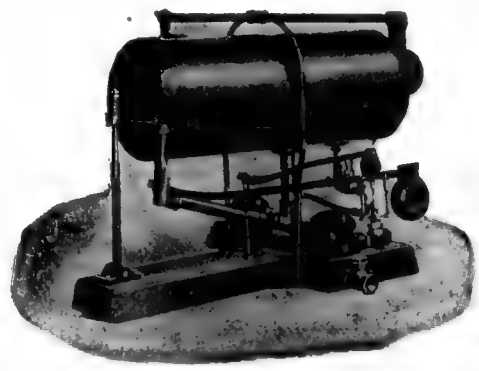
E. T. O.

Your trouble is mainly inadequate radiation. If you had fifteen 2-inch returns you would have about the right amount of radiation for roses. Twelve pipes will answer for carnations and lettuce. Your plan seems to be all right, but you do not say that the expansion tank is connected to the main return close to the boiler. It should be, and should be elevated six to ten feet more than at present. It would be better if the return were the same size as the flow for hot water. L. C. C.

PIPING IN OHIO.

What would be the best method of heating a greenhouse 27x200, running east and west, with walls seven feet high, three feet of glass in the north wall and five feet in the south wall? There will be no benches. I want a temperature of 50 degrees when the outside temperature is 15 degrees below zero. Would it be better to locate the boiler in the center of the house on the north side, or at the northeast corner? I expect to grow chrysanthemums, lettuce, etc., at present, but hope to try carnations later and add more glass. I shall have to do my own night-firing at first.

Would hot water be better than steam? Kindly state both methods, giving the size and number of pipes for each system. Can hot water be used where the boiler is on top of the ground? If not, what is the lowest type of practical boiler for hot water and about what price? Please give details of piping, so I can direct the work myself.



R. A. K.

My preference would be to establish the nucleus of a central heating plant, if I contemplated adding to the plant. While steam will require more attention and a little more night firing, I should prefer to install a steam boiler. You can, with proper traps and circulating pumps, work either steam or hot water boilers above ground. If you decide to use hot water, it would be preferable to locate the heating plant 100 feet from either end and carry risers from the center to the ends, and return by using fourteen 2-inch pipes fed by a single

The piping should be sufficient to maintain a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees during severe weather. The plan, as I understand it, should work satisfactorily, with the pipes carefully graded. The flow pipes are larger than necessary or desirable for quick delivery of hot water to the returns. L. C. C.

MORE DATA WANTED.

I have a boiler eleven feet long and five and one-half feet deep; round shell, with water space all around. It contains 4½-inch flues and 3-inch return flues. Will this boiler heat three houses, 21 feet 8 inches wide and 120 feet long, with side walls six feet high; one house 10x120 feet; one house 28x60, one house 20x36, and an office 20x20? The boiler heats my present place in good shape, but I will rebuild and add new houses next summer. L. O.

You do not give sufficient data regarding your boiler to enable us to answer your question. It is not clear how many houses you wish to heat, but I take it you wish to heat three houses, each 21 feet 8 inches wide by 120 feet long, and in addition one house 10x120 feet, another house 28x60 and a sixth house 20x36, besides an office room 20x20. Please give length of flues, size of flues and number of flues, as well as the type of boiler, and whether you wish to use hot water or steam. A diagram of the plant would be useful. L. C. C.

The Market.

The week ending January 23 can go on record as having been a good one. The cloudy yet mild weather shortened up stock all around, and, with a good demand, everybody seemed to be satisfied. It also gave pink roses and carnations a good color. White and Enchantress carnations were much called for.

Various Notes.

As a result of the good business thus far this season, several growers are talking about adding more glass. The Holton & Hunkel Co. is doing so well growing roses at the Brown Deer plant that they will add two 400-foot houses for tea roses.

The Mueller & Schroeder Co. will put up one 150-foot house for carnations.

Manke Bros. are seriously thinking of increasing their plant. They are showing some Enchantress of fine quality at the convention this week.

Nic Zweifel already has his new house under glass. This will give him 60,000 square feet in all. He is exhibiting some of his seedling carnations, which were favorably commented upon at the recent national flower show at Chicago, at the Indianapolis convention this week.

William Edlefsen, who celebrated his sixty-third birthday January 19, in the best of health and spirits, is in Pittsburg taking a much needed rest.

C. C. Pollworth left for Madison, Wis., Monday, January 25, and intended, if he could get back in time to join the others, to attend the carnation convention.

Current Comment.

W. C. Rockwell, whose illness confined him to bed for two weeks, is once again at his post of duty. Mr. Rockwell reports trade fully up to expectations. His place, as usual, is in fine condition.

G. R. Oliver has added a good sized house to his range and has overhauled his entire place. His general stock is in excellent condition, and he does not find any fault with business conditions.

G. L. Graham's place never looked better. His carnations in general, and the Lawson variety in particular, present a sight well worth seeing. "Until something really good will appear to replace the Lawson," he remarked to the writer, "we cannot afford to discard the bread and butter variety." Mr. Graham is likewise a successful rose grower, and among the varieties dear to his heart is the Wellesley, which he intends growing in larger quantity next season.

A hobo, claiming to be a brother florist from Salamanca, called on Mr. Graham a few days ago, telling a hard-luck story of losing a railroad ticket and requesting a small loan. Like a true Samaritan, Mr. Graham not only advanced the small loan, but invited him also to dinner. From the few comments on the stock made by the pseudo-florist, while going through the greenhouses after the repast, Mr. Graham concluded that the fellow knew no more about flowers than a two-year-old about finance, and accordingly began an investigation. Sure enough, the fellow proved to be a swindler, who has worked several business men in a similar manner. A thirty days' sentence to jail was the reward for his efforts.

Moral: Don't be an easy mark, simply because you can't refuse a brother florist. S.

MILDEW ON ROSES, CARNATIONS, ETC. IT IS SIMPLE AND EASILY APPLIED.

Staatsburgh, N. Y., May 25th, 1908.

MR. HAMMOND. Dear Sir:

Replying to your inquiries regarding Grape Dust, would say that we use it solely on Roses, Carnations and Chrysanthemums. As a Fungicide we have not found anything to equal it; it is simple and easily applied. We close down the ventilators and fill the house with dust blown through the bellows; when the dust has settled down we ventilate again, putting on a little air as required. We have been using your Grape Dust with good results for the last 14 years. Yours truly,

WAYSIDE NOTES.

F. Zobel, of Albany, speaks highly of the new Helianthus Cathcartii, which he saw when visiting Germany last fall. It is free flowering and its bright red color makes it a valuable addition to the herbaceous perennials. Mr. Zobel expects to retire from business after the spring sales are over, having interests on the other side. He has a prospective purchaser for his place.

Fred A. Danker, of Albany, expected to be at the carnation convention as a representative of the Florists' Club. There was some talk of a large delegation going, the club being in a flourishing condition, but the busy work at the capital prevented it.

Fred Goldring, of Slingerlands, N. Y., says Golden Glow is a money-maker and the best early yellow chrysanthemum grown in the east. F. A. Danker had a big run on this variety at Albany and will grow a house for next season. Mr. Goldring has a seedling carnation, Prosperity x Enchantress, that is fine. He expected to have an exhibit at the convention.

T. J. Totten, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., says the demand for the last season was very light, owing to the enforcing of the Hughes law, but he believes that the coming season will bring back prosperity.

Henry Schrade, of Saratoga Springs, had a fine lot of his seedling yellow carnation for exhibition at Indianapolis and expected it would take high honors in its class.

A. J. Binley, of Glens Falls, N. Y., has a choice strain of crimson primrose as the result of years of careful selection. Blooming at Christmas, there is a big sale for it. He has plans for rebuilding part of the place after spring business is over.

H. L. Crandell, of Glens Falls, was busy with a large order for a fiftieth anniversary wedding decoration. As he says, this occurrence being rather rare, the job must be done right.

J. C. Hatcher, of Amsterdam, N. Y., is living the strenuous life, with two stores and two glass establishments, all in different locations, and is planning concentration. George Hatcher was making a beautiful floral wreath at the time of my visit, composed of violets, cattleyas and valley. They do a large country trade.

A. J. Hilton, of Amsterdam, says business was never better. He was packing his grip for the convention. M.

UP-TO-DATE GROWERS SPRAY

TO-BAK-INE LIQUID

And Are Not Troubled with

Thrips on Carnations

TO-BAK-INE Liquid in cans: ¼ pint, 60c; ½ pint, $1.10; 1 pint, $2.00; 1 quart, $3.95; 1 gallon, $15.00. Also put up in 10, 20 and 40-gallon casks with locked faucet, for large growers.

Directions For Use

Mr. A. F. J. BAUR, the well-known Carnation expert, writes: "If I had a carnation house ever so badly infested by Greenfly or Thrips, I would spray with To-Bak-Ine Liquid not stronger than three teaspoonfuls to a gallon of water, and six gallons of this solution would spray a house 25x100 feet thoroughly. I would rather spray with this strength every day for a few days than to make it stronger. Ordinarily one spraying in two days is enough for the first week, and thereafter once or possibly twice each week will be sufficient.

"I am satisfied that spraying is most effective in destroying these pests, as well as the least harmful to the plants or blooms.

"In order to derive the most benefit from the use of To-Bak-Ine, it should be used regularly throughout the season, as a preventive. We begin to spray our carnations with it regularly once each week as soon as they are well-established on the beds in the houses, about September 1 (or sooner if any insects show themselves), and we find that this will keep away Aphis, Thrips, and in addition to intelligent syringing it will keep down Red Spider. The number of blooms usually lost through the ravages of these pests can be reduced to a minimum by the use of To-Bak-Ine. These blooms saved will easily pay for the cost of spraying and have a good balance over. It is surprising how many blooms are discarded by growers, which could have been saved by the use of this preparation; when you figure them at 3c to 5c each during midwinter it runs up into money quickly.

"No grower can afford to be without this preparation and it will take merely a fair trial to convince anyone of its value. When I begin on To-Bak-Ine I find it hard to stop. I feel that I could not possibly say too much in its favor, especially as a remedy for Aphis and Thrips."—Signed, A. F. J. BAUR.

(the strongest made). It has been used successfully for years by vaporizing by heat, but the latest and best method is to

EUREKA SPRINGS, ARK.

This town offers a splendid opening for a florist. There is no greenhouse here, and there is no place where greenhouse products can be had nearer than Springfield, Mo., and Carthage, Mo. A great many flowers are shipped here, but their use would be much greater if it were not for the time and trouble necessary to get them. Also, one of the local provision houses is selling each week $50 worth of lettuce and other greenhouse vegetables grown in Missouri. Eureka Springs has 5,000 population and is a resort town. There are a number of first-class hotels and many thousands of visitors come here each year. James Gurney, of Tower Grove park, St. Louis, who is widely known among the florists, recently told F. S. Hawley that Eureka Springs offers as good an opening for a florist as any place he knows of.

The trouble with sash is they are made wrong. No sash can last that are made like this one, with open mortise joints that let the weather in. End rot is sure to start at once.

Sash that last are constructed with blind mortise joints having double shouldered tenons which are held tightly in place with barbed steel (not wooden) dowel pins. No weather can get in. The joint does not decay. And there are several other points of superiority about them which are mighty interestingly illustrated in that Sash Circular of ours. It certainly points out how to save sash money. Send for it.

RANDOM JOTTINGS.

H. A. Maxiner, of Herkimer, N. Y., was in the Isle of Pines at last report, and intends growing fruit. W. D. Snell bought the business and is well satisfied with the move he made from Mohawk, where he was formerly located. E. Dodge succeeded him there and intends growing for the trade.

J. O. Graham, of Little Falls, N. Y., has rebuilt his range of glass and expects to make further additions after the spring rush.

William Mathews, of Utica, N. Y., has made a big addition to his stock of orchids. Every now and then he strikes something rare. At present it is a beautiful type of Cattleya Trianæ alba and a distinct vanda, with the growth of V. cærulea, but the flower is pure white with the exception of the lip, which is a deep blue.

Frank Baker, of Utica, N. Y., is going more extensively into cut flowers, the demand being greater than the supply.

Thomas Barson, of Johnstown, N. Y., has removed all the houses from his old location and has an up-to-date plant in the best section of the town.

George Main, of Gloversville, N. Y., is interested in Arcadia. It is located near Washington, D. C. He has purchased a lot and intends spending the rest of his days there, just as soon as he finds a purchaser for his place. Robert Main says this is good enough for him, although it is pretty rough at times, especially at this season of the year, when old Boreas gets in some lively licks.

Described by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.

"Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our Greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has all rotted out. We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years, while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve years. We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose. BASSETT & WASHBURN."

CARNATIONS I HAVE KNOWN

AND THEIR ELEVATING INFLUENCE

BY SARAH A. HILL

BROTHER Toastmaster and Dear Friends:—I have taken my pen in hand to write you a few lines because I can express what I have in mind much better than in attempting an after-dinner speech, for, unlike the majority of my sex, I happen not to be eloquent of tongue.

I recognize many faces present as those of old and tried friends, but if I could for a moment see your signatures I should know many more of you intimately, for the written name at once brings up a picture of your letters, and I can say without boasting that few women, the country over, have as many delightful gentleman correspondents as yours truly.

Now that the machine has taken the place of the steel pen, I am seldom at a loss to arrive at the meaning of my correspondents, but there have been times in the past when I hardly knew whether I was deciphering an ardent declaration of admiration, or only a very warm cancellation of an order for a belated lot of the reigning novelty in carnations.

La Purite and Its Followers.

It is never safe for an unmarried woman to let her memory reach too far back into the past, but I can remember when old La Purite was our mainstay; I remember when Mlle. Carle threw up its first snow white flower and we held our breath over its purity of color and its clear-cut form, but even the most daring catalogue liar could not claim freedom of bloom for either of these beautiful old pathfinders, nor for Buttercup or Chester Pride, Portia or Grace Wilder, which were added as the years went by, and if there had been only carnations on our benches I doubt if we should have had butter on our bread, for the bread-and-butter carnation had as yet no existence.

In '88, with Tidal Wave, the tide began to turn, and Father Dorner soon after gave us a delightful set of seedlings and these, with Lizzie McGowan and Daybreak, set an entirely new pace, and a carnation, from being a spoiled beauty for admiration only, began to be questioned as to its right to occupy space and as to its returns in hard dollars and cents per square foot; the heavy boot of sordid commercialism had kicked aside the old-time beauties, and the husky varieties with sleeves rolled up, stems like steel, calyxes like gutta-percha, petals like leather, and a noise like money, came rustling on the stage—and many a song and dance they have given us.

The Elevating Influence.

Visitors who go about a greenhouse with the proprietor seldom fail to remark upon the elevating influence of flowers. I have never known a florist yet who failed to acquiesce; he will stretch his neck in his collar, elevate his shoulders, and really feel higher up both mentally and morally as the suggestion is once more made to him. But I have seen the most enthusiastic visitor put to flight from the most magnificent carnation range by a very depressed looking section hand who might be scattering bone meal or other dainty tidbit for Lady Carnation's mid-week meal. And, further, I have known carnations that have dragged their owners down very near to the bottomless pit, and even the best of varieties at times have tried the souls of their growers till no modern tongue contained sufficiently lurid language to express their feelings.

That "Jubilly."

I once made the acquaintance of a glorious red carnation, sweet as winds from Araby, a stem like whalebone, eight and ten blooms to the plant, a blaze of color, and every florist wanted it by the 500 or 1,000, but the rust "swept down like the wolf on the fold" and devoured every green leaf, and I still have the vision of our good German grower, with wildly waving arms over his grassless benches, exclaiming: "That Jubilly, he was the very teufel." What else he may have said when no ladies were present I never dared inquire.

A prominent firm in Massachusetts, who had a nice order for "Jubilly" placed with us, were extremely curious to know why they were failing to receive their cuttings, and made inquiry quite forcibly weekly—and faintly each week we replied. I am glad that I am addressing a company of florists, every one of whom has disseminated, or has been upon the point of disseminating, a new carnation, for you know exactly what I am talking about, and how often you went into a perspiration before the season closed, and neither did you need a rose temperature to make your pores open.

Turn About.

Well, some four years after Jubilee this same prominent Massachusetts firm sent out a seedling, Mrs. Thomas R. L., I believe. We gave it a good write-up in our catalogue: "Size enormous, stems stiff, free in growth, profuse in bloom, of healthy constitution, never bursts its calyx, everything has been claimed for it and our opinion is that it will justify the claim!" And it did, very nearly, but I believe it was late in May before our orders were filled, and so despicable is feminine human nature that I confess to pure enjoyment in going to our file and copying verbatim several letters addressed to us four years previously, only substituting the name Mrs. Thomas R. L. for Jubilee, asking why we were not receiving those cuttings promised us with such absolute certainty for early delivery in the January past. And I think that the secretary of the disseminating company must have duplicated our replies of even date, for I recognized the same tone of chastened humility that had characterized our own.

Mrs. Nelson's Influence.

I never felt my sympathies more deeply stirred than in the case of a certain magnificent pink variety, grown not a thousand miles away from this city, which seemed to have every necessary qualification for success, but it later developed that the cuttings would not root. Now, a perfect carnation, like the great American mortgage lifter, must "Root hog, or die!" We waited and waited for those cuttings; so did the rest of you; each time we were told that the last batch had failed to root. One grower was sure the plants were grown too warm; another, that it was too much bottom heat in the propagating house; a third, that they needed a Bordeaux spray. A happy thought struck our firm: We would ask for unrooted cuttings, would take them over to Richmond and, under our perfect conditions, we would root them in three weeks and complete our orders. Our disseminating friend was very accommodating and sent us baskets of the loveliest tips imaginable, but with every appliance known to modern carnation culture, we failed to root over ten per cent.

It would not have been safe for you to talk to the owner of Mrs. Nelson that year on the elevating influence of flowers. Nothing short of diabolism itself could have been more tantalizing than the antics of that magnificent beauty.

Hill's Hope vs. Lemon's Choice.

Our firm has at different times tested for their owners a number of aspirants for favor, with varying success. It's a risky thing to do; if they fail to make good, the owner will always have a doubt in his mind as to whether all the conditions were just right to bring out their good points, and the gentleman who does the testing, and his grower, will have arguments about wasted space—and the nice discrimination needed in endorsing a novelty. Less than a decade ago, your toastmaster went down into the east to take a last look at a fine white seedling which we were to test, and if satisfactory to help disseminate. It showed up so fine down in its eastern home that he could hardly wait to get the stock planted on his own place. In the meantime, our Mr. Lemon had gone up into the northwest on a similar errand with regard to a gorgeous pink. On his return he gave the usual wheatfield description, "buds and blooms knocking their heads together—and such heads—on such stems!" E. G. H. wanted a south bench to test his white beauty and F. H. L. insisted on a southern exposure for his glorified pink. They each had a 200-foot bench facing south in the best 400-foot house on the place.

When the date of the annual meeting of this society came around, where the white beauty and the glorified pink were to take your breath away, E. G. H.'s south bench was covered with a dense growth of pale green carnation grass, which would have required a scythe to cut it, and not a flower in sight. F. H. L.'s south bench looked like a patch of seedling onions in very early spring, with an occasional petal of pink thrown in for cheer. The two gentlemen never went together to inspect the two benches. The senior member might be seen gazing with a pained expression at Lemon's choice, but carefully avoiding a glance at his own eastern beauty; an hour later,

"Brer." Lemon could be found, arms folded, an unholy smile upon his face, gazing at 200 feet of Hill's hopes, but without a glance at the onion patch, and to this day their only comment has been, "check!" But the check never went through the treasurer's hands.

The Gay Adonis.

Then there was Adonis, and here words fail me for the present, but——. Some day, when Richard Witterstaetter and Robert Craig and the secretary of the E. G. Hill Co. have all reached the age limit, and have leisure to take up literature, we are going to collaborate a biography and romance of the young Adonis, the most ravishing scarlet carnation ever shown to human gaze. Behold, a bench of it in full bloom, heads erect, a color far beyond words to describe! You can see the ecstasy in the faces of Messrs. Craig, Hill and Witterstaetter as they devoured its dazzling beauty.

This is not yet a matter of ancient history, and still it was before the days when the florist had grown sadly wise and had learned to balance a carnation stem on his index finger as the juggler does his pole, to test its stiffness; before he had learned to draw the flower slowly through his closed hand and watch the petals spring back to the horizontal; before he had learned to slap the bloom upon the table and watch the resisting power of the texture. Adonis helped to teach the trade this last trick, and so was not wholly lost in the economy of carnation culture.

The Price of Progress.

Since Adonis there have been others; they are current history and still in mind. Father Dorner and Mr. Peter Fisher have been the means of giving us the most popular carnations and the best wage earners in the family. We can gaze long and fondly upon White Perfection and Enchantress, as a father does upon a good child, and say, "They have never given me an anxious moment." Oh! but the waste of it all, the squandering of hard-earned dollars, you may say; but progress always costs in any line of trade or life, and the expenditure of money is the smallest item; the thing that really counts is endeavor and patient perseverance, and absolute honesty, and this is as true in commerce as in manufacturing or in carnation culture. And flowers do have an elevating influence on their growers, if the soil is mixed with good will for one's fellows and faith in a kindly Providence that sends the needed rain and sunshine and finally gives the increase.

CONVENTION AFTERMATH

THE BANQUET.

The Indiana State Florists' Association set out to banquet the American Carnation Society January 28 in irreproachable style, and the only slip in the arrangements was not their fault—two or three to whom toasts had been assigned failed to attend. But the substitutes proved satisfactory. The handsome club house secured for the occasion added no little to the enjoyment of the evening. E. G. Hill was toastmaster.

Mayor C. A. Bookwalter struck the keynote when he referred to the moral uplift that comes from association with flowers; nearly every speaker had a word to say on this point, which played directly into the hands of Miss Hill, who had prepared a toast dealing with the perversity of the divine flower and the provocation it affords any grower inclined to revert to the primeval state. Mayor Bookwalter talked flowers to florists as few public men ever have talked them, showed his intimate acquaintance with the technical side, and said that as a flower buyer he appreciates that while the price of flowers to the public is steadily advancing, so is the quality.

In the absence of J. S. Stuart, president of the State Society, his business partner, J. A. E. Haugh, proposed the toast to the guests, which was responded to by J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill. After this exchange of courtesies, W. N. Rudd talked on "The Exhibition; after all, that's the reason we're here." He said that the exhibitions have been the prime influence, not only in the success of the society, but in the development of the flower; that it was a proud moment when he was elected a judge for the society, as in the hands of the judges lies the future of the flower; in a very few years they can change by the weight of their judgment the direction of the flower's development—and he warned the society that too much weight has been and is attached to size, too little to form.

J. C. Vaughan referred to the late L. E. Marquisee as possibly the best example the society ever has had within its membership of the refining influence of the love of flowers; Mr. Marquisee was a gentleman and a scholar, orator, florist and friend.

President M. A. Patten spoke for the Carnation Society, and presented the trophies awarded at the show. The silver cups, the medals and the special cash awards were handed over to the winners, each of whom responded in a few words.

J. A. Valentine, president of the S. A. F., spoke for the parent society, the menu card expressing the sentiment in "Whether you acknowledge the relaront of the German House, Indianapolis, January 28, 1909.

tionship or not, we wish you prosperity.''

''Some Carnations I Have Met, and Their Ennobling Influence,'' by Miss Hill, is presented in full in this issue.

The menu was elaborate, the viands choice and the music good, especially the vocal solo by Miss Maude Langstaff, a florist's daughter.

THE TRIP TO RICHMOND.

Promptly at 6:30 a. m. Friday an enthusiastic party of about fifty visitors to the carnation convention boarded an electric car, specially chartered for the purpose, and accompanied by mine host, John Bertermann, and the ''Sage of Richmond,'' E. G. Hill, started on a tour of inspection. The first stop was at Cumberland, where the Bertermann new range of carnation houses is located. ''Talk about a neat and up-to-date place,'' I heard some one exclaim. ''Why, gentlemen, there is no use talking, it is a 'peach' and no mistake.'' Here the Lawson is still so good that Peter Fisher, who never wastes words, could not help expressing his feelings of admiration for his old time favorite. J. Whitcomb Riley, their new yellow, promises to fill a long felt want.

After lighting the ''Bertermann brand'' cigars, the party boarded the special car and was off for Richmond, where the first stop was at the E. T. Grave place. This place is worthy a visit at any time, but is especially interesting now, because of Mayday, the seedling carnation, which is being disseminated this season. It looks good. It may be remembered that Mr. Grave was the introducer of Dorothy, a medium sized pink, which was grown extensively a few years ago. He now has a white sport of Dorothy, which, however, is not intended for distribution.

After a stroll through the rose houses, which, as usual, showed the result of good care, the party went to the new west side plant of the E. G. Hill Co. Those who were under the impression that the Hill Co. is devoting its entire attention to seedling roses to the exclusion of seedling carnations were agreeably surprised. The introducer of Jubilee, Armazindy, Flora Hill, America and others, most of which stood the test and were bread-winners in their time, has by no means neglected the divine flower. Several scarlets, a white and a few good pink seedlings, have recently appeared. Joseph Hill, the presiding genius of this establishment, has ample reason to feel elated over the general results achieved this season in so far as the appearance of his general stock is concerned.

The Chas. Knopf Floral Co. came in for its share of attention. That Mr. Knopf grows excellent stock is well known. Of course, his seedlings received special attention. Mrs. Chas. Knopf, light pink, and Ruby, maroon, are being sent out this year. Another pink, christened Admiration, which is to make its debut a year hence, was much admired by the visitors.

The inner man craved attention by this time, and a bountiful dinner, provided by the Richmond hosts, soon waited upon our appetites at one of the leading restaurants. Dinner over, the party proceeded to the E. G. Hill east side establishment, where the seedling roses are grown. Geraniums, ferns, coleus, salvias and other things too numerous to mention, by the thousands and tens of thousands, are produced for the trade, which, needless to say, extends over a territory bordering on both oceans.

And last, but by no means least, the party paid a visit to the ventilator and ''contraption'' shop of John Evans. Those who were somewhat in need of a ''bracer,'' on account of the strenuous day or the inclement weather, or both, got the bracer, and cigars to burn.

CONVENTION JOTTINGS.

Where, oh where, was Charles Willis Ward?

Baur & Smith have a splendid white in Shasta—easily the best thing that has originated on their place. Indeed, Judge Willis N. Rudd said their vase of this variety was the finest white in the hall, which comes from his being a crank on form, with Shasta as round and regular as though turned out by a machine. Baur & Smith have a good stock of it and it is said will disseminate it next year.

Since the public is admitted to the exhibition, it seems worth while to pay more attention to arrangement and staging. Induce the retail florists to take a hand.

Joseph Heacock states that unless someone takes the job off his hands he will disseminate Dorothy Gordon next year. This is a seedling of Lawson and Enchantress that appears to have only one weak point: its similarity in appearance to Rose-pink Enchantress. Mr. Heacock this season has 6,000 plants on his benches.

Bertermann Bros. Co. has not yet decided what to do with the yellow carnation, James Whitcomb Riley, feeling that to properly exploit it would require more time than they care to take from their retail business. In England and Germany no color is in more demand than yellow, and on neither side of the Atlantic is there a yellow carnation that is more than locally grown.

The REVIEW last week reported correctly the award of the S. A. F. silver medal to F. Dorner & Sons Co., on No. 175-06. The way other papers fell into error was that the judges first awarded the medal to A. C. Brown, on Superba, but a little later discovered they had failed to consider several entries that stood on another table. In rejudging, the award went to No. 175-06, a big, round, full, regular orange scarlet that looks like it would trot in any class. When the judges took the silver medal away from Superba they gave it the bronze medal. No. 175-06 would have competed for the A. C. S. gold medal, only Dorners could not cut 100 blooms of it.

WHAT THE STATIONS ARE DOING

[A paper by H. B. Dorner, of Urbana, Ill., read before the American Carnation Society, at the Indianapolis convention, January 27 and 28, 1909.]

During the last fifteen years the continually increasing demand for carnations has necessarily led to an increase in the greenhouse space devoted to the cultivation of this plant. With this increase many new and perplexing problems have been forced upon us. There is hardly a plant that has more diseases and insect pests affecting it.

In those states where many carnations are grown the experiment stations have attempted, from time to time, to solve some of these problems. The results of these studies have been published in bulletins and reports of the stations.

Most of the work in the past has been done on a small scale, with just a few plants, and the results, to a certain degree, are rather indefinite. Today it is realized that, to have results comparable with commercial work, one must carry on these experiments on a commercial scale. Many of the stations are now building or have built greenhouses which are devoted entirely to special floricultural crops.

Modern Problems.

In looking over the work done by the various stations, one finds that the problems of ten or fifteen years ago are not altogether the problems of today. Some of the earliest work on the carnation was on rust and its prevention and destruction. At that time the carnations were not rust-resistant, but were easily affected. Since those days the varieties sent out each year have been more resistant each year, until today the rust is not the enemy that it formerly was. No chemical has been found as yet that will eradicate it, and its disappearance is due to a change in the constitution of the host. Its worst days are over.

Stem-rot has been discussed time and time again, but no effective method has been devised for its destruction. Its disappearance will also follow on the breeding of resistant varieties.

The questions of today, then, seem to be along the line of carnation breeding, methods for the prevention and destruction of insect enemies and problems of nutrition or, in other words, the proper use of fertilizers.

In order to secure the necessary data for this paper, the writer sent a letter to the director of each agricultural experiment station in the United States, requesting such information as could be given regarding results that have been published and also the work which is being carried on at the present time.

No attempt shall be made to discuss the work of the stations in detail, but only to give a brief resumé of what has been done and what they are doing at present.

Districts Unsuitable for Carnations.

The requirements of the carnation naturally prohibit its being grown in certain parts of the country, and therefore many stations carry on no work along this line. This includes most of the states south of Mason and Dixon's line, and also many of the western states. Replies have been received to most of the letters, but the report is naturally incomplete, as some have failed to answer. In addition to this information, data were secured from an examination of the literature published.

It will be found that most work has been done by the stations of those states which may be called carnation centers. The troubles of the carnation growers were important enough to occupy a part of their time.

Among the stations from which replies have been received are a number where no work has been done. This is not due to a lack of interest, but because very few, if any, carnations are grown in the state and so time and funds have been expended on other crops. Among these are the following southern and western states: New Mexico, California, Louisiana, West Virginia, Alabama, Utah, Montana, Wyoming and Kentucky. Maine, Minnesota and North Dakota also have done nothing along this line.

Florida has attempted to grow carnations, but found that northern varieties all failed in the south. The variety Augusta was sent out from there as the only variety suitable for the state. South Carolina grows a few carnations, but has carried on no experiments, as there are few floral establishments in the state. In North Carolina the work has been recent and some time has been devoted to root-knot of carnations. Virginia has done nothing, but expects to take up work in floriculture in the near future.

States That Lack Equipment.

Pennsylvania has also done nothing, but expects to take up some carnation work as soon as new houses are finished. Ohio has done a little on subirrigation and crossing, but has published nothing. Michigan has done nothing, due to lack of equipment. Wisconsin has no facilities at present, but floricultural work will begin as soon as new houses are completed. Iowa grows a few plants for class work, but has given them no attention as a crop. Kansas has done some work on control of rust, but has published nothing. Missouri has confined her work entirely to practical methods of preventing rust, and suggests the use of dry Bordeaux mixture. In Oregon a little work has been done, but no data published. In Washington only a few carnations are grown for class work. Commercially, few carnations are planted, time and space being devoted to roses.

Thus far the report shows that there are some stations in carnation growing sections at which floricultural work would be carried on if they had the proper equipment and funds. Several of these have greenhouses under construction and will take up this line of work in the near future. There are, however, a number of stations at which much work has been done with the carnation and where still more is being done.

Tests in New Hampshire and Vermont.

At the New Hampshire station the following problems are now under consideration:

1. "A test of the value of farm manures, judiciously used in the compost heap, as a means of improving the growth of plants, size and other points of excellence in the flower."

2. "A test of the value of commercial fertilizers applied as a top dressing to carnation benches."

3. "How to account for the earliness and free flowering of carnations; the theory being worked out in seedlings."

Banquet Tendered to the American Carnation Society at Indianapolis, January 28, 1909.

4. "Pot culture of carnations during summer months in coldframes, compared to field culture."

5. "House culture of carnations compared to outside culture."

6. "Suitable soils for winter culture of carnations."

7. "Inheritance of color in carnations."

New Hampshire has devoted to this work at the present time 2,500 square feet of glass.

In Vermont Mr. Stuart has done some interesting work on crossing carnations, the results of which appear in the twentieth annual report of the station. The work consists of a study of seasonal influence in crossing relative to seed production, in which Mr. Stuart arrives at the conclusion that early crosses are the best, giving a higher percentage of successes, a larger number of seeds and a higher percentage of germination. Some attention has also been given to Mendelian inheritance in the carnation with respect to the unit characters of single and double. He finds that the law holds good in the case of the carnation.

Massachusetts and Bordering States.

In Massachusetts some work has been done at both stations. At the Hatch station two bulletins have been published. Bulletin No. 10 deals with fertilizers for carnations, and No. 80 gives directions for spraying. The seventeenth report gives some notes on soil sterilization and the fourteenth some notes on stem-rot. In the reports of the state station are found notes on stem-rot and analyses of carnations.

In Bulletin No. 128 the Rhode Island station gives the results of soil treatment in culture of carnations. At present a 50-foot house is devoted to experiments on the effects of various kinds of physical and chemical soil treatment upon carnation growth. This is now only in its second season and nothing has been published as yet.

Connecticut has issued various notes on results of experiments with carnation diseases, effect of lime on development and the use of commercial fertilizers. These have been published in the station reports of 1896, 1897, 1899, 1900 and 1906.

At the Cornell station the carnation has been used in various experiments, such as crossing, influence of electric and acetylene light, influence of fertilizers on vegetative parts and on vigor, quantity and viability of pollen. Records have been made of work, but have not been printed as yet.

At the state station at Geneva some comprehensive work has been done. The latest bulletin published (Technical Bulletin No. 7) contains the results of a careful study of the bud-rot, its causes and control. In addition to this publication, the following bulletins have also been issued: No. 100, on methods of "Combating Carnation Rust"; No. 188, "Effects of Common Salt on the Growth of Carnations and Carnation Rust"; No. 164, on "Leaf Spot"; No. 176, "A Parasite Upon Carnation Rust"; No. 186 contains notes on stem-rot.

From Atlantic to Middle West.

In New Jersey investigations have recently been taken up. At the present time a study is being made of the physical condition of the red shale soil, using various proportions of sand and organic matter. Some interesting notes as to the productivity, color and size of Prosperity in these tests are given in the American Florist, page 1,244.

In bulletin No. 127 the Maryland station has some interesting notes on the effects of fertilizer on stiffness of stem, effect of varying amounts of nitrogen, the earliness, different time of setting carnations, continuous cropping without changing soil and bursting of carnations due to location on bench. At the present time investigations are being carried on to determine the effect of cutting selection on vigor of plant and development of color types from seed. A house 20x50 is being devoted to this work.

In Indiana the results of the most important work were given in bulletin No. 59, on "Bacteriosis of Carnations." This disease was considered to be due to bacteria, but is now known to be caused by punctures of insects and is called "stigmonose." A number of articles also appeared in trade journals at various times. No work is now being done, due to lack of greenhouses.

In Illinois and Nebraska.

In Illinois the past year was devoted to the repression of thrips on carnations, and during the season from October, 1907, to June 15, 1908, over 68,000 buds were examined; most of the work was done with tobacco compounds. The results of the work have not been published yet.

During the present year two houses, 28x105 feet, are being devoted to an experiment with carnations, testing the value of chemical fertilizers as supplementing stable manures. This experiment comprises thirty combinations of fertilizers, which are repeated with four different varieties in order to check results; 3,200 plants are used in the experiment. The fertilizers used are dried blood, sodium nitrate, ammonium sulphate for nitrogen, acid phosphate, ground rock and bone meal for phosphorus, potassium sulphate, wood ashes and kainite for potassium and lime. Several years will be required to complete the work.

The only work done by Nebraska is on the bud-rot of carnations and its accompanying mite. The results of this work were published as bulletin No. 103.

Ten stations have not been heard from, and as most of them are in regions unfavorable to carnation growing, they have probably done no work along this line.

A study of the report will show that the real work in floriculture at the stations is in its infancy and that the work

YOUNGEST LIFE MEMBER OF THE S. A. F.

Charles Albert Traendly.

[Charles Albert Traendly is the three-year-old son of Frank H. Traendly, president of the Society of American Florists during 1908. It is said that Charles Albert is a member of the firm of Traendly & Schenck, wholesale florists in New York. Mr. Traendly was not inspired with the bright idea of making the boy a life member of the S. A. F. in time to get his own signature on the certificate as president, it being the second one signed by J. A. Valentine.]

along the line of carnations is just beginning. The time is not far distant when each station will be devoting a certain amount of time to it.

LANCASTER COUNTY GROWERS.

A party of Lancaster county florists recently visited the greenhouses of Emanuel P. Hostetter, Manheim, Pa., where they were photographed by Harry K. Rohrer. Reading from left to right in his picture, they are: H. B. Weaver, Jacob H. Weaver, Elmer J. Weaver, Willis B. Girvin, E. P. Hostetter, B. F. Barr, Albert M. Herr, and A. K. Rohrer.

OUR COMMON INTERESTS.

[A paper by Wm. J. Stewart, of Boston, Mass., read before the American Carnation Society, at the Indianapolis convention, January 27 and 28, 1909.]

The topic on which I have been asked to say a few words might easily furnish food for profitable discussion for the time of an entire convention. Briefly stated, I think all will agree that a closer accord and mutual understanding between the growers, commission men and retailers would greatly conduce to the advantage of the industry as a whole and every individual connected with commercial floriculture. We need not confine our consideration to the carnation industry alone; what we shall deduce applies equally to all.

At the start we might ask ourselves, first, whether our industry is enjoying a reasonable degree of prosperity; is or is not returning to those who labor in its various departments a fair recompense for the effort expended. If not, where shall we look for the cause and what can we apply as a remedy?

Primitive Methods Outgrown.

The business which is under consideration is one of recent development, rapidly increasing in importance and influence and now involving many direct and allied interests. It is not surprising that new phases, hitherto unforeseen, are constantly intruding themselves. We find in the ranks many who started when its problems were simple, its operations somewhat primitive and its profits large in proportion to the investment. It is only natural that we should here encounter a sentiment reluctant to acknowledge that former conditions can never be restored, and well-intrenched convictions with resultant prejudices as to the supposed causes contributing to present grievances. All this is inimical to the conciliatory, coöperative spirit which the interdependence of the different interests makes so desirable.

On the other hand, the inherent principle of progress demands that, as our business assumes a magnitude which makes modern mercantile methods essential to its best success, we should fit ourselves to so conduct it, regardless of any preconceived views and cherished prejudices which may stand in the way. According as we are willing to so fit ourselves and encourage the same in our auxiliaries will the foundations of our industry be strengthened, its dignity upheld and its permanency assured as a vocation universally respected and honored.

Need of Mutual Consideration.

Looking at the commercial horticultural industry as comprising the three distinct departments of the producer, the wholesaler and the retailer, we may state as a self-evident proposition that any interruption of the prosperity of one department must eventually react directly or indirectly on all the others, and the misfortune of one should therefore be the concern of all.

Following out this thought, a first requisite in the movement toward a better understanding and the benefits which may be expected to follow is the recognition by each department of the indispensability of the other.

> "I care for nobody, no, not I,
> If nobody cares for me," is not the sort of sentiment that will bring either emolument or credit to either.

Problems of Supply and Demand.

With the wholesale grower's first and greatest obligation—that of producing good and acceptable material—this paper does not concern itself. We shall assume that the grower is doing this part well, and we shall assent, also, to the proposition that, under conditions as they now exist, he has all he can attend to. If, however, the product is not well sold and the money well collected, it matters little how well it may have been grown, and so here we come to the problem which presses most urgently upon us today. When the production outstrips the demand, then are the highest qualifications of the marketing forces put to the test. You, growers, who make up the bulk of the membership of this organization, know something of the bitterness of disappointment as you have seen your product, under the slightest provocation of sunlight and crop, piled up unsold in the wholesale markets or condemned to the alternative of being proclaimed by a "hole-in-the-wall" shouter at "ten for a nickel," while perhaps you read in the trade papers of a scarcity and unsupplied demand a couple of hundred miles away. You are justified in asking, "Cannot this be helped? What is it that stands between the flower and the public?" But instead of asking of the wind or of your brother grower, would it not be well to call in the other members of the family—the wholesaler and the retailer—and reason together? The subject is one which will tax the combined capabilities of all.

Purposes of the Carnation Society.

In the meeting for organization of this society at Philadelphia, eighteen years ago, among the objects of the organization as set forth by the committee on resolutions were the following: "To increase general interest in the cultivation and consumption of the carnation; to improve the methods of cultivation and the methods of placing it on the market; to increase its use as a decorative flower." Do the records of the society show that these two propositions have been followed up as of equal importance or that one has been allowed to overshadow the other?

Our worthy president, in asking me to prepare this paper, writes: "You have been through the mill, so I think you might give us a few suggestions." Consulting the dictionary, I find the word "mill" defined as "a machine in which substances are ground"; "a prize fight." The president evidently had in mind my connection with the flower commission business in the long, long ago. From my observation I should say that the commission method of marketing flowers was still holding its own all right, although proof is not wanting to indicate that the sentiment among some of the best informed commission dealers seems to favor a system of direct, outright purchases from the wholesale grower.

Duties of Grower and Wholesaler.

In any event, the vital interests of grower and wholesaler demand that the wholesale dealer should at all times have exact information from the grower as to crops present and prospective and a strict compliance with his wishes as to time and manner of shipment. It is the wholesaler's privilege and duty to concern himself in the matters which affect the welfare of his grower, advise him as to ways and means whereby he may increase his income, inform him as to the movements and tendencies of the market as discerned by the man at the front, keep the scouts busy and do something more than sell. If he is incapable of all this, he may be "in the right church," but is certainly "in the wrong pew."

The grower should have from his wholesaler unquestioned assurance of financial responsibility. I sometimes think the growers, as a class, have been remarkably trusting and generous in this latter respect to salesmen of all kinds, but whether it is good business is a different question, and, as before intimated, it is hardly in harmony with accepted commercial practice, which demands that the money from the sale of flowers should pass promptly from the consumer, through the medium of retailer and wholesaler, to the grower, and with equal celerity from the latter to those who supply and serve him. In no respect are the various departments of the trade more closely interdependent, and in none is reform more urgently needed, than in this matter of credits and accountability.

A Caution to the Retailer.

As to the retailer, he should never forget that the producer of the stock which he must have, if he is to continue in business, is entitled to a fair return and the means of placing his business in a position of honor and good repute. It is natural to want to buy as cheaply as possible, but the disposition to beat down wholesale values, regardless of the possibilities of ruin and discouragement that may follow, should be looked upon with disapproval by all well-wishers of the floral industry.

In conclusion, let none of us be "content with knowledge sufficient for the present need." The business with which our fortunes are linked is only in course of development, and to keep pace with its growth and its emergencies requires the best combined thought you can give to it. Mutual respect and mutual toleration are good qualities to cultivate. Our peace of mind, our business future and, last but not least, our pocket books, will all share in the prosperity following upon a wise discernment of the close relationship between producer, wholesaler and retailer.

Carnation Sangamo.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION SANGAMO.

Sangamo is one of the pink seedlings certificated at the Indianapolis meeting of the American Carnation Society. It also won for its originator, A. C. Brown, of Springfield, Sangamon county, Illinois, the second premium for best 100 light pink—the Winona class. Sangamo is of good, clear color, pink with just a suggestion of salmon. The flowers are three inches or over and it is a good grower and free bloomer, with strong calyx. Mr. Brown says that in his own trade at Springfield, Sangamo has proved an excellent commercial sort, being a good seller and good keeper.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

General Care of Young Stock.

During the month of February special efforts should be made to propagate all the stock possible, as not only are the mature plants at their best, but weather conditions are such as favor rooting the largest percentage of any time in the year.

As the different batches come from the sand and are potted or pricked out in flats, as the case may be, there should be in readiness a suitable place to receive them after having become sufficiently established to stand strong light.

The average grower is inclined to argue with himself that, not being producers, young stock can be crowded into out-of-the-way places, regardless of surrounding conditions. I venture the opinion that no grower ever succeeded in convincing himself of the soundness of the argument; still, every year we see the usual attempts at impossibilities. These small plants, upon which we are to depend next season, can only be relied on to give us returns in proportion to the care bestowed upon them while young. Consequently it is a mistake to look upon them as a necessary evil and able to take care of themselves.

Choose a location receiving full sun and an abundance of air. Clean out, whitewash and cover the bottom of the bench with cinders or other drainage material and, as pointed out in the REVIEW of January 21, arrange for the employment of low temperature.

Under no circumstances allow insect pests to gain a foothold. They invariably attack the partially developed leaves, where they are extremely difficult to reach by fumigation or syringing, and, even if destroyed, the punctures made by them form an opening for the entrance of disease. Light fumigation, religiously kept up, is the best means of prevention.

Topping.

According as the young plant is topped, so in a great measure will the shape of the future plant be. Cutting back too low will likely result in a short-necked plant, with the lower branches dangerously near the soil. Long-geared, top-heavy ones owe their awkward shape to their not having been topped low enough.

We can learn much by studying a well shaped mature plant, keeping in mind the fact that, as in a tree, the distance between roots and where the first lower branches start will never change.

To hide defects, one might remove the lower branches from a short-necked plant or set the goose-necked one deeper in the soil when benching, but that will not increase or diminish the established distance alluded to. Besides, such practice cannot in any sense be called plant building; neither is it in keeping with good carnation culture, there being too much risk attached to it.

Never attempt to top by pulling out the center. The chances are that it will not come away entire, and thus the desired object will not be attained, and, in cases where the effort is successful, water lodging in the cavity left is quite certain to cause trouble.

Wait until the plant reaches the condition in which formation of stem can be plainly seen between joints at the point to be cut. This varies in different varieties and sometimes in plants of the same sort, but in general practice the cut is made above the fourth or fifth joint.

Use a Sharp Knife.

In making use of the word "cut," I do so with reference to and in recommendation of the actual use of a sharp knife, and with special protest against employment of the thumb nail.

We have seen this operation done by bending the top to one side or back and forth, but under this method the break usually occurs at a joint, whereas it should take place midway between two joints.

Right here we perceive an advantage in pot culture, for, as every plantsman knows, when a plant is cut back the soil should be held somewhat on the dry side until growth is resumed in the hitherto dormant eyes. In our case potted stock, as soon as topped, can be stood over apart from the others and water withheld or applied sparingly until the side shoots appear. This would be an impossibility when set in flats, unless every plant in the flat was in condition to top at the same time, which circumstance would practically never happen.

With some varieties the side shoots start before the center is in condition to top. This is a pretty sure indication of an inborn disposition to neat, bushy growth, and little trouble will be experienced in securing symmetrical plants.

Others of sprawly habit, or those whose side branches easily break away from the main trunk, are more difficult to manage, but by keeping in mind an ideal shape and training with that end in view, every variety can be induced to make satisfactory plants as regards habit.

It is well worth while to master these rampant ones, for their blooms are often superior to those requiring little effort to train, thus proving the old saying that "anything which grows easily is of small value." Geo. S. Osborn.

WINONA IN ENGLAND.

In a review of the behavior of the newer American carnations in England this season a writer says: "Winona is undoubtedly the pick of the packet; it won't stand a lot of criticism, but it is always doing something which tells on the books, and it is a splendid type of the bread and butter carnation. The beautiful shade of pink is a selling color, and its productiveness makes up for size. It is difficult to tell when the first crop ends and second crop begins. A market grower said the other day: 'I like Winona because it always has plenty of whiskers.' He meant young growths coming."

STIGMONOSE.

What is the disease on the enclosed carnation leaves, and what is the cause and the remedy? I think some are eaten by spider, but I am not sure. The spot, and the one that is yellow on the tip, I cannot account for. They were fed with bone meal, and also with a mulch about an inch and a half thick, of cow manure that was about half spent. I put a light dash of lime on the soil when the plants were first housed. The disease seems to be spreading over the entire carnation houses, on all varieties. E. G. B.

The specimens forwarded are covered with the light spots which are known as stigmonose. This subject has been treated repeatedly and fully in these columns this season. Refer to your recent back numbers of the Review and you will find full instructions. A. F. J. B.

GOOD COOL GROWING REDS.

We find Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress and White Enchantress so satisfactory to our patrons and profitable to ourselves that we have about decided to cut out other varieties of those colors entirely for another year. But we are uncertain what it is best to grow for red in the same houses with those cool growing varieties. Cardinal, we know, is agreeable to the temperature, but it is scarcely satisfactory in size, etc. Can you advise us? Z. K. J.

You should have no trouble in growing either Victory or Beacon in the same temperature with the Enchantress varieties. Both are good, and my advice to you would be to plant both next season and choose for yourself between them, unless you wish to grow both. Either one is better than Cardinal in every way. A. F. J. B.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Cyclamens.

Seedlings of cyclamen started early last October are still in flats on a shelf in a light, sunny house. The surface soil is scratched over frequently and it is really surprising how the little plants appreciate and respond to these little attentions. You cannot get them, or for that matter any other plants, to grow satisfactorily if you allow the surface to become caked, mossy and weedy. Careful watering and cleanliness are as important as proper soil and temperature in plant cultivation under glass. The little cyclamens should go into 2½-inch pots before they become crowded. At this first potting, use a light compost containing two-thirds leaf-mold, one-third loam and some fine sand. Do not use any manure, even if old and well decayed, until the next potting. Give your plants a stand on a light bench and a temperature of 45 to 52 degrees at night. A light spraying overhead early in the afternoon of warm days will be beneficial. Watering with the hose is easy and often necessary. If you want good cyclamens, use a watering pot, however, in the early stages of growth.

Campanula Medium.

Campanula medium, better known as Canterbury bells, have during the last few years become quite popular at Easter. White colors usually sell best at that time, but the pink shades are specially attractive. The blue shades are in less demand. Double varieties are less desirable than the single and Calycanthema varieties. To ensure your plants being on time, if they have not yet been started, lose no time in placing them in a night temperature of 50 degrees. It will not pay to run them any warmer, or the plants will become weak and spindling. When in active growth the Canterbury bells want lots of water, so do not let them suffer on this score.

Hydrangeas.

The flower heads on hydrangeas are beginning to show in the shoots of some of the earliest plants. These will be in good season for Easter without any need of resorting to hard forcing. Like spiræas, the hydrangeas want an abundant water supply, and where the pots are filled with roots, use liquid manure once in four or five days. If the foliage, perchance, looks pale, use a little soot or nitrate of soda in the water to tone them up. Do not allow aphis to get any foothold. If you remember the weekly fumigation, you will have no trouble on this score. Any plants which are throwing few flowers will probably yield you a good crop of serviceable cuttings. These can be grown into strong plants to force another year. If your plants are a little backward, they can stand a temperature of 58 to 60 degrees at night, but it is better to reduce this 5 to 10 degrees as the flower heads develop.

Fuchsias.

Old fuchsia plants started in gentle heat a short time ago will now have broken freely and a good crop of nice, short, stocky cuttings will be obtainable from them. In a propagating bench they will root and be fit to pot off within three weeks. While not of much value for bedding-out purposes, fuchsias make desirable pot plants and flower nicely in window boxes or in vases on piazzas, where they get a little broken light from the midday sun. At bedding-out time, nice little plants in bloom in 4-inch pots usually sell well.

Petunias.

A crop of nice cuttings should now be gotten in of the double varieties of petunias and any special singles which have been selected. As pot plants, petunias have much to recommend them. They are persistent flowering, even in the hottest weather, and make ideal dwelling house plants. Whether in vases, boxes, baskets or flower borders, there are no more satisfactory bedding plants than petunias. If at bedding-out time you have a good batch of doubles and singles of the California Giant type carrying a few flowers, you will find them one of the best sellers, next to geraniums and cannas.

Bougainvilleas.

Bougainvilleas have become quite important Easter plants of late years. Their color is not popular with some people, but they meet with a satisfactory sale each year. Easter stock is now growing freely in a house kept at 60 degrees at night. Having been started three weeks ago in this temperature, the flowers should be well developed ten weeks hence. A light spraying overhead twice a day is given for the first two or three weeks, but care should be taken not to overwater the plants in the early stages of growth. We have known many cases where plants have died from an excess of moisture at the roots before they had started to grow. The varieties Sanderiana and Cypheri are the best for pot culture, glabra being splendid as a climber or pillar plant.

Ampelopsis Veitchii.

Retail florists always have a call for plants of Boston ivy, as this pretty ampelopsis is popularly called. It is not possible to get plants of sufficient strength to sell the first season, but it will well repay anyone to raise a batch of seedlings and grow them on for next year's trade. Sow the seed in flats, as you would stocks or asters. They are of easy germination. Transplant into other flats and later either plant out in the field or, better still, pot off singly and plunge in a frame for the summer, where you can give them an occasional watering. The price you can ask for these ampelopsis will repay you for the work of carrying them over winter.

Gladiolus The Bride.

It is time to get a batch of Gladiolus The Bride into heat. A warm house is not to their liking; 50 to 52 degrees at night is as high as it is safe to grow them. As their flats are now a perfect mass of roots, see that they get abundant supplies of water. A little cow manure water once a week may also be given. Similar treatment may be given any of the other early forcing varieties of gladioli, but be sure they have plenty of roots and have the tops nicely started before placing them in heat.

Crotons and Dracaenas.

The present is an opportune time to overhaul crotons and dracænas and do any potting or topdressing needed. If you have not put in a good crop of cuttings, do so without delay. Leggy plants of both crotons and colored leaved dracænas are often propagated by mossing and rooting the tops by what is commonly termed the "ringing" process. The same mode of propagation is much used in the case of Ficus elastica. All that is necessary is to partly cut through the stem with a sharp knife, push a toothpick in to keep the cut open and then tie a handful of moss firmly and evenly around the incision and keep the moss constantly moist, cutting off and potting the tops as soon as roots appear in the moss. In the hot summer months ficus root quickly treated thus, but they, with crotons, dracænas, dieffenbachias and some few other warm house plants, can be readily rooted in winter or spring in the same way. A warm, moist house is of course necessary for successful propagation.

Hybrid Perpetual Roses.

If wanted for Easter, it is now time to prune and start your hybrid perpetual roses in a cool house. Give a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees until the plants are breaking freely; then advance it 5 degrees. Ventilate carefully, in order that mildew may not get any foothold on your plants. Stock which was potted last fall will give much better results than such as are potted now. The demand for hybrid roses is not what it used to be; more is the pity. The advent, first, of Crimson Rambler, and of late years a host of other climbers of that type, which make excellent pot plants, has much to do with the lessened culture of the hybrid perpetuals. Nevertheless, nicely flowered pots are acceptable at Easter, but it requires considerable close figuring and watching to time them exactly right, as much depends on the weather.

GUDE'S CAMPAIGN LITERATURE.

In the recent election of the Chamber of Commerce, Washington, D. C., Wm. F. Gude and A. Moses were the opposing candidates for president until the following poem was circulated by the supporters of Mr. Gude. They will tell you, "On the dead, now, there was nothing to it after that."

A stranger stood within our gates;
  He queried, soft and low:
"What means the almost solemn air
  I meet, where'er I go?"
Why, we're all dead; the Tradesman said.
  And all we need is flowers
To strew on our commercial corpse—
  A Florist, please, for ours.

No second Moses do we need,
  To show the promised land.
No Aaron's rod to tap trade rocks,
  That lie close to our hand.
So let us slumber on and on,
  Through all the happy hours;
No hustling Moses need apply—
  A Florist, please, for ours.

After the vote was counted some kind friend patronized a florist and sent Mr. Moses a beautiful funeral wreath.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A STORE IN SILVER BIRCH.

Pictured in this issue is the unique store of Harry J. Hoffmeir, at Eighty-third street and Broadway, New York. The store throughout is finished in silver birch, the furniture being specially made to correspond with the trimmings of the room. The work-room is at the rear, with the office above it, reached by the stairs shown in the center in the illustration. It will be noted that there is no sales counter in the store, this now being considered unnecessary in flower stores which cater to high-class trade.

Mr. Hoffmeir also has a store at Atlantic City, and eight greenhouses, with three acres of land, at Northfield, N. J.

THE SCARLET HEART.

The heart in the illustration was made entirely of Liberty roses, their scarlet being much favored by members of the Roman Catholic Church. The arrangement at the base is particularly light and effective, affording an excellent setting for the scarlet flowers. This always is a striking design, especially if, as often happens, all the other arrangements are of white flowers. This is the work of Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. STEAM ON SHOW WINDOWS.

I noticed an article in the REVIEW of January 21 on "Steam on Show Windows." One way, and I think the only way, to prevent frost from forming is to have the glass double. with an air space of two inches or more between the glass. This air space must be perfectly tight, to insure its effectiveness. We build expensive walls for beauty and to keep out the cold; why not plan to have the most valuable part of the store built to insure its beauty and usefulness? The additional glass may be removed during the summer.

A NOVEL DECORATION.

The decorations for the midwinter ball in Horticultural hall, Philadelphia, January 29, introduced at least one novel feature. It was an electrical sunburst, represented by a ball of fiery red in the center, with electrical beams varying gradually from red to orange and yellow radiating from it. The boxes of plaster of Paris, which have proved so popular in recent fall decorations, were again put in position. These boxes are perhaps three feet high, with steps approaching on both ends, and open behind. The boxes, with the addition of rugs and chairs, form favorite vantage points for seeing and being seen. They were decorated with choice Acacia pubescens, and white azaleas set in plaster of Paris vases, of pleasing design. The stage effect was of an Italian garden in which choice Cibotium Schiedei were conspicuous, white columns being used to relieve the green. Above the boxes were double electrical arches, tastefully adorned with wild smilax. Four special chandeliers were hung in a square, high up, where light was needed. The table decorations were spring flowers, excepting the patronesses' table, which was adorned with American Beauties. Over 100 tables, each with its own variety of tulip, of daffodil, freesia, or white lilac, presented a charming effect.

This decoration was the work of J. J. Habermehl's Sons. I am indebted for the description to the courtesy of John P. Habermehl. PHIL.

STORING GALAX.

Will you tell us at what temperature galax leaves should be kept in cold storage? W. & S.

This inquiry comes from a retail florist. Galax leaves bought in the ordinary quantities handled by retailers can be kept satisfactorily in the bottom of the ordinary cut flower box. If a case of galax is bought, store it away in the refrigerator and cover the leaves with damp moss or wet sacking, anything that will keep the air away from the galax leaves. As needed, take out a few of the leaves, clip the stems a bit and stand in shallow pots of water. Keep a supply ahead in water, for they are much better for use after having stood a few days in water. If the pots are kept in a cool place the leaves will keep several weeks. Where galax leaves are placed in cold storage warehouses to remain a considerable time they are kept in the coolest room which is still above freezing; if frozen the leaves spoil quickly on exposure to the air. FOR A RAILROAD DINNER.

The florist often is called upon for special decorations, where relationship to the character of the dinner, or of the diners, is required rather than the artistic arrangement of fine flowers. These decorations often test the skill of the florist, for nothing is more difficult than to execute a decoration of this class in a manner that will appeal to the artistic sense. How M. A. Bowe, New York, recently built a railroad amid the flowers on a dinner table is shown in the accompanying illustration, but unfortunately the photographer was too intent on getting the detail in the napery to get much in the plants and flowers, so the picture shows little of the artistic success from the florists' point of view.

The oval table carried a moss-grown railroad embankment, at the top of which a miniature track was laid, with bridges, stations, semaphores, and all the "properties," even to a section hand with a handcar. The locomotive and train of three cars were kept in motion all through the dinner by an electric storage battery. In the center was a little lake in which swam a swan. On the shores of the lake were pussy willows, Adiantum Farleyense, cattleyas and other choice plants, all grouped to harmonious effect in the unusual encircling feature.

It is worth while noting that the entire decoration was low, so that the diners could see and converse across the table.

CANTERBURY BELLS FOR EASTER

In August, 1908, we planted some seeds of Canterbury bells, cup and saucer variety, and transplanted them in October into flats. We tipped them off into 2½-inch pots in December. and January 20 we shifted them to 3-inch pots. If kept in a temperature of 40 to 50 degrees at night and repotted again into 4-inch pots, can they be forced into bloom by Easter? A. & W.

I am afraid your Canterbury bells were sown rather too late to flower the coming spring. These campanulas are biennials, flowering the second year, but my experience has been that unless they were sown in April or May the plants would not have sufficient size and strength to flower. I am sorry to discourage you, but do not think it will pay you to attempt to flower these for Easter. To be of any account for pot culture, Canterbury bells should be in not less than 6-inch pots, and 8-inch is none too large for good plants.

Another season I would suggest that you make a sowing under glass in April. Plant outdoors in June, potting up in early October in your Kentucky climate. These plants will give you splendid stock for the Easter of 1910 if you start them this spring. I do not think the plants you have will flower at all this season.

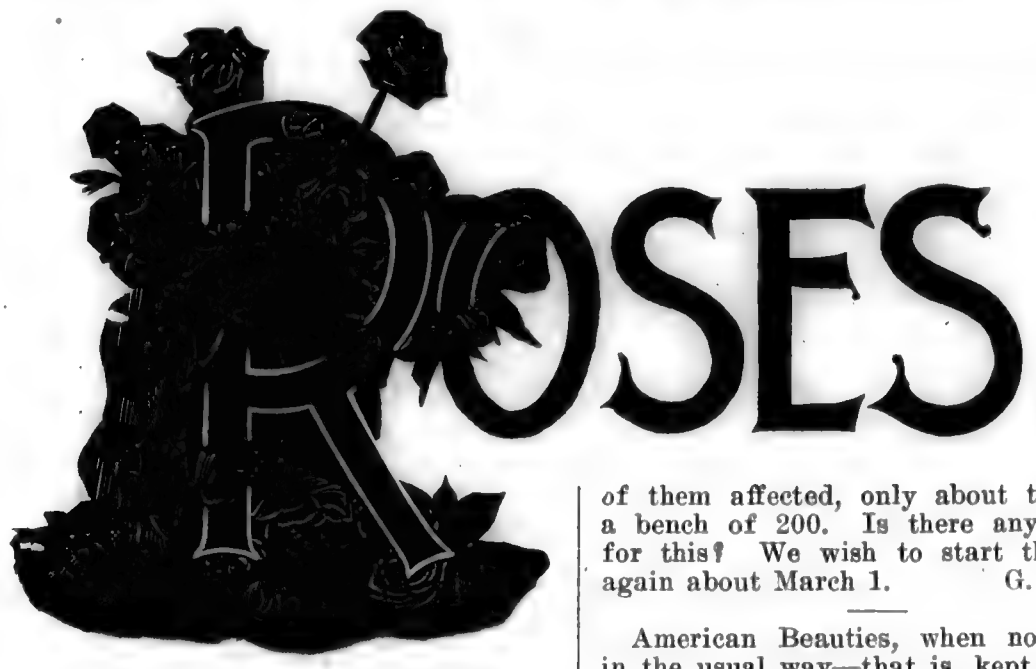
HYDROCYANIC ACID GAS.

In the REVIEW of January 21 a subscriber having white fly asks how to get rid of it, and states that he has to be careful what he fumigates with, because his residence is connected with his greenhouses. C. W. answered the letter very completely, but I am tempted to "butt in" and inquire just how the house and greenhouses are connected in this case, as I have had considerable experience with cyanide and in just such circumstances.

I am positive that there is no danger in fumigating with hydrocyanic acid gas in a greenhouse connected to the residence by a covered vestibule, wood house or summer kitchen, as is usually the case. My vestibule connection has a window in it. I open this window, lock the door of the greenhouse and close the door leading from the house to the vestibule. Any gas that comes through into the vestibule is so diluted as to be harmless. We often notice the odor in the vestibule, but think nothing of it. There is no disputing that cyanide is a most deadly poison, but I am fully satisfied that an ordinary dose, as given for insects, would not be strong enough to do any harm to anyone or anything outside the closed doors of the greenhouse. I can remember that when I first used it I was afraid to do it until late at night, when no one was going along the street past the front house.



The most peculiar and interesting thing about using hydrocyanic acid gas is that its effects are decidedly different at different times. It settles in moisture quickly, and if the foliage is wet it is likely to settle on it and burn the foliage severely, or if the plants are dry and the walks and soil quite wet, it will settle there as quickly and do the insects little or no harm. Contrary to the rules for using all other fumigants, the house and the plants should be dry when it is used.

In using cyanide, the stuff should be kept locked up until needed and the operation should be personally superintended by the proprietor. Never leave it to others. Stop and think before starting to drop the papers: Are the ventilators closed? Are the doors all fastened except those left open to go out by? Are these doors unlatched and ready? Are there any pet animals in the house? Keep your wits about you, and lock the doors when you get out at the end; then there is little or no danger about it. There is no record of anyone ever being injured by using it for fumigating. H. G.

COSMOS.

Can anyone tell we whether seed from Cosmos Lady Lenox will hybridize if planted near the Giant variety; that is, will the former variety stay true to name? H. K.

Lady Lenox should not be planted near other varieties of cosmos, if you intend keeping seed from it, as it fertilizes readily and would not come true from seed. C. W.

ROSES WEAK IN GROWTH.

Last summer I mulched my rose beds with one and one-half inches of well rotted cow manure, mixed with good garden soil and some bone meal. I started them very gently and added now and then a few degrees until the temperature reached 60 to 65 degrees. I applied the syringe properly, and on warm days I watered or syringed them twice. All my roses look rather healthy, but weak in the growth.

Enclosed you will find a few buds of American Beauties. What do you think is the cause of their diseased condition? Do you think it advisable to cut them back and how much above the soil?

W. M.

You made a mistake in running a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees. This ought to be 56 to 58 degrees. A high temperature is bound to produce weak growth. Again, the mulching is by far too thick, unless for summer stock. For winter bloomers, mulch lightly and frequently.

The buds are infested with greenfly and thrips, and as long as they are in this condition they must fail to develop properly. When fumigating, add a tablespoonful of Cayenne pepper to the fumigant. Keep a temperature as near 56 degrees at night as possible, allowing it to run up to 75 or 80 degrees, according to the amount of sunshine, but, above all, give plenty of ventilation, both night and day. Ribes.

BEAUTIES DEAD AT ROOT.

I am mailing you under separate cover two plants of Beauty roses and should like to know what is the matter with them. We have a house that we use for summer roses and the Beauties have been planted in it. The house was carried at a temperature of 65 degrees till about December 20, when we dropped it to 60 degrees. Right after Christmas we dropped it again to 55 degrees, and have been lowering it since until it is now running at 40 degrees. When I first dropped the temperature I began to withhold some of the water gradually, and as I continued to drop the temperature I also withheld more water, until they now get but very little water—just enough to keep them from shriveling.

As you will notice, they start to get black at the base of the stem and the tips stay green for some time after. Has my temperature been too high for them when I started to withhold the water? There is not a large percentage of them affected, only about twelve in a bench of 200. Is there any remedy for this? We wish to start the house again about March 1. G. W. F.

American Beauties, when not grown in the usual way—that is, kept growing all the time, from planting till they are thrown out—are a cranky crop. The most successful growers keep a temperature of 58 to 60 degrees at night and 65 to 80 degrees in the daytime, with ample ventilation, and rarely attempt to dry them off.

One thing Beauties will not tolerate, and that is denuding the plant of foliage, either by cutting too closely or pruning back. If this has been done, it will be a hard matter to start them again without losing a large percentage of the plants. I can find no trace of disease, but as the plants were dead at the roots, while the stems were green, it looks as if they had been subjected to heat and moisture while the roots were dormant. Ribes.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Registration of Rose.

A protest having been filed against the registration of a rose offered by the Dingee & Conard Co., under the name of Charles Dingee, the registration of the same is held in suspense.

Under the rules of this society, the original matter of the registration and the protest against it have been placed in the hands of Robert Simpson, certified to the undersigned by the secretary of the Rose Society as the chairman of their committee in charge of such matters, and no further action will be taken by this society pending the result of the investigation to be made by the committee of the Rose Society. W. N. Rudd, Sec'y.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Winter arrived February 1 for another visit and is celebrating with a temperature of 5 degrees above zero. In the cut flower market the supply of roses is limited as the week opens and prices have advanced. The best Maid and Bride are selling at 12 cents. Killarney and the other new varieties have gone up twenty-five per cent. Beauties bring 60 to 75 cents. If the retail demand was at all persistent these values could easily be maintained. There does not seem to be the general winter buoyancy in the retail section. A few of the society florists gather an occasional function that is national in its scope, but the fortunate ones seem to be few and far between. The rank and file are not yet enthusiastic. Some of the less securely founded establishments have crumbled, but the survival of the fit may be depended on.

Carnations, too, feel the uplift of the seasonable weather, or the Indianapolis convention, or both, for they, too, have advanced in value.

Violets did not have a good week and prices have been lower than ever. Saturday night, January 30, the best were offered at $3 per thousand. The cold snap closes the street outlet and gives little hope of higher figures. The same may be said of orchids, which have come from many unexpected sources of supply and have simply for the time being flooded the market. Prices are too low. One good effect, perhaps, is the flower's increased popularity. Orchid corsage bouquets are certainly all the rage at receptions and the opera houses. No excess of supply can ever decrease their popularity. Of all the other varieties of cut flowers little can be added to the statements of a week ago. There is no scarcity of valley, lilies, sweet peas, narcissi, hyacinths, tulips, and no advance in asking prices.

Wild smilax is reported scarce and high. All else in the green goods department, including smilax, is in heavy supply and at reasonable figure. A steady holding of values on the present average would be gratefully welcomed by the wholesalers and would do much to make a successful Easter, now only ten weeks away.

Plant Growers' Dinner.

The New York and New Jersey plant growers are fast establishing a reputation for success in about everything they touch. Their annual dinner, held at the St. Denis, January 28, was an artistic and satisfying reunion that sent its seventy celebrants home proud and happy. Anton Schultheis said the society is established on a business footing. He was twice its president. He gave Chairman Miller praise for the excellence of the arrangements, calling him "a past master in managing things." He asked the cooperation of all in adding to the membership and proposed the health of the Nestor and pioneer of plant growers, Julius Roehrs, Sr.

Julius Roehrs, Jr., the new president, made the speech of welcome. Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Craig were present, on their way to Cuba for a six weeks' tour, sailing January 30 with Julius Roehrs, Sr., and John Westcott. Mr. Craig's address was as eloquent as ever, and as humorous. He spoke of his experiences of thirty-five years ago, when he first came to New York, and feelingly of the great horticulturists of his time, Peter and John Henderson especially.

Patrick O'Mara gave one of his practical and eloquent addresses, with many a joke. He spoke of the tremendous advancement in the average intelligence of the florists, nurserymen and plantsmen, and commended the trade press, its free impartation of knowledge and its humanitarianism, and said that the happiness evolved and disseminated by florists was beyond all other influences for the betterment of humanity.

E. V. Hallock, president of the New York Florists' Club, was introduced as the first partner of John Thorpe, and in his address he claimed the honor of having discovered him. He also commended the presence of the ladies at banquets.

Herman Steinhoff told some interesting stories and J. A. Shaw read some verses that included the name of every member of the society. Fred Atkins made a splendid toastmaster.

The musical program was excellent, the floral decorations elaborate, and every lady took home a handsome souvenir, the gift of Miss Mills, one of the members and proprietor of the Hinode Floral Co., Whitestone, L. I.

Various Notes.

Arrangements for the annual dinner of the New York Florists' Club are now complete. The date has been changed to Saturday evening, February 27, so that the Roman banquet hall at Shanley's could be secured. The room is to be arranged with round tables, at which eight can be seated, so that friends can arrange in advance to have tables reserved and enjoy the dinner together. Already several tables have been spoken for. The fact that ladies are to be entertained this year seems to give general satisfaction. The price is reasonable when the menu and entertainment are considered. As the room can only seat 300, it would be well to write W. J. Elliott, chairman of the committee, at once and secure desirable seats for the occasion.

The sympathy of the wholesale cut flower section is with the veteran James Hart, in the loss of his daughter last week, and was demonstrated by the sending of many beautiful floral tokens to Madison, thirty wreaths and other costly designs among them. The young lady was a general favorite, the wife of Landlord Lyons, of Madison, and the stores of the city were closed as a mark of respect while the funeral was in progress.

James A. MacDonald now has his headquarters at 3 East Thirtieth street and says he is having a satisfactory season.

Charles Millang has severed his connection with Millang Bros. and will open a plant market on the corner of Sixth avenue and Twenty-seventh street. August Millang will continue in charge of the handsome store and wholesale cut flower and plant business at 41 West Twenty-eighth street.

O. V. Zangen has on exhibition at his store, 52 West Twenty-eighth street, the new carnation, Mrs. Pfeufer, which he will disseminate. The flower's parentage is Prosperity and Floriana; the color and odor are distinct and the size averaging over three inches. John Pfeufer, of Irvington, N. J., is the originator.

John Armsby, who has charge of the orchid range referred to in these notes last week, is an expert of thirty-five years' experience. He has worked with Lager & Hurrell, Julius Roehrs Co., and many orchid growers of England. He has a force of seven men and some 10,000 orchid plants under his care, including 8,000 cattleyas, phalænopsis, dendrobiums, lælias, cypripediums, etc. James McManus has handled the stock. As many as 2,000 Trianæ blooms have been seen there at one time.

Z. Piddington is now in charge of the conservatory of Bloomingdale Bros., the position vacated by W. W. Burnham a few weeks ago.

Sheftel hall, Third avenue and Seventeenth street, New York, the same location as in 1908, has been chosen for the annual show of the National Association of Gardeners, March 17 and 18. It promises to be a big success.

The annual exhibition of carnations will take place at the meeting of the New York Florists' Club next Monday, February 8. There will be many novelties, some of the prize winners and altogether, Secretary May says, an exhibit worth coming far to see. Exhibits may be sent by express prepaid to Secretary Young, 51 West Twenty-eighth street, who will see that they are properly staged and cared for. The exhibition should prove of great value to carnationists and draw a majority of the club membership. An enjoyable evening is assured.

The salesmen of the Lord & Burnham Co. will hold their annual dinner Saturday evening, February 6, at the Hotel St. Denis, after a meeting at 2 p. m. in the assembly room, where business problems will be discussed. Each salesman is assigned a subject to elaborate upon and defend, followed by an open discussion. Those present will be D. T. Conners, of Philadelphia; J. B. Velie, of Boston; and from New York and Irvington, W. R. Cudlip, H. P. Merrick, M. C. Wright, T. B. De Forest, George Sykes, J. F. Gorman, W. S. Stockwell, W. R. Westcott, A. H. Bates, Lyman B. Craw and L. W. C. Tuthill, the advertising manager. Good fellowship will abound.

The Lord & Burnham Co. has just received the order to build another big house for the F. R. Pierson Co., at Scarboro, a duplicate of the houses 55x350 already constructed.

Samuel Trepess, of Glencove, one of the charter members of the Nassau County Horticultural Society, has two children ill with pneumonia.

Kessler Bros. are now in their new store at 50 West Twenty-eighth street and have fine facilities for exhibition of plants and a general wholesale business.

OBITUARY.

William A. Munroe.

William A. Munroe, who has conducted a seed store at 831 Westminster street, Providence, R. I., committed suicide at his home, 243 Waldo street, on the night of January 28, his body being found in the morning by his stepson, Robert L. Van Meter, who lived with him. When the body was found it was lying on the bed with gas pouring from two burners directly above, and the door and windows tightly shut. Mr. Munroe buried his wife last April and had been feeling despondent ever since. While he left no letter or word of any kind, this is the only reason that could be given for the deed. He had conducted the store at 831 Westminster street for about twenty years.

Leander R. Peck.

Leander R. Peck, who died at Providence, R. I., January 28, was the possessor of one of the largest and most valuable collections of orchids in New England. He began his collection about ten years ago. David Marsh was placed in charge. At the time of his death his collection had cost him upwards of $50,000. Mr. Peck was born February 12, 1843, and was one of the wealthiest men in Rhode Island.

George A. Weaver.

George A. Weaver, one of the best known dealers in agricultural and horticultural tools, implements and supplies in Rhode Island, died at his home in Newport, January 26, after an illness of several weeks, due to heart trouble and pneumonia. He was the son of George B. Weaver and was born in Newport, November 30, 1854. Part of his life he spent in farming, but engaged in business with his father, succeeding him when he was but 21 years of age. His store was destroyed by fire in 1892, but a much larger building was at once erected on the same site, and a few years ago the business was incorporated as the George A. Weaver Co.

Sophia Schwerin.

Mrs. Schwerin died at Burlington, Ia., January 27, of pneumonia. She was born in Hanover, Germany, March 17, 1836, and in the early days of Burlington she and her husband ran a greenhouse and garden.

Patrick Kenefick.

Patrick Kenefick died at his son's residence, 20 Fenwick street, Halifax, N. S., January 21, at the age of 72 years. Mr. Kenefick had been in the employ of George E. Boak for the last twenty-eight years, and for the last seven years he had been manager of the Fenwick Nurseries. He is survived by his wife, three sons and five daughters.

Alfred Ashley.

Alfred Ashley, a brother of Ernest Ashley, the florist at Allentown, Pa., died January 28 at the Allentown Hospital, the result of a runaway accident a few hours before, when the delivery horse he was driving became uncontrollable through fright at a Lehigh Valley switch engine. Deceased was born in England about twenty-nine years ago and was a son of Edwin and Julia Ashley, both of whom are still living in England. He had been in this country for several years, during which time he was in the employ of his brother.

ORANGE, N. J.—The president's reception and annual smoker of the New Jersey Floricultural Society will take place February 12, at 8 o'clock. The usual display of flowers, entertainment and prominent speakers will be features of the evening.

The Weekly Florists' Review

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress March 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19 to 22, 1909.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

The ground-hog saw his shadow; February 2 was a bright day in most sections of the country.

Lawson surely is a "has been" so far as the average grower is concerned; it's down and out on most places.

Mrs. Louis E. Marquisee has published one of the late Mr. Marquisee's poems, "The Flower Divine," in a neat pamphlet.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the Review $2, $3, or occasionally $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

The senate committee on agriculture at Washington, January 3, ordered a favorable report on the bill to prevent the adulteration of insecticides, substantially as published some months ago in the Review. Violations of the act are punishable by fines ranging from $200 to $1,000, or by imprisonment, or both.

It looks as if the Enchantress family may crowd the other sorts pretty hard next season. Anyone who can grow carnations at all well can do Enchantress, and there are those who say White Enchantress is even easier to handle, with the result that cuttings of it are in greater demand than any other variety this season.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

With the final meeting of the committee at Indianapolis last week, the national flower show became a matter of history—modern history, and a pleasant memory. The artistic success was apparent the day the show opened, although it was recognized that certain ideals had not been attained. The popular success was soon demonstrated, and now the financial statement published in last week's Review shows the outcome to be exceedingly gratifying from a money point of view. Doubtless not a few of the guarantors said good-bye to the sums they paid in for preliminary expenses, when au revoir (adieu, until we meet again) would have been more apt—for the checks were back within a fortnight of the close of the show. And now the guarantors receive a dividend of ten per cent of the sums paid in, while the treasury of the S. A. F. is enriched nearly $500. What more could be asked?

But it should be recorded that the highly satisfactory financial outcome is in considerable measure due to the fact that the members of the committee not only gave their time and their energy, but paid their own expenses. Also, the audit shows that purchases made from members of the committee were almost without exception put in at cost prices. The committee has taken in the sum of $25,801.82 and paid it out again; it has given the greatest exhibition of its kind ever held in America, one that called from the pockets of the public $17,791 in admissions, without other reward than the consciousness of a task well done—and it is a pleasure to recognize its merit.

To Gurney Hill and Robert Craig is due the inception of the idea, but had it not been for the indomitable energy of J. C. Vaughan, it is safe to say, the exhibition never would have eventuated. To Chairman Kasting, all the members of the executive committee, and the assistants they rallied about them, are due the results attained, while for J. A. Valentine, the auditor, a word should be said for the study and system which gives a statement that will stand as a model for precise, complete flower show accounting.

It is inevitable that in so large an affair of this character there should be some sore spots. Forget them—they need no lotion—and watch the gentlemen who shall be selected to conduct the second national exhibition toe the mark that has been made for them.

HE WANTED TO KNOW.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time:

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Dull weather last week caused a curtailment of supplies and this resulted in a stiffer market, but the end of the week brought three days of storm, which had a disastrous effect on the demand and prices weakened again. Beauties and roses hold most firmly. The Beauty crops have not been as large as they were a fortnight ago, but quality has been rather better. Practically all the other roses are in short supply, Bride especially so. There is an abundance of Richmond of the longer grades, for the demand at present does not seem to call for the special fancy stock. Medium and short Richmond are scarce. Maid is off color, but the few days of good weather since the storm have done much to put the quality back into the roses. Killarney is in better supply than any other rose and the quality is excellent. More and more,

Killarney forces recognition as the leading rose in this market.

There has been no shortage of carnations and prices have weakened. Generally speaking, quality leaves nothing to be desired. Practically every grower is cutting as good carnations as he ever did in his life. The receipts are so heavy that the wholesalers are seldom completely sold out.

The violet market suffered as much in last week's storm as any other department of the trade. Usually Saturday sees a clean-up of all violets, but this time rain on Thursday and snow on Friday, which caused an accumulation of stock, was followed by a zero day Saturday and violets were not called for. The retailers bought only a little stock for the Saturday business and did not sell even that, so the wholesalers said Sunday gave them the dullest forenoon of the winter. The buyer has made the price on violets ever since.

Jonquils have sold excellently this week. Paper Whites are not going as well as they did, because white carnations are more abundant. Some special fancy tulips in red and yellow bring fair prices, but white tulips are sold at exceedingly low prices; it does not seem possible that they can be profitable to the forcers. Harrisii lilies now are abundant and may be had at all the way from $8 per hundred up to twice that sum; it depends on the length of stem; there are a great many short lilies about. Callas also are more abundant and there is a large supply of valley and freesias.

The early spring demand for sweet peas is beginning to be apparent. Good sweet peas sell well, while the poorer grades are hardly wanted at any price.

There is an ample supply of all green goods at usual prices.

Bright skies and warmer weather in the early part of this week gave promise of increased production and consequent lower prices.

January Weather.

January was a bad month for the growers. There were only four clear days, five partly cloudy and twenty-two that the weatherman classes as cloudy. The sunshine during the month was thirty-three per cent of the possible duration. The mean temperature was 29 degrees, against a normal of 24 degrees, and the average velocity of the wind was only fourteen miles per hour, which made a saving in the fuel bill.

The ground-hog saw his shadow February 2.

The January Business.

Reports as to January business vary considerably. Those who had fair cuts, especially of roses, did as well, or even a little better than a year ago; but those whose rose crops were off during most of the month find total sales less than a year ago. During January roses have brought fully as good prices as in the first month of any previous year, but carnation prices have been below normal, and so have the prices of most other items. During the first half of the month business was on the quiet side; then came a spurt in the demand, to be quickly ended by a couple of days with the temperature up to 65 degrees. The return of good weather gave a few days more of brisk business, only to have it shut off by the storm the last three days of the month.

Various Notes.

Thus far no one has mentioned McKinley day. There may have been such a day, somewhere, but not in the Chicago market. Good business for Valentine's day is expected, February 14. Violets are expected to be in large supply and moderate in price. Lincoln's birthday, February 12, and Washington's birthday, February 22, always bring a little extra business in the way of stock for dinner decorations.

Peter Reinberg ended his sojourn at St. Elizabeth's hospital February 3. He had been incarcerated two weeks. During his enforced absence from the council the city raised his salary as alderman $1,500 per year.

The Pittsburg Plate Glass Co. says that all doubts about the extent of the greenhouse building this season have been set at rest by the fact that last week they booked orders aggregating ten carloads of greenhouse glass, with many more inquiries which have not yet developed business.

One of the week's visitors was Walter Delmmer, son of O. R. Delmmer, Eau Claire, Wis.

E. C. Amling says that he shipped out more than 2,000 jonquils February 1, but that there is little call for daffodils.

E. E. Pieser states that several shippers of Mississippi jonquils have written that they are about ready to begin to pick and that the southern stock will come in heavily before the end of the present week.

L. Coatsworth, of the Benthey-Coatsworth Co., has returned from a few days' visit to his plant at New Castle.

The Florists' Club will have its monthly meeting this evening, Thursday, February 4, for the installation of new officers.

shipped 30,000 violets to Grand Rapids, February 3. It was Hudson river stock. Doesn't shipping violets to Grand Rapids seem like carrying coals to Newcastle?

The E. F. Winterson Co. is busily engaged this week in taking its annual inventory.

At a large reception, January 31, the engagement of Harry Lubliner and Miss Bernice Harmon was announced.

Weiland & Risch will discard Bridesmaid next season. They now have two houses of it, but next year Killarney will be the only pink rose grown. They are, of course, planting White Killarney.

George Reinberg is beginning to cut cattleyas a little more abundantly. The stock is fine, but the production has not been large thus far.

Kennicott Bros. Co. had poinsettias February 1 and during the last week in January received quite a few good chrysanthemums. There is no such thing as seasons in the flower business any more.

C. W. McKellar says the retailers are using Oncidium tigrinum quite freely for their good table work.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. is glad to see good weather again. Last week's storm interrupted the glazing now in progress on the new houses. It is the intention to have the addition at Plant B completed and planted with roses by May 1. It will be July 1 before the addition of Plant A is completed.

One of John Mangel's show windows was broken January 31 and some stock was lost.

The second floor of the building at 76 and 78 Wabash avenue, occupied by E. H. Hunt and Bassett & Washburn, has been remodeled by the removal of a stairway, which gives a needed increase in the hall space, sometimes used for the storage of empties. These two firms have just concluded the renewal of their leases and, of course, had to stand for the usual advance in rents.

S. A. Wolcott, of the Bellevue Place Co., at Batavia, has gone to Florida to spend the balance of the winter.

Sunday afternoon, January 31, there were large doings on the bowling alleys at Clark street and Bryn Mawr avenue. Sam Pearce, George and Fred Stollery, John Zech, Allie Zech, W. Graft, August Dressel and one or two other employes of Sam Pearce, bowled against an aggregation of ten Holland bulb salesmen, who were on a scouting expedition in search of the orders usually to be found in that locality. The Hollanders got the worst of it as far as the bowling goes.

C. H. Fisk now has the toniest transportation facilities on the west side. He has just bought a new high power automobile, so constructed that it can be used either as a touring car or as a delivery van, by simply changing the top.

John Muno paid a visit to his old haunts in the flower market February 1. He has grown only lettuce and radishes the last two seasons and says that even with last year's low prices for lettuce he came out as well as he had been doing with carnations. Last season lettuce brought 15 cents to 17½ cents per case most of the time, while this year it has ranged from 30 cents to 45 cents. Mr. Muno says most of the lettuce growers figure that if they can take their expenses out of five crops of lettuce, a crop of cucumbers in the spring insures a fair profit. This year they will do much better than making expenses on the lettuce. He burned fifteen to sixteen cars of coal while growing carnations and last year used only eight cars for his lettuce.

Among last week's visitors were Joseph Heacock, his son, James W. Heacock, and their foreman, Robert Jamison, of Wyncote, Pa., who visited the greenhouses of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Bassett & Washburn, Thompson Carnation Co. and Chicago Carnation Co.

O. P. Bassett, who has been in poor health since an attack of the grip a few weeks ago, is preparing for a trip to the golf grounds at Pinehurst, N. C.

The A. L. Randall Co. says the first white lilac of the season was snapped up just as eagerly as ever.

The J. B. Deamud Co. has a splendid room under the sidewalk for the storage of carnations. It's the fresh, outdoor air that does it.

Word comes from Seattle that Sam Graff likes the town so well and finds business so good that he is preparing to open a second store, to be one of the finest in the northwest.

The George M. Garland Co., Des Plaines, states that on February 1, 1909, it had booked orders for as many feet of iron gutter as were sold in the whole year of 1908. That certainly looks like business.

The George Wittbold Co. reports that both December and January gave them a larger total of sales than ever has been reached in those months in preceding years.

The J. A. Budlong estate will plant 5,000 My Maryland and 1,000 White Killarney for next season.

Among the callers this week were B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., and Martin Reukauf, with H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia.

BOSTON.

The Market.

While there have been no high prices obtained, the market has been quite well cleaned out during the last few days, and less flowers are seen left over on the market stands than usual. The commission houses also have had a quite active demand. The weather is more wintry than we have previously had this season, with cloudy days predominating. Roses are not too plentiful and are selling quite well. Killarney and Richmond are of exceptional excellence. Bride is of good quality. Its purity and the fact that it does not blow open so quickly as Killarney is inducing some growers to hold on to it. Beauties are good, and a few nice Chatenay are coming in. Carnations are cleaning up better; whites for funeral work are in good request. Prices remain about the same, $4 for fancies being top price.

Violets are arriving more abundantly and meet with a steady sale. Valley and lilies also sell well. Callas are not plentiful. Sweet peas constantly improve in quality. The better grades are quickly snapped up. Cypripediums are less plentiful, but Cattleya Trianæ is still fairly plentiful and selling well. White Lælia anceps are bringing $5 per dozen blooms. In Dutch bulbous stock, La Reine is the

Quite a few pans of hyacinths, tulips and Von Sion narcissi are arriving. Azaleas, white lilacs, cyclamens and Lorraine begonias are other flowering plants mostly in evidence.

Various Notes.

The catalogue of the Park street market exhibition is now ready and contains a splendid list of prizes, for which many entries are already being received. The display of carnations is expected to equal that seen on the occasion of the last carnation convention held in Boston.

A severe snowstorm January 30 reduced the attendance at the regular Horticultural hall lecture. The speaker, Prof. B. M. Duggar, of Ithaca, N. Y., treated the subject, "The Effects of Conditions of Growth in Certain Horticultural Plants upon Susceptibility to Fungous Diseases," in an able and exhaustive manner. February 6 "The Etherization of Plants for Forcing Purposes" will be treated by Prof. William Stuart, of Burlington, Vt.

The Providence and North Shore Horticultural Societies have been invited to meet with the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club on carnation night, February 16. A big attendance and more exhibits than ever before are already assured.

Waban Rose Conservatories, in addition to receiving heavy orders for White Killarney from the United States and Canada, report quite a demand from England, France and Germany.

J. T. Butterworth reports an unusually good demand for orchids this season. Of white Lælia anceps he is cutting a fine lot at present.

The Market.

The market conditions were somewhat mixed last week; some days stock came in rather lightly, other days plentifully. Owing to the fierce winter weather, consignments came in late and some of them were frozen. Not much stock was left over any time during the week, as the retail business was reported good in all branches, notwithstanding the cold weather. It was impossible to make plant decorations during the latter part of the week.

Friday was McKinley day and the coldest day of the week. The wholesalers did a big business in pink carnations, but the retailers reported poor sales. There was also a good demand during the week for the midseason graduating of the high schools. The blooming plant trade among the west end florists is also reported good.

At the wholesale houses we find a scarcity only in roses, there being only a few of the choice grades coming in.

Extra long, fancy Beauties have been in demand and those that came in found ready sale. Bulbous stock is coming in large lots. Romans, valley and Paper Whites are plentiful. Jonquils and daffodils are now coming in. Callas are plentiful, but Harrisii is scarce. Freesias sell well.

Carnations are fine and the demand is fully up to the supply. Enchantress and whites sell best. California violets are selling well and are of extra quality. Sweet peas go well when long-stemmed. The market is supplied with all greens. Leucothoe and galax have had a good call.

J. W. Ross, of Centralia, Ill., was a recent visitor. He reports a good trade since the first of the year.

William Ossic, of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., fell in the basement of the store and sustained a badly injured foot, which will keep him indoors for a week or ten days to receive the tender nursing of his young wife, at the home of his father-in-law, J. F. Windt, on Bayard avenue.

President W. C. Young, of the Florists' Club, has been under the doctor's care for the last week, but says he will be out for business this week.

The St. Louis Florists' Club's regular monthly meeting will take place next Thursday afternoon, February 11, at 2 o'clock. The carnation exhibition will take place at 3 o'clock, and at 5 p. m. the entertainment committee will take members and visitors to a nearby cafe, where a supper will be served, which will be followed by an entertainment and smoker, which the committee says will be something out of the ordinary.

The Market.

After the holidays and up to January 18 business was almost at a standstill, when all of a sudden came a rush of business, and it has been lively since then. Roses and carnations have been rather short and prices have held up well.

McKinley day was such a disagreeable one that not nearly the number of carnations were worn that would have been worn on a nice day. All conductors and motormen on street cars wore carnations, presented by their employers.

Various Notes.

Ben Kramer had a large picture of McKinley, tastefully decorated, in his window.

C. Niednagel has a white seedling carnation that looks good. The flower is very large.

E. L. Fenton, of Royston & Fenton, is wearing a pleased smile. It is an eleven-pound boy, born January 12.

Royston & Fenton are going to give My Maryland a trial. They expect to build an addition to their place this spring.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

It is a seller's market. The demand has increased slightly; the supply, owing to the unfavorable weather at the end of last week and the severe cold at the beginning of the present week, has fallen off. The result is that there are not enough choice flowers to fill the orders in full, and cutting is the rule. Prices have not advanced, despite these conditions, but they are firmer, resulting in higher average returns to the grower, the buyers taking without question anything approaching the desired grade.

Carnations are the most important factor in the market today. The quality is superb, the demand excellent. Winsor appears to be the favorite, with the choice whites, Enchantress, and choice reds in about equal favor. The medium and extra lengths of American Beauties are hard to get with good flowers, the specials and shorts representing this variety at present. All the other roses are in short supply, nothing in the rose line, excepting long-stemmed American Beauties, appearing abundant.

Sweet peas have become more plentiful, lavender and flesh color being obtainable in quantity, these delicate shades bringing higher average prices than the pink and white. Violets are plentiful; in fact, so plentiful that several of the local shops made special single violet offers. All the spring flowers are in good supply and prove popular. Double daffodils have come. Fine white lilac was never more abundant. Smilax continues a drug. Cattleyas are fine and plentiful. Local demand is brisk, shipping fair.

The Indianapolis Convention.

The carnation delegates from this district who attended the Indianapolis convention of the American Carnation Society were Samuel S. Pennock and S. S. Skidelsky, of this city; Joseph Heacock, James Heacock, and Robert Jamison, of Wyncote; Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, and William Swayne, of Kennett. The features of the convention, from a Philadelphia standpoint, were the election of Albert M. Herr as president of the society, and the capture of first prize for 100 white carnations by the Strafford Flower Farm (Edward A. Stroud), with Lady Bountiful, from seven competitors.

Samuel S. Pennock, in reviewing the exhibition, said it was a splendid show, the flowers all showing a high degree of culture. The hall was admirably adapted for the purpose, the attendance good, the interest keen. Mr. Pennock appreciated the compliment shown him by the society when he was asked to be one of the three judges chosen on the ground.

Club Meeting.

At the monthly meeting of the Florists' Club, February 2, there was an excellent display of stock. Campbell Bros. Co., of Penllyn, exhibited White Perfection, Enchantress and Pink Imperial carnations, also new yellow Cineraria stellata. William Kleinheinz, of Lynwood Hall, showed Sarah Hill, White Perfection and Pink Imperial carnations. W. F. Lacroix, of Buena, N. J., made a fine display of De Marley white lilac. The Pennock-Meehan Co. staged a vase of White Killarney in good condition which had been received one week previously from the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass. The Strafford Flower Farm exhibited six or seven vases of carnations, including Lady Bountiful, Winsor, White Perfection, Beacon, Enchantress and Mrs. Burnett. There also was an attractive exhibit of Stock Beaute of Nice.

Albert M. Herr gave an interesting address on the Indianapolis carnation convention. Messrs. Gorman, Weaver and other Lancaster florists were present.

A Carnation Range.

fered and it was not until the close of last month that a forced march was made on Hatboro, via lower section of Bucks county. The pleasure and profit derived from the visit fully repaid the effort.

There are two houses, each 35x302 feet, and one house of half this length and the same width, the balance to be completed next summer. They are all planted with carnations—not small, ordinary carnations, but carnations of the kind that produce the high grade flowers for which the Philadelphia market is becoming noted. The young stock bench and the propagating bench gave abundant evidence that the quality will be maintained if care and skill count for anything.

The quantities and varieties grown, given by young Mr. Weiss, are as follows: 1,500 Aristocrat, 1,500 Robert Craig, 5,000 Winsor, 6,000 Enchantress, 5,000 Lieut. Peary, 1,500 Beacon, 2,500 Queen, 1,000 White Perfection and 2,500 Mrs. T. W. Lawson, making a total of 26,500 plants.

The crops have been steady, the highest month reaching 47,000 flowers; the lowest was 32,000. A bench of sweet peas in the propagating house was in fine condition for blooms next month.

It is not only in the arrangement of the houses and growing of plants that Henry Weiss impresses his visitor, but also in the neatness of arrangement shown in the smallest detail. Mr. Weiss fully deserves to be called capable. He can do all sorts of things and do them well. Take his boiler pit, for instance. The floor of this pit is twelve feet below the ground level. Under it water was found and a fine well, seven feet deep, was excavated. This well has been fitted up with a steam pump and overflow pipes, fully adapted to all his requirements. Two eighty horse-power return tubular boilers furnish steam for the houses. The product of this plant has been handled by the Leo Niessen Co. since cutting was commenced. The flowers are considered among the best coming into the city.

The visitors left to the tinkle of the telephone bell and a hurry-up call for a shipment of carnations, to be in readiness for McKinley day.

The Violet King.

Rodman M. Eisenhart, of Torresdale, Pa., is generally recognized as the leading local grower of double violets. For over a score of years Mr. Eisenhart has produced double violets of the finest quality; first Queen Louise and now Lady Campbell. In the good old days when Marie Louise was grown to perfection around Philadelphia, Mr. Eisenhart gained his reputation, and when the ravages of disease attacked this standard variety so that it could no longer be grown profitably here, Mr. Eisenhart transferred his loyalty to Lady Campbell, now the standard double violet in and about Philadelphia. He has one large range of seven houses entirely planted with Lady Campbell violets. The plants are all field grown, carefully lifted and replanted in the fall into the violet beds in this range. They have suffered, as all violets here have suffered, from the warm weather immediately following their replanting, but they are now producing fine flowers and bid fair to do better as the season advances.

A number of small houses, requiring less heat, are planted with single violets, intended not only for the flowers but also to afford foliage for the doubles. Among the single varieties Princess of Wales is favored. Luxonne, though a good sort, is on its last year, as a new strain imported from Germany by J. D. Eisele is considered promising. It has a pleasing habit, with flowers of deep, rich color, borne on long stems.

Mr. Eisenhart claims that the violet requires even greater care than any of our other standard varieties of flowers, the least infringement of nature's laws being instantly resented. He points with just pride to his record of many years as a successful violet grower, believing that it indicates pluck and hard work to an even greater degree than skill and good sense.

Various Notes.

Charles Henry Fox, in discussing the pink roses, said he had not used any Bridesmaid this season, Killarney and Mrs. Jardine being superior. Fancy Killarney are offered instead of Beauties.

Victor Retinour, of Harrisburg, Pa., late with John C. Gracey and Fred Ehret, has purchased the flower shop of J. A. Wolff, son of Julius Wolff, Jr., at Ridge avenue and Dauphin street.

W. B. Hoffman, Sixty-ninth and Woodlawn avenue, has closed his store.

Eugene Weiss, of Hatboro, Pa., is once more about, caring for the carnations and roses in his greenhouses.

The Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., have placed an order with the King Construction Co. for two carnation houses, 30x100 feet each. These will be used as ends to their present houses, making them each 30x400. A corridor house, running from the mammoth house of American Beauties to the office, also is planned.

Edward J. Fancourt, secretary of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., has just been married to Miss Hodson, of Roxborough, Philadelphia. Felicitations!

M. Rice & Co. report larger orders than at any time during the last six months.

The Henry F. Michell Co. has offered a silver tray for the best twelve pots of Easter lilies exhibited at the Boston flower growers' exhibition February 16. The trophy will be appropriately ornamented with Easter lilies and asparagus.

The Century Flower Shop and Felix Meyers held special violet sales January 30, handsome bunches of single violets being offered at attractive prices.

DAYTON, OHIO.

Trade Good.

It would be impossible to give anything but a good report of the trade for the last two weeks; business during this period was the best it has been since the holidays. Dull weather has prevailed throughout the month, and its effects, on the rose crop especially, have been most noticeable. Therefore it was utterly impossible to meet the demand for roses, while the carnations also fell off to a certain degree; still they were quite plentiful, though not equal to the demand. There was an unusual amount of funeral work last week and callas and longiflorums were used in abundance, with a good call for Romans, narcissi, jonquils and violets. Taking all things into consideration, business during the month of January was encouraging and far better than that of January, 1908.

The darker shades of carnations sold well for McKinley day. The outlook for St. Valentine's day is good. Orders are being booked and violets seem to be the most popular flower on this occasion.

January 29 and 30 one of the fiercest blizzards Dayton has witnessed for a long time swept the city.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held its regular monthly business meeting at the establishment of J. F. Young.

H. H. Ritter has a large wedding decoration for this week, and has no complaint to offer in regard to last week's business.

The Miami Floral Co. has in the last year been experimenting on cold storage lilies, and has made it a point to have them all the year around. This has been found to be a paying proposition. The company finds it does not pay to grow Harrisii and has cut them out, on account of so many of the bulbs being diseased.

H. D. Rohrer, of Lancaster, Pa., was a visitor January 18. From here Mr. Rohrer went to Richmond and New Castle, and thence to the carnation show at Indianapolis.

The Dayton Floral Co. reports that during the last ten days business has been most satisfactory, having in that time used 20,000 carnations alone. Some elaborate floral designs were put up.

James Wolf, formerly of the Wolf Ventilating Co., of this city, was brutally murdered on the night of January 24, at Columbus, O. Mr. Wolf, having severed his connections here a few years ago, went to Columbus to accept a position in a nut and bolt factory. Some time ago he caught his arm in the machinery, which resulted in the loss of his fingers. After this the company gave him the position as night watchman, which position he held until the time he was murdered, for the small sum in his pocket. While interested in the Ventilator factory Mr. Wolf traveled through the country putting up the machines, and was liked by all in the trade.

A number of Dayton florists have been bumped by what we term a hobo florist, who gives his name as Fred Herzog. He is of German descent, medium build and has a heavy mustache. He tells a heart-rending tale of hard luck and has appealed to several of our local florists for work, and in many cases it has been given him. He keeps his position for a short time and appears to be an honest man; but at a time when he has a good opportunity to get the best of his employer financially he disappears and is not seen afterwards. We have since heard that he has been to other towns and carried on the same kind of business, so it is our wish to warn our fellow tradesmen to beware of him.

We have had plenty of chances to buy things lately. Among the visitors were: Mr. Lembke, with W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; Geo. W. Cohen, with Wertheimer Bros., New York; A. Rolker, New York; Chas. F. Meyer, New York; C. F. Harrison, with the Pulverized

DETROIT.

The Market.

We are at present having some real winter weather, but there is work enough so that everyone can keep hustling and keep warm. Weddings seem to be more in vogue again; at least, there has been more call for flowers for weddings than since before the holidays. Funeral work has also been calling for many orders.

The local wholesale houses have been receiving some fine roses, with the quality improving daily. In pink the La Detroit is at present carrying off all honors. Richmond and Rhea Reid are both good in reds. Carnations are a little off crop, but this is offset by the generous supply of bulbous stock arriving daily. So far the latter is cleaning up without any trouble. There has been a good demand for the fine double Mt. Clemens violets. Green of all kinds is plentiful.

McKinley's birthday created only a slight demand for carnations in this market for local use, but shipments for this day were heavy, especially to Buffalo.

Club Meeting.

Detroit will have one of the important fall shows of 1909, if the action taken at the club meeting February 1 results as is expected. Arrangements have not yet been begun, but everyone was told to get ready.

On motion of J. F. Sullivan, the club endorsed William Dilger for park commissioner. A petition for submission to Mayor Breitmeyer was drawn up for the signature of the club members.

The sick committee reported George Rackham seriously ill. H. Knope is getting along nicely.

Various Notes.

At a recent meeting of the Florists' Club a vase of carnations of the Harlowarden color attracted considerable attention. These were August Von Boeselager's new seedling, Clara. The blooms shown gave every promise that the variety was a good acquisition and worth further consideration.

The annual carnation show of the Detroit Florists' Club is to be held in the quarters of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange on the evening of February 15. Introducers of new varieties are invited to participate. All consignments are to be made in care of the Exchange.

The Junior Hop at Ann Arbor this week kept Cousins & Hall, of that city, busy. They received a large shipment of violets and carnations from the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange.

The only Detroiters at the Indianapolis carnation convention were Harry Balsley and Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Maynard. The latter report a very enjoyable time. After leaving the convention city, they stopped off at Fort Wayne, where several days were spent at Vesey's.

H. S.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—J. W. Ingalls & Co. were burned out January 7, all stock being frozen that was not destroyed in the burning of the greenhouses. The business went on as usual, a temporary store being secured.

NEW ORLEANS.

After two weeks of spring weather we are visited now by the tail of the blizzard which is raging all over the country. The most of the florists' greenhouses down here are not exactly constructed to face zero weather and when a fierce, cold, north wind penetrates through every crack of the house, we have a hard time to keep at least a comfortable temperature inside, even if the thermometer registers only 32 degrees outside.

Plants in gardens have been so far touched very little, the weather having been dry the few previous days.

At the annual meeting of the Danneel Park Commission, Charles R. Panter was elected superintendent. M. M. L.

RANDOM JOTTINGS.

W. A. Wettlin, of Hornell, N. Y., says business was swifter when his town had a longer name and he thinks the city fathers made a mistake in abbreviating it. He keeps up a fine showing and, with the arrival of the robin, looks for a renewal of good business.

W. Ordway, of Hornell, has rented part of his store to a piano concern, rightly believing that music and flowers harmoniously commingle.

A. H. Woeppel, of Corning, N. Y., has the material for two additional houses and the choice of a fine frontage upon which to erect them. He has a ten-acre tract that is likely to become very valuable in a short time, as the town is growing in his direction. He grows Richmond to perfection and is also quite successful with Marie Louise violets. Miss Woeppel is a floral artist of local fame.

H. N. Hoffman, of Elmira, N. Y., says the United States Cut Flower Co. had the best December in its history and that the demand since that time has been steady. His home plant is in excellent shape. Richard King is the able foreman and Charles Edgar the well-known shipper at the U. S. Co.'s extensive establishment. The new carnation, Marchioness, will be largely planted in this locality if it behaves as well as it does at home. It is a fine shipper.

CARTHAGE, MO.—C. H. Hollied, formerly in business at Maryville and later with Brenneman at Webb City, is now employed at Finn's greenhouses, and Miss Nell Hollied is in charge of Mr. Finn's retail sales at the store on Main street.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-seventh annual convention, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22 to 24. 1909.

MARKET garden trade is reported to be opening up in good shape.

MAIL order houses in the seed line are satisfied with January receipts, and the outlook for February is hopeful.

SOME varieties of muskmelon, notably the much-called-for Osage, are scarce. Monte Cristo watermelon is also hard to get hold of.

VISITED CHICAGO: Wm. Hagemann, New York; Harry A. Bunyard, with Arthur T. Boddington, New York; A. J. Pieters, Hollister, Cal.

THERE seems to be enough seed on hand to supply all the onion set growers, notwithstanding that a largely increased acreage will be planted, if reports are reliable.

LATE as is the date, considerable quantities of German valley pips still are arriving. On the boat from Hamburg reaching New York January 26 were 187 cases for H. F. Darrow and eighty-four cases for Vaughan's Seed Store.

WORD comes from California that most of the seed growers have had a touch of the troubles incident to high water. Not only have the farms "up the river" been flooded, but the ditches in the valley are reported to have overflowed.

IN the matter of a consignment of Scarlet Globe Forcing radish, exported November 28 by Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co., Paris, entered at Boston, the appraisers added the cost of packing, but did not advance the invoice price of 75 francs per hundredweight.

THE senate committee on agriculture at Washington, January 3, ordered a favorable report on the bill to prevent the adulteration of insecticides, substantially as published some months ago in the REVIEW. Violations of the act are punishable by fines ranging from $200 to $1,000, or by imprisonment, or both.

LOUISVILLE is due to be heard from in the onion set situation. If, as is supposed, Louisville is pretty well sold out and has none hid away, prices of sets will go higher than they went last year. From all reports, onion sets have kept well and the shipments are giving good satisfaction to the purchaser. At Chicago, shipments are being pushed forward.

THE wholesale seedsmen report good business. There is a great hustle on to get out the orders so that the smaller merchant will be in readiness when his time comes. There is a good deal of complaint at the long delay in getting the appraisers' hands off of articles that are badly needed. In most instances the appraisers' store gets the bags that contain the things that are needed most, and it takes weeks, sometimes, to get them out.

THE creditors of the Templin Co., Calla, O., received, February 1, a first dividend of eight per cent.

THE latest steamers from Europe have brought numerous belated consignments of seeds.

THE Holland bulb salesmen appear to be raking the country with a fine-toothed comb in their quest for orders.

IF the ground-hog is a good weather prophet, the seed season will drag along for the next six weeks and end in a grand rush.

THE obituary column on page 17 this week gives notice of the death of Wm. A. Munroe, Providence, R. I., and Geo. A. Weaver, Newport, R. I.

ON the Florida, the Italian steamer that sank the Republic and was herself badly damaged, there were two small consignments of seeds, one for Vaughan's Seed Store and one for the Merchants' Dispatch.

THERE is a first-class call for aster seeds in trade quantities again this season. Last summer florists made little money on their aster crops, largely because of the drought, but it seems they will plant in larger quantities for the approaching season.

THE mail-order houses say January gave the season a good start, the number and size of the orders received comparing favorably with the record for January in any other year. The catalogues were out early and the weather was, for the most part, favorable, which in a measure may account for the prompt and satisfactory opening, but nearly every seedsman is optimistic and looks for a banner season.

ARTHUR T. BODDINGTON, New York, says the canna business is becoming a large item. He expects to sell over a half million roots this spring.

SEEDSMEN GREET THE CANNERS.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Feb. 2.—The second annual convention of the National Canners' Association—and that includes as well the National Canned Goods and Dried Fruit Brokers' Association, the Machinery and Supplies Association and the National Food Manufacturers' Association—opened here today in the State armory. From one end of the country to the other have come canners and their allies, numbering more than 1,500, crowding every hotel in the city to its capacity.

This is one of the important events of

DREER'S SUPERB ASTERS

Dreer's Superb Late Branching Asters.

We offer below but a few of the more important Asters. For complete list see our current Wholesale Price List, which also contains everything in Seeds, Plants and Bulbs that a Florist needs. Copies free on application.

Dreer's Superb Late Branching

The finest Aster for late August and September blooming.

The plants form strong, branching bushes, 2 to 2½ feet high, bearing on long, strong stems their handsome Chrysanthemum-like flowers, which, under ordinary cultivation, average 5 inches across. The form of the flowers, together with the length of the stems, places them at the head of Asters for cutting. We offer eight beautiful and distinct colors, viz.:

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
Azure Blue. A rich deep lavender	25c	$1.00
Pure White. Extra fine stock	25c	1.00
Shell Pink. An exquisite shade	25c	1.00
Rose Pink. A very desirable color	25c	1.00
Deep Rose. Rich and brilliant	25c	1.00
Deep Purple. Royal deep blue	25c	1.00
Lavender. A pale grayish-lavender	25c	1.00
Crimson. Very rich	25c	1.00
Finest Mixed. All the colors	25c	.75

Dreer's New Aster "Pink Beauty"

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
A magnificent cut-flower variety, in bloom from early August until well on in September; 24 to 30 inches high; flowers average 4 inches across, on long, strong stems. Color a delicate blush pink, and pronounced by experts to be the finest pink mid-season sort yet introduced	50c	$4.00

Dreer's New Late Aster "Crimson King"

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
A superb new late-branching variety, with perfectly double flowers of rich, rosy crimson, full of fire. Fine for cutting, showing up well under artificial light	50c	$4.00

Crego's Giant Comet Asters

Magnificent fluffy flowers, averaging over 5 inches across, with long, strong stems; the finest of this type. Comes into bloom in August, continuing well into September, and, unlike most of the Comet sorts, stands when cut and is a good flower to ship. We offer two colors, our own saving from stock received from the originator.

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
Shell Pink	50c	$4.00
Snow White	50c	4.00

Early Wonder Asters

This is the earliest Aster in cultivation, being in full bloom when Queen of the Market is only in bud, frequently coming into bloom in late June. Flowers larger than Queen of the Market, borne on long, strong stems. Very valuable for cutting.

	Tr. pkt.	Oz.
Early Wonder White. Pure glistening white	40c	$2.00
Early Wonder Pink. A good, clear pink	40c	2.00

Late Aster "Violet King"

A new and distinct color in the Late Branching class, fine large double flowers of a pleasing shade of violet, a strong, free grower and very free flowering	40c	2.00

the year in the view of a good many seedsmen and nearly every grower and jobber of note seems to be on deck to meet customers. Many have their wives and families with them. Creditable seed exhibits are made by the Leonard Seed Co., D. M. Ferry & Co., J. B. Rice Seed Co., S. D. Woodruff & Son, Everett B. Clark Seed Co., and others. Each of the firms who make the canners' trade a specialty have two, three or more representatives looking after their interests. Some of these representatives have badges on their coats, so that the canners attending can see at a glance who to go to when desirous of placing an order for peas, corn, tomatoes, etc. The energy displayed by these representatives would indicate that the canners are decidedly worth going after. It is remarkable how great an increase in the quantities of seeds needed by canners has developed in the last three years and there seems to be no sign that it will decrease.

Unlike many conventions, this one's activities are centralized in one place—the big armory. Here is a veritable beehive of mechanical development, the large drill shed having been converted into an immense cannery, where almost every process known to the industry is exemplified by various types of machines. The machinery exhibit is said to be the largest and best, and the facilities for display the most complete the association has ever held.

In the assembly hall of the armory the formal sessions of the convention are held. This year, these will be less elaborate than in former years, in order that the machinery exhibit may claim more attention. The scant time given for inspection of machinery has been a matter of some complaint in years past, a fact which the committee on arrangements has carefully heeded, much to the satisfaction of the seedsmen present.

Gladiolus Bulbs

For forcing, and planting during the spring. By ordering bulbs now, you receive not only the best selection, but the advantage of the following low prices:

Gladiolus America

A few points of merit

COLOR: A beautiful, soft, flesh pink, very light and much like Enchantress Carnation, except slightly tinged with lavender, which gives it the delicate coloring of the most beautiful Lælias. Words fail to do justice in describing this grand and glorious color; it must be seen to be appreciated. PURPOSES: For florists' use, its color makes it everything to be desired; delicate, attractive and absolutely new; no other color in Gladiolus like it or one-half so beautiful. It has created a sensation in the cut flower markets, selling for more than five times the price of other varieties.

America. The best commercial pink in existence. 1st size bulbs, $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000; $165.00 per 5000.

Augusta. Lovely, pure white with blue anthers. 1½ to 2½ in., $2.00 per 100; $15 per 1000; $70 per 5000.

Blue Jay (Baron Hulot). Finest blue Gladiolus yet seen. It is a rich, deep color of indigo shade. The only real blue Gladiolus on the market. $10 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis. Extra fine red variety. 1½ to 2½ in., $1.50 per 100; $12 per 1000; $50.50 per 5000.

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosy crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

HAARLEM'S JUBILEE SHOW.

The Holland bulb growers and nurserymen will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their trade organization by a jubilee exhibition at Haarlem next year.

The opening date is March 23, 1910. Consequently it will be open before Easter, to be closed after Whitsuntide (May 15). The show will be divided into a permanent exhibition in the open and three temporary shows in buildings. The coöperation has been obtained of Boskoop, Aalsmeer and other important horticultural places and the show will therefore afford a splendid opportunity of giving a complete idea of Dutch horticulture, especially as far as bulb culture, nursery stock, trees, shrubs and flowers are concerned. The first temporary show is to be held at Easter time, the second about the middle of April, during the flowering season of the bulb fields, and the third in the first days of May. Prince Henry of the Netherlands has consented to be the patron of the exhibition. Queen Wilhelmina and the Queen Mother are patrons of the society.

ENCLOSED you will find a check for the renewal of my subscription to the REVIEW. I let it run out a few weeks ago and I have missed the paper very much. I think it is the best trade paper published.—H. C. HOLMES, Morristown, N. J.

ALLOW me to say that the REVIEW is a very welcome guest and its coming is always awaited with interest. I cannot understand how anyone in the trade can do business without it. To those who are in doubt I would recommend, "Try the REVIEW."—A. D. ZIMMERMAN, Ottawa, Kan.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Trade conditions do not change and the continued dullness causes the retailers to do considerable complaining. Roses of all kinds are scarce. There is plenty of bulb-stock, however, and violets are a continued glut. Conditions generally are not pleasant to write about.

Various Notes.

Miss Carrie Jordan has purchased the market stand formerly owned by John Foss, in the Pittsburg market.

George Huscroft, of Steubenville, O., has the sympathy of his host of friends in the loss of his mother. Mrs. Huscroft was one of the oldest and best known residents of Steubenville. She leaves her husband, three sons and two daughters. The sons are all connected with the flower business. Hoo-Hoo.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The bright, spring-like weather of Monday and Tuesday brought all stock, which was retarded by the dark days of the previous week, into the market by the middle of the week, and it looked as though there might be an oversupply. But things took a decided change, for on Thursday it again became cloudy and by night we were treated to a blizzard, which delayed traffic and put telephones out of order. This was followed by a fall in the temperature. By Sunday the market was well cleaned up in all good stock, and most of the growers report a steady increase in quantity from then on.

Various Notes.

All arrangements for the Florists' Club dance, February 11, have been completed and, to judge by the numerous tickets already disposed of, the affair promises to be a grand success. The committee in charge guarantees everybody a fine time, so do not miss it.

The storm of last Thursday and Friday caused considerable damage with some of our growers. The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. mourns the loss of a smokestack, which managed to damage part of three greenhouses and the stock therein, at their North Milwaukee plant. The loss is reported to be quite heavy. Gust Mueller, of the Mueller & Schroeder Co., at the northwest end of the city, reports the loss of fifty lights of glass. Nic Zweifel, of North Milwaukee, who returned from the Indianapolis carnation convention Sunday morning, also missed quite a bit of glass, destroyed by the storm.

C. C. Pollworth's team, which makes the trip from the greehouses to the store, got stuck last Friday and did not reach downtown till all the stock was frozen.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. says that bulbous stock is coming in heavily and that there will be no let-up for some time. E. O.

AMHERST, MASS.

E. O. Orpet, of South Lancaster, gave an instructive talk before the floricultural classes at Massachusetts Agricultural College January 27. Mr. Orpet spoke of the history of orchids, with special reference to the rapid increase in their production by American growers during the last ten years. He also covered the cultural problems in a clear, concise manner, and showed the blooms of many specimens, which gave the students a splendid idea of differences in genera and species. The hour proved too short a time for the consideration of the subject, and Mr. Orpet met the students informally in the evening and answered many questions regarding orchid culture. February 3 George Sinclair, of Holyoke, spoke on chrysanthemum culture. The observation trip January 30 was to the extensive commercial range of A. N. Pierson, at Cromwell, Conn.

French Hall, the new instruction building for the departments of floriculture and market gardening, and the new greenhouse range, are nearly completed, and will be dedicated February 22. John K. L. M. Farquhar, of Boston, will be

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

WILLIAM A. PETERSON, Chicago, is wintering in Florida, the Bahamas and Cuba.

THE demand for white pine seedlings in the eastern states will this spring exceed the supply. Wide-awake nurserymen are sowing more and more Pinus Strobus each year, to enable them to help fill the coming rush of orders.

THE British government has decided to plant 9,000,000 acres of land with forest trees, the work to be spread over a period of eighty years. It will furnish employment for 17,000 men each winter, it is estimated, and will eventually yield an income of $7,500,000 to the government. Real lumbering operations will not commence for forty years.

A COMPANY to be known as the Williston Fruit & Nursery Co. has recently been organized at Williston, N. D., and has acquired a tract of irrigated land, a large part of which will be planted the coming season. The object of the company is to grow small fruits, as well as all kinds of nursery stock. The head of the company is an experienced nurseryman. The nursery is located about a mile north of Williston, a city of about 3,500 inhabitants, near the State Experimental Farm and in the heart of the big Williston irrigation project, which is being installed by the United States Reclamation Service. The soil is fertile; the transportation facilities are excellent, both by rail and by water, and there is an exhaustless supply of good coal in close proximity.

TENNESSEE NURSERYMEN.

The Tennessee Nurserymen's Association, at its final session at the Tulane hotel, Nashville, January 27, unanimously elected the following officers, whose names were submitted by the committee on nominations: President, J. C. Hale, of Winchester; vice-president for West Tennessee, Willie Hastings, Mansfield; vice-president for Middle Tennessee, W. Y. C. Grant, Columbia; vice-president for East Tennessee, A. J. Smith, Knoxville, and secretary and treasurer, S. M. Bently, Knoxville.

The resolutions offered by the committee on resolutions endorsed the efforts of Col. John Thompson, commissioner of agriculture, in behalf of the horticultural and nursery interests of Tennessee. The legislature was also asked to appropriate $5,000 to assist in carrying on the fight being made by the state board of entomology against insects and fungous diseases. The resolutions were adopted.

A LIME-SULPHUR WASH.

Kindly let me know in what proportion lime and sulphur should be used for spraying apple trees. F. A.

Lime and sulphur may be used in equal proportions in making a lime-sulphur wash for fruit trees. I believe, however, that the lime is fully as important as the sulphur, if not more so, and besides, when large quantities are made, the expense of the latter is considerable. I, therefore, use ten pounds of lime to nine pounds of sulphur, and in addition to these two ingredients I use about one-half the quantity of salt, not so much because of the efficacy of salt as a destroyer, but because it adds to the adhesive properties of the whole. In the application of anything destructive of San Jose scale, it is important that what is applied shall cover the bark completely, or the pest will find means of escape in sufficient numbers to multiply. [Gardening in California—Landscape and Flower, by John McLaren, superintendent of Golden Gate park, San Francisco; A. M. Robinson, San Francisco, publisher; price, $3.75 net.]

This is a notable volume of 400 pages, with 154 illustrations. The author opens with a chapter on location of a site for house and garden and follows with instructions on planning the grounds. Then appear nine planting plans, covering various sized plots from a lot 25x120 feet up to a ten-acre tract. The chapter on construction of roads and walks, preparing the ground and planting and transplanting is especially valuable, giving the results of many years of experience in dealing with adverse conditions in Golden Gate park. His notes on the various trees, shrubs and plants are arranged alphabetically under the various headings, and in each case cover the special uses of the subject, in what situation it does best, with what others it most satisfactorily combines and in conclusion it gives a brief description of the method of propagation.

In the chapter on the water garden there is some practical instruction on the forming of ponds and lakes. Under the heading "Sand Reclamation" is a valuable record of the author's experience in turning a thousand acres of drifting sea sand into the present beautiful park. Being exposed to the full sweep of the winds from the Pacific ocean, the sand drifted like snow during heavy gales. To bind the sand was the first problem. After several grasses and shrubs had been tried, success was achieved through the use of the sea bent grass, Amophylla arenaria, the seeds of which were imported from France. He tells of the remarkable superiority of this grass as a sea sand-binder and how it even grew luxuriantly in sand that had been scraped from below high water mark to raise a road level. It seems almost impossible for drifting sand to bury this grass so deeply that the crowns cannot push through to the surface, and the masses of strong, fleshy roots anchor the grass so firmly that the fiercest gales have but little effect on its growth. The method of propagating and using this grass in sand reclamation is given in detail. After the sand had been bound many different trees were tried as windbreaks, but the Monterey cypress and Monterey pine were the only ones that stood the test of the storms in the most exposed places, though quite a few others survived in sheltered hollows. This record of the work of turning a waste of sea sand into one of the most beautiful parks in the world will rouse the enthusiasm of any gardener, though it is written with the simplicity and brevity characteristic of the man who has done the work. The book is an important addition to

OUR FERTILIZERS ARE PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR FLORISTS' USE and are analyzed by an expert chemist to see that they are free from all acids. You can depend upon their being just what you want, AND SAFE. You ought to have these on hand at all times, ready for use.

PURE BONE MEAL

The brand we are selling has no superior. It is an absolutely uniform grade of pure bone, guaranteed free from acids, and is sold at as low rates as many inferior brands, which cannot be used with safety in greenhouse work.

Guaranteed Analysis.	Per ct.
Ammonia	4 to 5
Phosphoric acid	23 to 26
Equal to bone phosphate	50 to 60
12 per cent immediately available and soluble in water.

Price

50 lb. bag	$ 1.25
100 lb. bag	2.00
200 lb. bag	3.50
1000 lbs., ½ ton	15.00
2000 lbs., 1 ton	27.50

HUNT'S PURE BONE FLOUR

This is identical with our Pure Bone Meal, except it is ground to a very fine dust or flour, making it especially valuable for use in liquid form or for mixing with other fertilizers when quick action is required.

17 per cent immediately available and soluble in water.

Price

50 lb. bag	$1.35	500 lb. bag	$ 9.00
100 lb. bag	2.50	1000 lbs., ½ ton	16.00
200 lb. bag	4.00	2000 lbs., 1 ton	30.00

BLOOD AND BONE

Preferred by many of our best and largest growers owing to its great percentage of ammonia and available phosphate, which makes it quick acting. It is a mixture of pure tankage or blood and the best grade of Bone Meal in proportions to stimulate root action and bring out the best color in the blooms.

Guaranteed Analysis	Per cent
Ammonia	6½ to 7½
Bone phosphate	25 to 35

Price

50 lb. bag	$1.85	500 lb. bag	$ 9.00
100 lb. bag	2.50	1000 lb. bag, ½ ton	16.00
200 lb. bag	4.00	2000 lb. bag, 1 ton	30.00

PULVERIZED SHEEP MANURE

One of the most effective of fertilizers and largely used by the best growers, both as a top dressing and in the manure tanks. The raw material for Hunt's Sheep Manure is the droppings taken from solid floor sheep corrals. Ordinary manures are largely shoveled up from the ground and contain a large proportion of soil for which you pay, but from which you get nothing except possibly weed seed. A trial order will convince the most skeptical of the superiority of our brand.

Guaranteed Analysis.	Per ct.
Ammonia	3¼ to 4
Available phos. acid	1½ to 2
Actual potash	1¾ to 2½

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Not in twenty years has this part of California received such a bounteous supply of rain as has been sent to us this season. During the first twenty-five days in January it rained on all but two days, and although the showers have ceased somewhat the end is apparently not yet. The effect has been disastrous to the retail trade. There has been practically no transient trade, as the crowds that usually throng the sidewalks on pleasant afternoons have been noticeable by their absence, and most of the business has been done by telephone. The weather conditions have moderated, however, and although it is a shade colder, the rain has lessened somewhat.

Carnations are not in heavy supply; neither are roses; but the demand is so light that the retailers have considerable trouble in disposing of even what they do receive. Paper Whites and other sorts of narcissi are in large supply and move slowly. Daffodils are more plentiful and sell well. Quantities of yellow flowered acacia and Japanese quince are being used in decorative work, and green stuff of all kinds fills the bill when a cheap effect is desired.

Funeral work, which usually is rather brisk at this season of the year, is rather a thing of the past with many retailers. And the absence of funeral work always is felt in the market for the best grades.

TRAINING TOMATOES.

But One Right Way.

The best system for training hothouse tomatoes is one point in tomato culture upon which there is no longer any difference of opinion among experienced growers. There is but one right way and that is the single-stem method, allowing the plant to grow up like a tree and keeping all branches nipped out as soon as they are long enough to catch with the point of the scissors. It is not necessary to leave branches for the fruit to come on, because the fruit clusters or blooms grow right from the main stalk, like a leaf.

All the branches would bear fruit, also, in the same way, but a single stalk with five to ten clusters of fruit on it is all that one plant can support to good advantage. Plants allowed two or three stems instead of one require more time to get to bearing, on account of the larger family the root has to provide for, and a three-stem plant takes up just the same space on the trellis as three single-stem plants. Only so many stems can be crowded into a house, no matter how many stems are allowed to each plant.

Largest and Earliest Fruit.

The fruit will also be a trifle larger, as well as earlier, where the single-stem system is used. Recent experiments where plants in the same house were trained to one, two and three stems proved that the single-stemmed plants were earlier by starting to ripen two weeks ahead of the two-stemmed plants. The three-stemmed plants were still later by over a week, and neither the two nor the three-stemmed plants yielded as large fruit or as many as two or three single stems did in the same house at the same time. Several different varieties were used in the experiment.

This training question is always before the growers, because there are always beginners who want to know just which is the best method.

Most growers plant their tomatoes out one row to a bench, with the plants about a foot apart in the row. Some varieties require a trifle more room, on account of large and heavy foliage. Benches six or seven feet wide will accommodate two rows of plants.

Methods of Wiring.

The plants may be trained up a string by stretching a wire above the row and another along on top of the soil, and tying twine (four-ply jute is best) from the upper wire to the lower one, for each plant, as in stringing smilax. The plants will grow about six feet tall. Another good way is to stretch several wires one above the other, a foot apart, like a fence, tying each plant to each wire as soon as up to it. This method is becoming more popular.

Some growers practice topping the plants when they have set five clusters. This sends the strength to the fruit already set and matures it more quickly, and at the same time it will branch out freely and one of these upper branches can be taken on up as the main stalk and set several more clusters.

It is important that the little shoots or branches be removed when very small. It will also be necessary to trim the points off some of the leaves where they lap over leaves on the next plant, but trimming the leaves too hard will cause smaller fruit. H. G.

State of Trade.

Business opened up well for the month of February, weather conditions being ideal. The demand has been abnormal, due largely to social functions and many large weddings. The greatest demand has been for carnations, violets, sweet peas and daffodils being generally equal to the demand even if only in moderate supply. The increased demand for flowers has stiffened the prices considerably.

Various Notes.

At the annual meeting of the local florists, which occurred Wednesday evening, January 27, at the salesroom of S. N. Peck, on Summit street, much interest was shown in the new carnations which several eastern and western representative firms had on exhibition. S. N. Peck showed a fine Philadelphia lace fern.

During the Reinhart exhibit, at the Museum of Art, Mrs. E. Suder furnished the decorations, while Miss Helen Patten furnished the sixteen corsage bouquets.

MARYVILLE, MO.

Everything points to a good spring trade here, and January has been even ahead of December in volume of business.

The severe storm experienced here January 28 and 29, blowing from fifty to sixty miles an hour, and even worse at other points in Missouri, ranks as one of the longest in duration here, and must have been very destructive to some in the trade.

Alfred Engelmann, however, is glad to report a damage of only about $1.50, caused by about one dozen panes of glass being broken and cracked in his establishment of 10,000 feet of glass.

P. Mergen was not so fortunate. He lost a valuable plate glass window in the front of his store and had five rows of glass taken out of the center of his rose house. The wind crushed in through the north side and then took out the glass on the south side as well, thus cutting right through the house and putting it out of commission. A. E.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive aud most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The annual dinner of the Nassau County Horticultural Society drew an enthusiastic attendance January 27. Over fifty were present, including many New Yorkers and representatives from Westbury, Roslyn, Locust Valley, Floral Park, Huntington, Great Neck and Oyster Bay. President Roosevelt is a member, but was unable to attend. The festivities lasted three hours and were full of interest to the close. The first prize, a magnificent silver cup given by Rickards Bros., New York, for the best average exhibits of the year, went to Henry F. Meyer, of Glen Cove, and V. Cleres won the silver medal donated by ex-President Adolph Jaenecke. Mr. Jaenecke, on retiring from the office of president, was presented by the members with a beautiful pearl and diamond pin. The retiring secretary received a fine fountain pen in recognition of his faithful work. The new officers are: President, Jack W. Everett; vice-president, James Elmsie; recording secretary, Henry Gaut; corresponding secretary, William McKenzie; treasurer, Ernest Brown. The society is only four years old and already has a membership of 150, nearly fifty having been added in 1908.

There were speeches, songs, story-telling, dancing, violin and piano solos, recitations, etc., in abundance. The program was a splendid one throughout. J. A. Shaw, of New York, was toastmaster and kept the artists busy. The talent included the Rickards brothers, the Messrs. Davis, of the Glen Cove Echo, and the editor of the Examiner in congratulatory addresses; Andrew Wilson, of Summit, in song, dance and story; Scotch and other songs by Charles Russell and William Armstrong; addresses by Mr. Maynard, on "Society Organization"; W. J. Sperling, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., on "The Ladies"; George Burnett, on "Seeds"; Al Rickards, on "The Commercial Traveler"; violin solos by Robert Angus, of Tarrytown; an original poem by Oscar Adore, and interesting talks by Olof Blomburg, of Franklin, Pa., Alex. McKenzie, Jack Everett and Adolph Jaenecke, the latter announcing a scheme whereby the society may have its own home in which to celebrate at the annual dinner of 1910.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

The scarcity of cut flowers and the great demand for them during last week caused a big jump in prices at retail. On Friday, in addition to the accelerated demand for carnations, apropos of Carnation day or McKinley day, the public schools of this city held their semiannual graduation exercises in the grammar grades, and many baskets and bouquets were used for the occasion. There are sixteen grammar schools which sent out a class, the aggregate number of graduates being 600, and as the number of floral pieces would average at least one for every second scholar, the florists were kept pretty busy. The prices received for bouquets ranged from $3 to $5, while baskets brought from $5 to $10. Carnations the same day retailed at 10 cents, 15 cents and 20 cents apiece, and even 25 cents for extra fine stock. The price per dozen was from $1 to $2.25.

Various Notes.

A visit to William Hay's range last week found his new rose house, 45x85, in excellent condition. This is planted to Killarney, Richmond, Bride and Bridesmaid roses, and his daily cuttings are astonishing. The flowers are among the best and find ready sale at good prices.

Mr. Green, representing Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, was in the city last week.

M. J. Leach had nearly a dozen large pieces for the big masonic funeral of George E. Whipple, at Pawtucket, Saturday.

The State Board of Agriculture is holding demonstrations on spraying for San Jose scale in different parts of the state. These demonstrations are being largely attended by the farm owners.

Rooted Carnation Cuttings of Quality

We grow Carnations primarily for cut flowers. We grow them cool, 48° to 50° nights, 56° to 60° day temperature, with air on at all times, except the very coldest nights. Plenty of fresh air and cool houses gives us fewer, but larger, better colored flowers on strong stems. We feed our plants but sparingly The varieties do not "run out" with us, as you see them on so many places, but are now better than they were the first year or two after their introduction. As our plants are never forced by high temperature or high feeding, our rooted cuttings are naturally stronger, and worth more to the man that grows Carnations for the cut flowers, than cuttings taken from plants grown in a high temperature or unduly forced by high feeding.

We have the following varieties to offer:

	Per 100		Per 100
Enchantress	$2.50	Sarah Hill	$6 00
Rose-pink Enchantress	2.50	Pres. Seelye	6.00
Winsor	2 50	Afterglow	6 00
Victory	2.50	Lawson-Enchantress	6.00
White Perfection	3.50	Winona	6.00
White Enchantress	4.00

Any of the above are 50c per 100 more out of 2-in. pots.

WASHINGTON.

State of Trade.

Stock is not overplentiful; there was a scarcity of pink roses the latter part of last week, and a good deal of out-of-town stock was shipped in, especially carnations. McKinley day was well observed and all stores report a good carnation trade. It no doubt would have been much better had it not rained all day. Most of the windows displayed portraits of McKinley, with carnation decorations. One F street firm found several customers waiting in the rain for the store to open to get their McKinley carnations.

Tulips are arriving in quantity. There are plenty of azaleas, but they are not much in demand.

Various Notes.

J. H. Small & Son have a large vase of fine forsythia in the window.

Thomas & Sly, of the Center market, had an all white dinner for Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, using Harrisii and white lilac on the table and white flowers throughout the house. They also had several good sized weddings on last week.

Gude Bros. Co. had the Fairbanks dinner. The table was done in Bridesmaid roses and white lilac. They also had the Berliner-Wasseman wedding at the New Willard. The rooms were banked with palms and blooming plants. The breakfast table was done in pink azaleas, Enchanter roses and white lilac.

J. H. Small & Son had the Gridiron Club banquet at the New Willard, January 30. The gridiron-shaped tables were done in carnations, roses and spring flowers.

Vernon Ley has closed his Fourteenth street store.

Chas. Norton has closed his store on Mt. Pleasant avenue. He is contemplating going into the wholesale business exclusively.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club will be held in the Eagles' hall this week. At this meeting nominations for officers will be made, to be elected at the March meeting.

Bowling.

This was bowlers' week. The Florists' Club is in third place in the city tournament, Class B, bowling 2,568 pins in three games. The Department of Agriculture team, in Class A, bowled 2,575 in three games. The last score of the florists was:

Player.	1st	2d	3d
Cooke	178	180	120
Shaffer	222	178	145
Hamner	184	159	171
Goodman	176	183	163
McLennon	176	180	153
Totals	936	880	752

In the doubles, Shaffer and Mr. Hamner get fourth prize. O. O.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal: closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Immediate delivery.

CHAS. KNOPF FLORAL CO., Richmond, Ind., and S. J. REUTER & SON, Inc., Westerly, R. I.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50 00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

ERIE, PA.

Current Comment.

McKinley's birthday was observed here January 29. There was a large demand for carnations in all colors. The florists had their windows decorated appropriately. Baur's had the martyred president's picture framed in a wreath of magnolia, with Lawson carnations and Sprengeri ferns in vases. Offerle & Schaal had the American flag twined around McKinley's picture. J. V. Laver had pink and red carnations, with an appropriate inscription on a card.

Business has been brisk, with several parties and two large funerals this week.

A friend of the institution remembered the Erie Academy with a large box of Lawson carnations January 29, so each student could wear one in honor of the day.

California violets are much in vogue here at present and the quality is good.

W. J. Beautus, representing the Dayton Paper Novelty Co.; S. T. Pletcher, representing S. A. Weller, Zanesville, O., and Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., were in the city on business last week.

Arthur Nyberg, who defrauded Vern L. Schluraff while managing the latter's store in Conneaut, O., has been captured in San Diego, Cal. He was formerly a resident of Erie and had been employed by Mr. Schluraff since his childhood, at first as errand boy, then as a trusted employee in Mr. Schluraff's local store, and at last he was given charge of the Conneaut store. It was while thus employed that Nyberg is said to have passed fraudulent checks, victimizing Mr. Schluraff and several Conneaut merchants to the extent of $500. Chief of Police Tinney, of Conneaut, laid a trap for him, which he evidently walked into without suspecting the result. B. P.

Jess Frost has resigned his position as assistant foreman for the Baur Floral Co. and in the near future will erect a house 20x100 to start for himself. Mr. Frost has many friends in Rochester, N. Y., his former home, as well as in Erie, who will wish him success.

Albion, Mich.—M. & S. L. Dysinger say 1908 was the best year in the history of their business. Their downtown store has proved a success.

I feel that I cannot get along and be up to date without the Review.—W. H. H. Riddle, Butler, Pa.

LEXINGTON, KY.

The Market.

On account of so much unseasonable weather there has been a great deal of sickness and many deaths. The florists, therefore, have been busy. Outside of funeral work, however, business has been as usual for this time of the year. Almost everything in white flowers has been used. Some beautiful funeral work was turned out for the Rev. Father James P. Barry.

Roses and carnations are of fairly good quality. Bulbous stock is in good supply and demand. Green goods are in fairly good demand. Potted plants, also, are selling fairly well.

Various Notes.

Honaker The Florist had a beautiful window calling attention to Carnation day, in the way of a large picture of President McKinley, draped in black streamers and bordered by wreaths of red. The window called forth much favorable comment.

Miss Lyle, designer and saleslady for William Bell, has been out of town on a business trip.

S. S. Kelley is cutting carnations of good quality.

James P. Keller continues to be busy with funeral work.

August Leclere has been busy pruning trees on the grounds at the asylum.

BLUE GRASS.

MOSCOW, IDAHO.

J. L. Bourn is doing a good business, both wholesale and retail, from his greenhouses, which are located right in the city. He started three years ago and has kept adding to his place until he now has over 10,000 feet of glass, devoted to growing cut flowers and lettuce, as well as potted plants, bedding plants and forcing bulbs.

Mr. Bourn finds a good market in his own city, which has a population of 6,000 and is the site of the State University. The surrounding country also gives him a good market for his produce.

JACKSON, MO.—Arthur Braun, of the Braun Bros. Maple Lawn Fruit Farm, was married January 22, at Mount Carmel, Ill., to Miss Emma Baumgardt, of that place. Mr. Braun left here Sunday, January 17, ostensibly for a trip into the Ozark fruit region in search of apple trees.
